Italians Flee; Set Base in Albania Afire

WARSHIPS SHELL DUCE'S MEN AS THEY FALL BACK

Athens Hurls All Its Might Into Battle.

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 17—Sunday (AP).—Italian troops fleeing in southern Albania before the advance of the Greeks have set on fire their base town of Koritza, the Greek high command reported today.

The announcement was made shortly after a government spokesman reported the recapture by the Greeks of the town of Konitza, in the central Pindus mountain region.

The Italians have set fire to other villages in their retreat, the high command said, but did not name the towns.

Fight All Along Front.

A series of battles was fought, the high command said, "over the entire front and particularly, in the mountainous regions east of Koritza" thruout the day.

"Many prisoners were taken by us and guns, howitzers, and material of all descriptions were captured," the communique added.

[An Associated Press dispatch from Bitolj, Jugo-Slavia last night said civilians reportedly were withdrawing from Koritza, but that there was no indication that Italian troops had as yet been forced out. The Italians were said to have slowed the Greek advance with a counterattack.]

The general offensive, Greek sources said, was driving the Italians back along the entire front from the Jugo-Slav border to the Ionian sea.

The recapture of Konitza meant the reoccupation of one of the last salients still held by the Italians in Greek territory. There were also reports that Greek troops had taken the village of Morava, about three miles from Koritza.

Navy Shells Italians.

Along the coast the Greek navy was reported shelling the retreating Fascists behind their lines.

Every weapon in the Greek armory—bayoneted rifles, machine guns, artillery, bombing planes, and warships—was thrown into the struggle in the hope that the war was approaching a decision.

The official radio announced to the country:

"The enemy has been dislodged from all positions. The organized defense can hardly withstand the Greek attacks for more than a few hours!"

Press Steady Advance.

The heaviest of the day's action was in the northern sector, where there was violent artillery duelling and air fighting.

The Italians were reported to have rushed reënforcements to that region but to have failed nevertheless to halt the slow encirclement of Koritza by Greek forces completing the operation from the northeast.

In the center of the front the Greeks, operating from a high, cold line on the Grammos mountains, claimed to be pressing a steady advance toward Liaskoviki, Albania.

They said the Italians were retreating in the Kalamas district and had hastily recrossed the river of that name. Almost everywhere, according to Greek accounts, the major action was on Albanian territory.

Claim British Warships Sunk.

ROME, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Fascist newspaper, Il Giornale d'Italia, said today an Italian submarine, operating in the Atlantic, had sunk one of the 50 destroyers acquired by Britain from the United States, while another submarine had sunk a British battleship of the 29,000 ton Ramillies type.

The high command said Friday a British warship of the Ramillies class had been hit by three torpedoes, but did not claim the ship had been sunk. Its communique today mentioned the sinking of "an enemy destroyer" in the Atlantic.

The high command said artillery and infantry action took place on both sides in Greece yesterday, and added that the Italians had bombed highways and troop concentrations, as well as the Larissa airport and the Greek naval base of Navarino.

Mass British air attacks on the Italian Adriatic port of Brindisi, across the strait from Albania, were admitted by the high command.

TWO AMERICAS LINKED BY AIR IN 6 HRS. 35 MIN.

Survey Plane Hops Gulf to Belize.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELIZE, British Honduras, Nov. 16.—With a 25 mile an hour north wind pushing it along, the American Export airlines survey plane Trans-Atlantic today completed in record time the first leg of a new short-cut route from New Orleans to Panama. The twin-motored flying boat landed at a roadstead off Belize after a flight of 6 hours and 35 minutes, having covered the 950 miles at a rate of 135.8 miles an hour.

The flight was a continuation of Export's duel with Pan American airways for rights as an American overseas air transport company. Temporarily balked in the North Atlantic, where it has the authority but no governmental funds to fly mail and passengers from New York to the Mediterranean, Export has turned to the Canal Zone and Central America to show its service and get into business.

Route Crosses Gulf.

The flight was made both to obtain information concerning the weather over the Gulf of Mexico—the proposed route cuts directly across the gulf to the Yucatan peninsula and then to Cristobal, Canal Zone—and to set up a record for the federal aeronautics bureau, before which its application to open the service is pending.

Pan American had been promising New Orleans officials and Central American diplomatic representatives for five years that it would open such a route. American Export airlines stepped in and, on three weeks' notice, both filed for a route and dispatched its flying boat to show its proposal was feasible.

Today's flight, on which the writer was the ninth of the crew, was made under difficult conditions but in comfort and safety. On four previous days the takeoff had been balked by the high waves in Lake Ponchartrain, in which the Trans Atlantic was anchored. This morning the water was calmer. After a box of sandwiches and a bottle of coffee had been taken aboard, Co-Captain Richard Mitchell opened the throttles and the ship surged into the air.

Cruises at 7,000 Feet.

It banked due south, slid low over a score of Export technicians waving on the ground, and began to climb to 7,000 feet, the cruising altitude. We were in the air at 7 o'clock Chicago time. For 35 minutes there was a steady climb, then Mitchell leveled the ship and reduced the power to the long range cruising ration, taking 420 horse power each from two motors developing 2,200 horse power at the takeoff. A tail wind gave the plane a ground speed of 143 miles an hour. The ship had 30,500 pounds gross weight, of which 10,000 pounds were gasoline.

The Trans-Atlantic had passed the mouth of the Mississippi river, sprawling amid a thousand lakes, swamps, and streams as it emptied into the gulf, before our climb ended. Ahead were the deep blue of the sea, the brilliant blue of the sky. Soon

4½ MILLION MEN NOW REGISTERED FOR DUTY IN ARMY OF BRITAIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Britain's army continues to grow to impressive proportions with the registration to date of approximately 4,500,000 men. A further batch of about 150,000, constituting the balance of the 1905 class, registered today. There remain to be signed up the 1904 class and part of the 1903 class, and when these are registered, it is estimated, the total will be approximately 5,000,000.

Many in the 1905 class already signed up are at present in reserve units, and some of those registered today will have the opportunity of volunteering for service as auxiliary firemen. This is a most important department in view of the consequences of the aerial bombardments.

Navy Decides It Will Take 17 Year Olds

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—The navy department today announced that the naval enlistment age had been lowered from 18 to 17 in order to encourage enlistments which have fallen off since the passage of the national selective service act.

The navy also lowered the initial term of enlistment for the new men it hopes to get. For 17 year old recruits the first term of service will be four years instead of the customary six.

Parents Must Consent.

Enlistment of 17 year olds will be accepted only with consent of their parents or guardians. Such consent has been required in the past of volunteers under the age of 21. The 17 year olds will serve until their 21st birthday, when they can elect to reenlist for a six year term.

The navy department announced that the step was taken in order to encourage "enlistments of younger men particularly those of high school calibre."

Privately officers said that the step was necessitated by the fact that enlistments have slumped badly under the draft. Young men have chosen to wait until they may be drafted for a year's service in the army to enlisting for six years in the navy.

The Army's Solution.

The army met the same problem by allowing young men to enlist for a year's service rather than to await the draft. This will enable the army to produce a better showing on volunteering.

However, the situation has not been acute in the army because its term of enlistment is but three years. Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson reported that enlistments have increased since the draft but has made no figures public.

If the navy enlistment slump continues, officers said, the navy will have to meet the problem by lowering its term of enlistment to attract more men to its ranks or even by drafting men into the service.

CHICAGO GETS ORDER.

Orders reducing the enlistment age limit for the navy from 18 to 17 were received yesterday at the Chicago navy recruiting office. Significance was attached to the order in view of a slump in recruiting in this area.

The Chicago office's enlistment quota for November is 600. So far 350 have been enlisted, which means there are still openings for 250 men. Only 83 were enlisted last week, tho the quota for the week was 103. Former weekly enlistments have ranged from 130 to 150 men.

The Chicago station has nine substations—in Aurora, Peoria, Rock Island, and Rockford, Ill.; South Bend, Ind., and La Crosse, Oshkosh, Green Bay, and Milwaukee, Wis.

BRITISH BUILD 84 NEW MERCHANT SHIPS EVEN AMID RAIDS ON PORTS

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Despite constant air bombings on her seaports, England completed 84 new merchant ships, most of them fast freighters, during the first nine months of 1940, a suurvey of British shipbuilding showed today. During the same period the United States launched approximately 33 vessels.

England's new ships, built and launched under extreme hazards, aggregated 426,551 gross tons. At the same time, naval sources said, England completed many of the 100 destroyers and light cruisers and 20 escort and scouting vessels she had under way when the war began.

The new merchant ships included 78 freighters averaging between 5,000 to 8,000 tons; four tankers, and two passenger vessels. One British port alone produced 22 vessels and had almost a score on the ways. Sir William Isherwood said recently on arrival here that "we are building ships like you people build autos—with assembly line methods."

A Tailor Takes a $35 Tuck in Loot of Three Bandits

B. C. Lehman had his hand on a roll of $45 in his pocket when three robbers entered his tailor shop at 3320 Lake street yesterday. He brought $35 out while complying with an order to turn and face the wall, and tucked the money in the waistband of his trousers. The bandits got the other $10 and $150 in the cash register. Five other employes were forced to lie on the floor.

Berlin to Install Bunks and Stoves in Shelters

BERLIN, Nov. 16 (AP).—Berlin cellar and air raid shelter sitting will be made more comfortable this winter. Army bunks and stoves will be installed in all safety basements.

'Friday Night Gang' Admits 250 Holdups

The five members of the "Friday night gang," so named because they committed their holdups on Friday nights, were under arrest last night in the detective bureau.

Walter Storms, acting chief of detectives, said they confessed at least 250 tavern robberies in Chicago and suburbs in the last two years. He estimated their loot exceeded $50,000.

In their car and in homes of gang members police seized 10 revolvers, eight shotguns, two suitcases filled with ammunition, a portable radio turned for police broadcasts, and a United States deputy marshal's badge which had been seized in a holdup.

Raids Made Once a Week.

The bandits said they limited their robberies to one night a week to decrease the risk of capture. They said they chose Friday nights because Friday is a common pay day and taverns are filled with spenders.

Having picked out a crowded tavern, one of the gang remained in their car while the others, armed with sawed off shotguns and revolvers, went inside. Patrons were lined against the bar.

Victims were searched for cash or jewelry. In several instances women were robbed of valuable fur coats. Police said the gang was known for its terrorism and that the members abused and mistreated their victims.

Gang Members Under Arrest.

Gang members under arrest are Joseph Nadvornick, 28 years old, 2424 South Troy street; Stanley Kavalouskas, 26, of 2101 Millard avenue; Paul Bellingire, 31, of 1322 South Spaulding avenue; Joseph Kodadek, 25, of 2360 South Sacramento boulevard, and Albert Vickers, 31, of 3563 Ogden avenue.

Acting Chief Storms credited the gang's capture in part to Sergt. Timothy O'Connor and Policemen Joseph Logsdon and Emil Sedlack, who were assigned to the case several months ago. Sergts. Walter Paradowski and Con Czernikowski also aided in the roundup.

Police traced the gang to the Lawndale district, where Kavalouskas was seized at noon yesterday when he attempted to drive off in a car which police had been watching. The others were captured in an automobile at 79th street and Newland avenue.

RENOVATE STATE MANSION FOR ITS NEW FIRST LADY

BY MARCIA WINN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 16 [Special].—By the time Mrs. Dwight H. Green comes here in January as the first lady of Illinois, the executive mansion, of which she will be mistress, should be presentable.

This is on the authority of Mrs. John Stelle, who found the commodious old white brick mansion a bachelor's shambles when she moved into it six weeks ago as temporary mistress. It was shabby, drab and dingy, its upholstery threadbare and worn, its high ceilinged gracious old rooms littered with standing brass ash trays. It looked like what it had been for the last eight years, bachelor's headquarters. It had architectural beauty—the dignified beauty of its 83 years—but its attractiveness was tarnished by lack of care. Its charm was that of a wistful child with a dirty face.

Draperies in Attic.

Venetian blinds hung at every window, but the windows were devoid of draperies or curtains. A week's search found the draperies in the attic, magnificent brocades which, even if old and fringed in the high fashion of 20 years ago, still were in good condition and in tune with the ornate formality of the state chambers. All have been cleaned and now are back in place with monk's cloth glass curtains.

Many of the chairs, with their worn and stained upholstery, and the couches which hung in ribbons, have been renovated or replaced. And the mansion is being repainted as the white paint on its exterior was peeling away in patches.

"The place isn't like I would like it myself," Mrs. Stelle commented amiably but sadly as she led a visitor thru. "This is a big place, and things wear out, but there is no reason it should not be clean and livable. I'm just making it presentable."

Viewed at Worst Season.

To be appreciated properly, the mansion should be seen at any time other than winter, when the shade trees that surround it are leafless and its shrubbery lies in straggling brown patches on the great knoll which the mansion tops. It never looks stately, but rather creates an impression of pleasant spaciousness and warmth.

A huge, square structure of white brick and stone, it rises two stories above a high basement to a shingled hip roof, encompassed by a balustrade. Curving stone steps lead up to the wide front veranda and the beautiful bay door of the state entrance, but during Gov. Henry Horner's régime, this rarely was used. Visitors entered by the ground or basement door beneath the porte-cochère of the winding driveway.

The ground floor houses the executive offices, a reception hall [currently furnished with dejected chromium and white leather chairs and settees, six brass ash trays and two floor lamps], a poolroom, a pressroom and the mansion laundry.

State Floor Is Above.

An ivory stairway with mahogany newel posts leads to the first, or state, floor. Here two formal parlors open off the formal reception hall, quaint and ornate in deep red carpeting, Jacobean chairs and scrolled ivory woodwork. Both parlors have soft green walls and woodwork, now dingy; deep rose-orchid draperies and immense square mirrors above each fireplace.

In one, the furnishings are formal love seats upholstered in burgundy Italian damask, marble tables, alabaster and cut glass lamps. In the other, capacious couches covered in green silk, Duncan Phyfe tea tables, a lovely antique jardieniere and mod-

'LITTLE BLACK BOOK' IN HANDS OF FBI AGENTS

Sets Forth Sums and Persons Involved.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 16.—The federal bureau of investigation has the "little black book" of the late F. Lynden Smith, former Illinois Democratic campaign manager and director of public works, whose body was found in a bathtub of a Springfield hospital last March.

Howard Doyle, U. S. prosecutor.

The whereabouts of this much publicized book—Smith's private record of his slush fund collections and disbursements—became known today for the first time since the mysterious death of its owner. Whether this record is being perused by a federal grand jury in session here is not known.

The government agents are reported to have been disappointed in the contents of the book. By itself, it does not constitute effectual evidence.

In Woman's Writing.

It is an ordinary, small office ledger. The entries, in a feminine handwriting, are simply the names of campaign contributors and the amounts of their contribution, together with the names of recipients of specified sums from the Democratic kitty.

The federal grand jury is investigating alleged expenditures by certain public utility companies designed to influence rates and regulations. For example, the prosecutors are known to have inquired about United States Senator James M. Slattery's original explanation of a deal in public utility stock with $25,000 cash from his strong box. The government's interest is confined mainly to violations of federal statutes.

A. H. Greening, the Republican who will become state's attorney of Sangamon county on Dec. 1, announced this afternoon that he will request the government to give him the "little black book" when the federal inquiry is completed.

State Violations Sought.

Greening would be interested in evidence of violations of state statutes, such as shakedowns or donations from contractors and others doing business with the state—the contributions influencing prices paid by the state.

Greening said he will direct his request to O. John Rogge, head of the criminal division of the United States attorney general's office.

"I always desire to coöperate with state authorities," Rogge said in an interview at Washington, D. C. "If there is any evidence that doesn't constitute a violation of federal statutes, but does constitute a violation of state statutes, I shall be happy, wherever possible, to make such evidence available to the state authorities."

Howard Doyle, United States attorney for southern Illinois, in response to questions, said Judge Charles G. Briggle's recent secrecy order barred him from replying as to whether the grand jury here has seen the "little black book."

Ready to Coöperate.

However, like Rogge, with whom he has been working on the utility investigation, Doyle indicated he will coöperate with Greening.

In a legislative inquiry of statehouse corruption earlier this year, a committee headed by Representative Clinton Searle [R., Rock Island] sought in vain to locate the "little black book." Lyn Smith, during his estrangement from the statehouse machine before his unexplained death, had described this record as his protection against being framed by political enemies.

The legislative committee subpenaed Smith's confidential secretary, Mrs. Margie Metz Spengler. Under oath she replied "I don't know" to a lengthy questioning, even denying knowledge of the existence of the book. Thereafter, altho her home was in Livingston county, she received a Nash-Kelly patronage job in the office of the subway and superhighway commissioner, Philip Harrington.

Nazi Raiders Leave Coventry in Smoking Ruins

[Associated Press Wirephoto: Cabled from London yesterday.]

Wreckage of a street in the English manufacturing town of Coventry after 10¼ hour air raid. An official estimate set the number of dead at 200 and the wounded at 800. The Germans asserted that their 500 planes used in the attack dropped 30,000 incendiary bombs and 1,000,000 pounds of explosives.

HIP! HIP! HOORAY! THAT'S COVENTRY CHEERING KING

Devastated City Puts On a Brave Show.

COVENTRY, England, Nov. 16 (AP). —Stricken Coventry put on a brave, impromptu show today for the king.

George VI. motored up to this devastated industrial city to inspect the result of the most concentrated bombing Britain thus far has undergone.

Cheers greeted him and officials turned out the town hall's best silver and crystal for the monarch's luncheon. He brought words of sympathy, cheer, and assurance of support for the stricken town.

By official estimate 200 persons were killed and 800 injured between Thursday sunset and Friday dawn by 500 Nazi planes.

A Surprise Visit.

But the populace made a show of spirit when the king's car, quite by surprise, threaded its way thru the littered streets and pulled up before town hall.

Then a cheer: "Hip, hip, hooray!"

The king smiled. Saluting, he made his way thru the throng as a red faced policeman yelled:

"Are we down-hearted?"

"No," the crowd roared.

"Will we knock Hitler's block off?"

"Yes."

The royal visitor conferred with local and government officials organizing emergency relief and then toured the devastated area. He stood on a heap of smoking rubble where Coventry cathedral had stood and spoke gravely to the provost of Coventry, the very Rev. R. T. Howard, who told him of the futile attempt to save the 14th century structure from showers of explosive and fire bombs.

Many Bodies in Ruins.

Smoke still hung over the city. Most of Coventry's casualties had been moved to nearby towns, but the police said many bodies still were in the ruins.

Mayor J. A. Moseley said the whole country was rallying to the aid of Coventry. The lord mayor of London sent £10,000 [$40,000] for relief work.

"We are hit," the mayor said, "but we never will be licked."

AIR FORCE GETS A NEW LEADER IN JUGO-SLAVIA

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Nov. 16. —New commanders were appointed today for the air force and the second and fifth armies, facing Albania and Bulgaria, as well as the sixth army, guarding the Adriatic coast.

Military circles here foresee a general army shakeup growing out of the bombardments by unidentified planes of Bitolj, the change in the war ministry, and the continued state of uneasiness inspired by frontier violations in the south and the reports of German troop movements in Rumania and Bulgaria.

Gen. Dusan Simotich, formerly commander of the second army, was named supreme commander of the air force. Gen. Simotich, a world war flyer, is the former air chief and chief of general staff who was relieved of that post in October, 1938, after a difference with Gen. Milan Neditch, who recently resigned as war minister. Air circles here predicted an immediate strengthening of Jugo-Slav air defense against repeated frontier violations such as last night's severe bombing of Bitolj.

BRITISH TRADE MISSION IS DUE IN RIO TODAY

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 16. —Headed by the marquess of Willingdon, former viceroy of India, a British economic mission of fifteen is scheduled to arrive here tomorrow. The mission also will visit most South American countries, Mexico, and the United States.

The mission is believed to be seeking good will in the Americas, trade agreements with countries where such agreements do not exist, and formulas to solve problems created by the blockade which impairs South American exports.

It is thought the mission may try to arrange special credits in South America, possibly guaranteed by holdings of British investors, or to purchase products by some triangular scheme, the United States entering into the deal as guarantor.

Britain Slices Fine of Man Who Took Bomb from Flat

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Frederick George Leighton-Morris, who last week carried a 110 pound time bomb from an apartment and was fined 100 pounds [about $400] because he disregarded police orders, had the penalty reductd today. Home Secretary Herbert Morrison said he had cut the fine to 5 pounds [about $20]. Leighton-Morris, a former Guards officer, who had been told by doctors that he had only four years to live, had a busy week opening fan mail and dodging back slapping admirers and sympathizers, many of whom had offered to pay his fine.

CANADIAN SHIP AMONG VICTIMS OF NAZI RAIDER

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Shipping circles said today the 10,042 ton Canadian Pacific railway freighter Beaverford was one of the ships sunk by a Nazi raider in a foray against a British convoy of 38 ships Nov. 5. They said the 12 year old Beaverford radioed that she was being "shelled" at a position between Newfoundland and Ireland. Germany claimed the destruction of 15 to 20 ships aggregating 86,000 tons. Britain said all but four ships escaped. The Beaverford was not among the ships England listed as having escaped.

Britain Honors Ship Captain.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 16—The late Capt. E. S. Fogarty Fegen, who went down with his ship, the Jervis Bay, while defending an Atlantic convoy from a German raider on Nov. 5, has been awarded the Victoria Cross, Britain's greatest war honor.

GREEKS' ENTHUSIASM FOR BRITISH IS HIGH; LIKE AMERICANS, TOO

BY SAM BREWER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 16.—The Greeks' enthusiasm for their British allies in the war against Italy is running high, an attitude which is not general thruout most of the Balkans at this time. The sight of a British uniform produces friendly smiles anywhere and Americans seem to be included in this general friendliness, because of a belief that if they are not yet allies in fact, they are very nearly so.

The Greeks lay great stress upon the morale of their troops. Newspapers daily publish columns of extracts from soldiers' letters, which emphasize feats of bravery at the front and the high spirits of the troops.

FRENCH REGRET U. S. AMBASSADOR IS NOT AT VICHY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VICHY, France, Nov. 16.—The Petain government regrets that the United States does not have an ambassador in Vichy at a time when diplomatic questions arise frequently, it was disclosed today.

The government, it was suggested, would appreciate a frank and complete discussion with the United States of the problems concerning French colonies in both the Caribbean and Pacific.

The American ambassador, William C. Bullitt, has been in the United States for some time now.

PREDICTS AXIS AFRICAN BLOW TO STOP DE GAULLE

Will Strike if French Fail, Says Duce's Paper.

ROME, Nov. 16 (AP).—Axis intervention in French Equatorial Africa was predicted by Premier Benito Mussolini's newspaper Il Popolo d'Italia today unless the Vichy government defeats the "free" French forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. De Gaulle's men are seeking to cut a west-to-east route from Gabon to the Egyptian Sudan.

Gen. Maxime Weygand.

The newspaper's commentator, Mario Appelius, said the French government has the necessary authorization from Germany and Italy to proceed against hte de Gaulle forces, and added:

"That does not exclude the possibility of direct intervention by the axis.

"Berlin and Rome, which are following English activity closely in every other sector at this time, have already studied the problem and taken the necessary steps, which will be revealed in all their grandeur and power at the right moment."

U. S. Stand Assailed

Virginio Gayda, editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, declared the United States was not neutral even before the war opened and asserted it would one day see "if its blind evaluations" of the European situation and aid to Britain had not caused "political and economic damage" to itself.

Rumania's premier, Ion Antonescu, after a private audience with Pope Pius XII., left for Bucharest with Prince Costin Sturza, Rumanian minister of foreign affairs.

Premier Mussolini and Count Galeazzo, foreign minister, said good-by to them at the railway station. Rumania, said Antonescu, will "go with the axis to the end."

Snag for Axis Plans Seen

BERNE, Switzerland, Nov. 16 (AP).—The undercurrents of power politics in Europe, it appeared tonight, are sweeping toward a showdown in French Africa, with tight-lipped Gen. Maxime Weygand in the key position.

If Germany and Italy should intervene, in the opinion of persons well acquainted with Gen. Weygand, all will not be smooth for them.

Weygand was sent to Africa by the Vichy government to hold the empire against the de Gaullists. Known as an "attack general," he is neither pro-British nor pro-German but purely pro-French, they say.

These friends say the general feels that Vice Premier Pierre Laval's policy has played too much into German hands.

Huge Area Is Stake

After the armistice Weygand's consuming desire was to reach North Africa, these sources say, and he was reported to have remarked that North Africa "may save France." He was made military and political chieftain there.

The stake in this play is an area of nearly 10,000,000 square miles with 37,000,000 inhabitants. It includes not only French Africa but also Syria, at the eastern end of the Mediterranean, which also looms large in axis and British strategy.

A Beirut dispatch quoted well-informed circles to the effect that de-Gaullists were working in Syria to sway opinion toward a revolt under the leadership of Weygand and Gen. Auguste Nogues, resident general and commander in French Morocco.

HITLER PRAISES JAPAN AS AXIS WAR HEADS TALK

Tells Tokio War's Goal Will Be Reached.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—While Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Italian chief of staff, and Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel continued their military discussions in Innsbruck, Austria, Adolf Hitler sent a message of friendship to Tokio on the 2600th anniversary of the Japanese dynasty.

Hitler assured the Japanese he was convinced that, like Italy and Germany, Japan would "reach the goal set for it by fate—a successful place in a well protected living space.

Calls Japan East's Leader.

He paid tribute to Japan as the "leading power of the far east, which has the right to shape the new order for a better and more just world, together with the leading powers of the continent."

In the meantime Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish foreign minister, is expected in Germany to confer with Hitler. A number of diplomats believe that Italy's foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, also will come to Germany to participate in the conversations with Suner.

Official quarters denied rumors that Jugo-Slavia has been asked by the axis powers for permission to slip troops into Greece in sealed trains.

See Axis Hampered.

BERLIN, Nov. 16 (AP).—Neutral observers, without pretending to know what actually is planned, commented today that Italy's far-from-blitzkrieg campaign in Greece, coupled with recent British claims of successes in the Mediterranean, may react against axis prestige.

Thus is seen the importance of the Friday meeting at Innsbruck between the Italian and German chiefs of high command, and of Adolf Hitler's discussions with Russian Premier Vyacheslav Molotov.

The war chiefs had several possible military courses to ponder—an attempt to smash Britain by direct, frontal attack, which naval students scoff at but which the air-minded say is possible; seizure of Gibraltar thru an arrangement with Spain: a blow both at the Suez and Gibraltar in an attempt to cut Britain from her colonies and trap her beet in the Mediterranean.

NAZIS SCUTTLE 1 OF 4 FREIGHTERS FLEEING MEXICO

Hint Former U.S. Warship Forced Others Back.

TAMPICO, Mexico, Nov. 16 (AP).—Capt. H. Fromke of the German cargo ship Idarwald, said tonight that one of four warships which blocked his attempted escape to sea last night and caused the scuttling of another German ship, the Phrygia, "very likely" was one of the 50 destroyers "transferred by the United States to Great Britain."

The Phrygia exploded and sank off the coast here today after the captain ordered the crew to "open her and set her aflame" rather than obey an order flashed from the accosting warships demanding her surrender. She was one of four Nazi vessels that made a dash for the open sea.

The identity of the warships still had not been fixed here late tonight.

Another captain said he saw the lights of a battleship in the distance, directing the destroyers' pursuit of the Germans.

Tells of Flight.

Telling his story of the night which ended in a setback for the Germans, Capt. Fromke said the Idarwald sighted "what appeared to be a war vessel" as "we left the Panuco river."

"Shortly afterward three other ships were sighted," he said. "Their reflectors were trained on the Idarwald and the ship was ordered to surrender by luminous signals.

"I zigzagged back into port pursued by a warship.

"It was a destroyer of an obsolete type, very likely one of the 50 destroyers transferred by the United States to Great Britain.

"The destroyer chased me up to within two miles of the coast, violating Mexican territorial waters."

Sees Battleship's Signals.

The captain of the German ship Rhein, E. Ullfers, told a similar story.

"The Idarwald advised me by wireless that we were theatened by enemy warships as I was approaching the mouth of the Panuco river," he said.

"I zig-zagged into port, pursued by a warship, but the Mexican gunboat Queretaro got in between. Then I noticed the lights of a large battleship some distance out. This ship ordered the destroyers to chase us, but when the Queretaro cut across, instructions were issued to the destroyers to stand by."

Apparently the abandoned Phrygia was the first ship out of port in the attempted dash, followed in turn by the Idarwald, the Rhein, and the Orinoco. The Orinoco was having engine trouble and lagging closer to port when the Idarwald and Rhein turned and scampered back.

Fired Ship to Avoid Capture.

Capt. J. Schurt of the Phrygia said he gave the order to scuttle ship because its capture seemed imminent.

"On leaving the port," he said, "we saw the four ships. They fired signals demanding that we surrender. The Idarwald and Rhein raced for shore but due to the proximity of one warship to us and the bad condition of our vessel we opened her and set her aflame."

The crew of the Phrygia—she carried about 40 men—came ashore in lifeboats without casualty.

Of the four ships, it developed, only the Orinoco carried a cargo—and she had great stores of pork, sugar, coffee, beans and the like. Even at the hour of their sailing, however, there had been speculation among shipping men that they perhaps were headed for a rendezvous with a German war vessel.

German Ship Scuttled After Dash Into Sea

Bermuda Learns Location of U. S. Bases Tomorrow

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Bermuda house of assembly will be informed Monday of the location of projected United States air and naval bases in the islands, official sources stated today. The United States air, navy, and army engineers departments have already established offices in St. Georges, old Bermuda capital.

REPORT LOTHIAN DIDN'T SAY MEN ARE BRITISH NEED

New York, Nov. 16 [Special].—Confusion has developed as to what Lord Lothian, British ambassador to the United States, actually said in a broadcast from England picked up by short wave by the Columbia Broadcasting company's listening station on Wednesday. It was originally reported that the ambassador had said that England needs "planes, men and ships."

British spokesmen had stated England had all the man power she needed and looked to America only for war materials.

The mechanical recording of Lord Lothian's address made by CBS seems to indicate the ambassador said "planes, men, and ships," but a cable from London said his script called for him to say, "planes, finance and ships," CBS stated today.

"In view of the fact that atmospheric conditions were disturbed on the night of Nov. 13 and since the historical record, rather than the imperfect Ediphone record, will show 'planes, finance and ships,' we sent the above correction," Columbia's press department said.

Finds Britain Is Censoring All U. S. Mail Sent to France

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VICHY, France, Nov. 16.—Trans-Atlantic mails are being opened and rifled with increased enterprise by English censors, it appears from mail now reaching Vichy.

Until recently only mail carried on Clipper planes which stopped at Bermuda arrived in Europe with indications of censorship. The letters were resealed with a sticker bearing the words "Opened by Examiner No. 6135."

In recent weeks letters sent by ordinary mail, aboard American ships, have arrived with traces of censorship. A letter sent to me from Chicago on Oct. 1 arrived on Nov. 10. It had been opened by the English examiner No. 6135.

Delay Now 3 to 4 Weeks.

I also have an air mail letter from THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE postmarked Aug. 2 and sent by Clipper. It reached me on Nov. 9, indicating it had been forgotten for a while in Bermuda. The usual delay now for Clipper mail is from three to four weeks.

[American ships carrying mail between the United States and Lisbon, Portugal, were stopping at Bermuda because of Britain's orders that they submit to the blockade, it was reported late in August. As a result virtually all mail for Europe was being subjected to censorship. It was said that a stop at Bermuda "might be one of the conditions" under which a navicert—a ship's passport thru the British contraband control—would be issued to an American vessel.]

Check Diplomat's Mail.

It is also believed here that secrets of American diplomatic pouches even find their way to London before they reach Washington, D. C.

It was recalled that when Capt. Brousse, press attaché of the French embassy in Washington, went to America by Clipper the English had information on the nature of the letters he was carrying and seized them when the plane stopped at Bermuda. This was said to be a violation of diplomatic privileges.

GREEKS EXECUTE NEW 'MATA HARI' WITHOUT TRIAL

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Nov. 16 (AP).—American citizens arriving in Turkey from Athens reported today the summary execution of a young "Mata Hari" by Greek guards. They said the fashionably dressed young woman—whose nationality they did not know—was taken from a Greek train and immediately shot after the discovery of a camera concealed under the wrist of her jacket.

The search for suspected spies is so vigorous, these persons said, that three Americans en route to Turkey were detained for several days until the Greek police were convinced of their identity.

BRITISH BOMBERS BATTLE GALES TO RAID NAZI BASES

Attack Heavy Guns; Blast Hamburg, Stavanger.

LONDON, Nov. 17, Sunday (AP).—Braving a channel gale RAF bomber squadrons battered at Nazi long range gun positions and invasion ports on the French coast last night. Watchers on the English cliffs could see vivid flashes light up the sky for miles along the opposite shore and hear heavy explosions above the shriek of the gale.

Friday night RAF bomber squadrons crossed the North sea to blast Hamburg from dusk until dawn, the air ministry said.

The ministry news service described the bombing of Germany's second largest city as one of the longest and heaviest raids of the RAF. Instead of centering the attack on dock areas as previously, the RAF struck inland at railway terminals, an oil refinery, and public utilities plants.

Bomb German Airdromes.

As the RAF attacked Hamburg, planes of the fleet air arm and coastal command were said to have ranged from Norway to occupied France, striking at enemy airdromes, the naval base at Kiel, and the ports of Ostend nd Calais. The air ministry said great fires were left burning in Stavanger.

Nazi warplanes showered many incendiary and explosive bombs on London last night from twilight until midnight, but early today heavily overcast skies hampered them and the "raiders passed" siren sounded about 1 a. m. A second alarm was sounded just before dawn, however.

A recheck by the air ministry showed five German planes "shot down Friday night over this country."

See Axis Bid for Victory.

BERLIN, Nov. 16 (AP).—Germany's concentrated air attacks on Britain recently—with threats of more to come—are signs, German observers say, of a new axis bid for victory before a second war winter ends.

Expert sources describe the furious assault on Coventry, one of England's manufacturing centers, as part of an effort to bring Britain to her knees before increasing American aid makes the task more difficult.

New German air raids today on London, Hastings, Southampton, and down the Thames estuary to the coast at Southend were reported by DNB, official German news agency. Docks and warehouses burned in the center of London, it said, and hits also were scored on a railroad and docks at Southampton.

Threaten Another Reprisal.

As the Coventry attack was described as "retailiation" for the British air raid on Munich the night Adolf Hitler was there, Nov. 8, so today did Nazis threaten another devastating air blow to avenge a British bombardment of Hamburg Friday night.

A low flying mass attack on a heavily protected convoy near Lowestoft on the British coast resulted in the sinking of a steamer of 4,000 to 6,000 tons with four hits, DNB said today. Numerous bombers attacked other ships, the agency said.

Roofs Blown from Houses in French Flanders Storm

VICHY, France, Nov. 16 (AP). — A windstorm which swept over French Flanders Thursday night was reported today to have caused widespread property damage. No human lives were known to have been lost. Roofs were blown from houses at Lille and live stock was killed in rural areas.

Bombers Demonstrate

Three of 12 bombing planes in flight at aviation show at naval reserve air base at Glenview yesterday.

The Edwin Francis Conway trophy for general excellence among the 13 naval reserve bases was presented yesterday to the aviation base at Glenview by Rear Admiral John Downes, commandant of the Great Lakes Naval Training station and of the 9th naval district. The trophy was received by Lieutenant Commander R. K. Gaines, commanding officer of the base.

Admiral Downes.

The trophy is awarded yearly on a basis of all around naval efficiency, discipline, and order. Prior to the presentation the base and squadron personnel was mustered for inspection by Admiral Downes, after which a crowd of 2,000 persons watched plane exhibitions.

Bases at Kansas City, St. Louis, and Minneapolis each sent three Curtiss scout bombers to join Glenview's three bombers in the exhibition. The planes demonstrated aerial gunnery, dive bombing, tactical and formation flying, and ground strafing. Student pilots in dual control training planes also demonstrated takeoffs and landings.

ITALIANS ATTACK ALEXANDRIA, BUT FAIL TO HIT SHIPS

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Nov. 16 (AP).—Italian warplanes bombed this British base again last night in an attempt to hit British warships. Authorities said all the explosives fell on land, injuring seven civilians and causing slight property damage.

Attack Italian Bases.

LONDON, Nov. 16 (AP).—A royal air force communique issued today reported widespread bomb attacks against Italian positions in Libya and East Africa yesterday. Sidi Barrani, Bardia, Bomba, and Tobruk in Libya were raided, the communique said, while in East Africa the Kassala railway station was attacked. Many bombs were said to have fallen within the target area.

POLAND'S EXILED TROOPS DEFEND SCOTTISH SECTOR

Mix Work and Play While Awaiting Foe.

SOMEWHERE IN SCOTLAND, Nov. 16.—Here in the sector of Forfar and Fife, Polish troops, their country gone, today stand guard in Britain's front defensive lines.

This detachment of Poles is not merely being trained by the British; it is completely responsible for its own sector. Gen. R. E. Carrington, head of the Scottish command, said he placed implicit trust in its ability.

The Poles probably have seen more service than most of the troops guarding the British coast, for almost all of them fought in Poland, France or Norway, and some in all three. They need no further training beyond instruction in the use of British weapons. Some British officers say they have learned much about mobile warfare from the Poles.

Last Sunday, in a Scottish Victorian room, war correspondents heard a Polish concert, half in Polish and half in what was supposed to be Scottish. The master of ceremonies apologized. "We may be a little sad," he said, "but we ask you to remember that, happy as we are and well as you are treating us, we are far from home."

Follow Liberty on Long Road.

Then the concert began. There were sad, lilting Slavic folk songs with quick changes of tone and rhythm. There was an old peasant comedian at whom the Polish soldiers roared. Then the Poles sang "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean" with a strong Polish accent.

The high point of the evening came when a Polish girl, a radio entertainer, recited in Scottish Robert Burns' famous clarion call, "Scots, Wha Hae Wi' Wallace Bled."

Outside Polish troops stood guard. Inside, that appeal for freedom or death rank out clear and true. Looking around the room, one realized by what strange and devious ways, with incredible risks and hardships, the love of freedom had brought this little band of Poles to these shores.

The next day, Nov. 11, was a day of more meaning for the Poles than for the rest of Britain's allies, since it was the anniversary of their country's reëstablishment in 1919 after its third dismemberment.

High Mass Said in Tent.

In the grounds of a Scottish estate a bearded priest intoned a solemn high mass in a tent. Gen. Marian Kukiel, who commands the Polish troops, and his staff knelt in the tent. A choir made up of Polish officers sang in the open air.

Afterward the troops paraded. Past the reviewing point they passed in British battle dress, riding in British trucks and on British motorcycles or rolling by in Bren-gun carriers. Platoons of foot soldiers also were in line.

As they reached the saluting base there came a sharp order and the troops fairly made the Scottish road shake under their goosestep.

The troops marched well and looked to be as fine a body of soldiers as there is in these islands. But there was an air of grimness about them.

SPAIN RESCINDS ITS BAN AGAINST AMERICAN PRESS

MADRID, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Spanish government today lifted its order, issued yesterday, which banned the American press from operating in Spain. Correspondents were told that their situation would remain normal. The announcement followed a visit to the foreign office by American Ambassador Alexander Weddell.

The ban was announced yesterday, to take effect probably Monday, as a reprisal for what Spanish officials said was the United States' failure to permit correspondents of EFE, the official Spanish news agency, to enter America. [The state department in Washington, D. C., said no such permission had been requested.] A note given out thru Cifra, official Spanish news agency of which EFE is the foreign branch, said:

"The Spanish foreign ministry having been given assurances that there is no hostility on the part of United States authorities toward the Spanish agency EFE, or toward establishment and representation of this agency in North America, press headquarters has agreed to postpone application of proposed measures against news agencies and correspondents of that nationality in Spain."

RUSSIA FINALLY RECOGNIZES NAZI GRAB IN SLOVAKIA

O. K. Is Implied as Press Publishes Treaty.

MOSCOW, Nov. 16 (AP).—Russia gave an implied recognition of Germany's protectorate over Slovakia by publishing for the first time today the German-Slovak treaty, now nearly two years old.

The text of the treaty, in which Germany assumed a protectorate over the segment of former Czecho-Slovakia, appeared in Pravda, communist party organ, and other official newspapers.

Recognition of Germany's protectorate was believed by diplomatic quarters to be one of the first results of Premier Vyacheslav Molotov's visit to Berlin.

New Sign of Friendship.

It was revealed that Germany has established consulates at Leningrad, Vladivostok and Batum. This was taken as a sign of reaffimed German-soviet friendship.

The Moscow press gave prominent display to messages that Molotov sent to Adolf Hitler and Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, on his return last night from conferences with them in Berlin.

It was assumed Molotov had reported on his Berlin journey to Josef Stalin, but it was indicated that no further information concerning the Berlin talks would be forthcoming immediately from the Russian side.

Tells Hitler of Gratitude.

Molotov's message to Hitler was: "On leaving German territory, I request you, Mr. Reichschancellor, to accept my gratitude for the cordial reception accorded me in Germany."

His message to von Ribbentrop referred to "the broad and warm reception accorded me and my companions in the memorable days of my sorjourn in Germany."

Resigned to a wheel-chair life, Mrs. King was informed yesterday by one of her four physicians that she would recover without losing the injured limb.

MEXICANS FEAR TROUBLE BEFORE CAMACHO GOES IN

See Little Chance for Almazan Coup.

BY A. LESLIE DUNKLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 16.—The United States' recognition of Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho as president elect of Mexico is being hailed in official circles but there is a feeling that "something may happen" before he is inaugurated on Dec. 1.

Government circles also are elated over the fact that Henry A. Wallace, who is to be vice president of the United States, will represent President Roosevelt at the Mexico City ceremonies.

The nation, however, is watching followers of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, defeated presidential candidate who has repeatedly declared that he will become president on Dec. 1. His partisans are said to be ready to rise if he says the word, but it is believed Almazan would have to perform a miracle to block Camacho.

U. S. Election a Factor.

Before President Roosevelt's recognition of Camacho, some sections of the country believed Almazan had convinced officials in the United States that he should receive their support. Almazan circles pinned their cause, however, to the United States election, asserting that if Wendell Willkie wins "our man will stand a chance; if Roosevelt, then the machine will carry on here."

Almazan's followers have not lost heart as a result of the election and the wholesale arrest or disappearance of their partisans here in Mexico.

The Hombre Libre, Almazanist independent newspaper here, says that Alamazan, who is in the United States, is coming to Mexico and that "his triumph is assured if Roosevelt is sincere in his 'good neighbor' policy."

Country Under Control.

The newspaper claims that the PRM, official government party, is failing as a result of attacks from various parts of the country and in congress. It also asserts that "the communists are against the party because the party turned them out."

Despite the feeling that "something may happen" before Dec. 1 and the asserted weakness of the PRM, the country appears to be under control. There has been no real dissension among leaders of the ruling party, but the arrest of Almazan followers has been looked upon by some groups as indicating the party machine is less confident than it would have others believe.

Nevertheless, the party program is being carried out, altho with a few deviations. The Almazan leaders declare their scheme, too, is running according to plan. As a result, the country has its eyes on developments between now and Dec. 1.

Several witnesses testified that Patrick had complained of financial troubles. He left notes to his widow and two business friends.

2 CHICAGOANS DRAW PRISON SENTENCES IN OHIO KIDNAP-ROBBERY

Toledo, O., Nov. 16 [Special].—Federal Judge Frank L. Kloeb late yesterday sentenced three men, two of them from Chicago, in connection with the 1937 kidnaping and robbery of Lyn Lepold, Toledo numbers agent.

Robert Eppstein of Chicago was sentenced to nine years and seven months. Joseph Weisbrod of Chicago was sentenced to six and a half years. Theodore Gell of Detroit was sentenced to a year and a day.

Weisbrod's sentence will run concurrently with the 10 to 25 year sentence imposed recently in Lucas county Common Please court on two counts of armed robbery of the Superior Sport center last January and February. # LIE TEST CLEARS PAROLED MAID IN $2,500 GEM THEFT

The police gave a lie detector test yesterday to Miss Mary Rospapa, 24 years old, a parolee from the women's reformatory at Dwight, in connection with the theft of $2,500 in jewelry from her employer, Mrs. Jane Shuffelton on Friday in the Seneca hotel, 200 East Chestnut street.

The police reported that they were satisfied that Miss Rospapa, who is employed by Mrs. Shuffleton as a maid, had no knowledge of the identities of the bandits. She was held, however, for questioning tomorrow by parole authorities.

Two robbers gained entrance to the Shuffelton apartment by saying they were from the parole board and wished to question the maid. They assaulted Mrs. Shuffelton when she tried to telephone and then tied both women with towels.

GUARD OFFICER PHYSICAL TESTS EASED BY ARMY

Opens Way for Older Men in Active Service.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—The War Department today moved to ease its physical tests so that older national guard officers will be able to go on active service.

The war department issued instructions for the waiving of physical defects which "will not interfere with satisfactory performance of field duties appropriate to the grade and assignment of the individual."

The instructions were the direct result of representations made at the convention of the National Guard association last week, that the guard officer personnel was being discriminated against.

Experts Oppose Program

It was said that guard officers who had passed one examination successfully had been required to take another and had been declared unfit for active duty at the second examination.

Impartial military experts here were convinced that the order easing physical requirements for the national guard officers on active service will weaken the army.

These experts have contended that the higher ranking officers of the regular army are unfit for active service and have repeatedly recommended that one of the first moves to strengthen the army should be the removal of deadwood officers.

Average About 60 Years.

At the outset of the world war the army's 32 general officers averaged about 60 years. Of eight major generals only one, John J. Pershing, who was newly appointed to that grade over more than a dozen brigadier generals, saw active service.

The other major generals were given desk jobs or retired. These included Leonard Wood, J. Franklin Bell, Thomas H. Barry, Hugh L. Scott, Albert L. Mills, George W. Goethals, and Tasker H. Bliss.

War department sources tonight acknowledged that, at a conservative estimate half of the American general officers during the world war were inefficient. The army did not and still does not care to publicize the failure of its general officers.

Failures Stand Out.

Failure stands out, however, on the records of the officers in the war department. Recalls from overseas command are entered with surprising frequency. Some of the recalled officers were sent home, but the majority were sent to the reassignment group at Blois, France, where they could be out of active service without arousing perturbation at home. Transfer to Blois meant to the army, almost without exception, that the officer had failed.

The war department has compiled no official list of transfers to Blois or generals' failures.

Because many officers of the army are too old to take the field in war, plans have been under consideration for retiring older men and bringing younger men to active commands. These plans have been successfully blocked by the oldsters.

In other armies, notably the British and German, line officers are from 5 to 15 years younger than men holding comparable ranks in the American army.

Experts have recognized that bad as the situation is in the regular army, it is far worse in the guard where officers largely owe their rank, particularly in the higher grades, to political influence.

In maneuvers last summer, observers commented on the large percentage of white heads in the officer personnel of guard units.

Nonetheless the war department has moved to hold the rank of these officers in its latest order. Pertinent sections of the war department ruling are as follows:

"Where a preliminary board of three or more medical officers appointed by proper authority has found an officer physically qualified for extended active duty, the recommendations of any succeeding board will be based solely upon those parts of the second or final type examination that were not within the scope of the preliminary board examination, such as chest X-ray, electric-cardiography, and serological tests. If the first examination was of the final type, no other examination will be required.

Waive Some Defects.

"In passing upon the physical qualifications of commissioned officers ordered to active duty, it is desired that reasonable waivers be granted where the interest of the government or of the military service is not compromised.

"Corps area and department commanders and other reviewing authorities are authorized to waive physical defects existing at the time of entry upon active duty if such defects will not interfere with the satisfactory performance of field duties appropriate to the grade and assignment of the individual concerned, and if the nature of the defect is such that it is not likely to be aggravated to a disabling degree as a result of active military service."

TEXAS DUST ADDS TO DISCOMFORTS OF 202D, CHICAGO

Troopers Live in Tents and Shiver in Cold.

BY FRANK CIPRIANI.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Fort Bliss, El Paso, Tex., Nov. 16.—If the mornings here weren't so cool, if the mountain winds didn't blow dust into the food, and if Chicago weren't 1,600 miles away, members of the 202d coast artillery antiaircraft regiment in training at Fort Bliss would be quite content.

The regiment, an all Chicago outfit of 1,397 men and 60 officers, began its year of training on Sept. 26—one of the nation's first National Guard units called into federal service.

The men live in tents. Until Tuesday they did not have stoves to keep them warm during the chilly mornings. The stoves arrived just as the widespread cold extended into Texas. For the last two mornings the temperature hit 26 degrees above zero. Without the heaters the discomfort would have been acute. Daytime is warm under the sun.

Dust Ruins Food.

After the cold nights, dust is next on the regiment's public enemy list. Even a gentle zephyr stirs clouds of dust, putting an unappetizing frosting on whatever is being cooked or eaten. Both kitchens and mess tables are in the open.

The Chicago regiment is quartered adjacent to Fort Bliss proper under the barren brows of the 6,500 foot Franklin mountains. The terrain is covered with stone and brush and broken by an occasional stunted tree.

Many of the men eye the lush greens of polo fields near by. There are three. They are maintained for the pleasure of the officers of the First Cavalry division of the regular army at the fort. Any two of the fields would be ample for the entire 202d, and end forever the dust nuisance, the soldiers point out.

5,000 Now At Fort.

There are 5,000 officers and men at the fort. About one third live in tents. The others live in brick or frame barracks, dine in substantial halls, walk on paved streets, and sidewalks, gaze on lawns, vines and flowers.

Better days are near, tho, as the 202d soon will move into a cantonment now under construction at Logan Heights, near by. There will be 263 frame buildings—mess halls, kitchens, offices and the like. Some men will continue to live in tents, but these will be screened and supported by frame work. The move is to be made on Dec. 15. Construction was described today as "on schedule."

Except for one brief flurry, there has been no labor trouble. Last Thursday 37 plumbers, getting $1.50 an hour, struck for double time instead of time and a half for overtime. Business agents called the men back, saying the strike was unauthorized. The government today announced plumbers will not be asked to work overtime.

The 202d's 300 tents are barely enough for present requirements. Officers said they doubt that enough tentage will be available for 400 "selectees" due here December 1.

The regiment has only ten .50 caliber antiaircraft machine guns when it should have 36; only 10 big searchlights when it needs 15, and only 10 sound detectors when it is listed for 15. As to the highly prized 37 mm. rapid fire antiaircraft guns, it should have 36. It has none.

The health of the men is good and their morale excellent. They have substantial food and ample clothing.

The 202d has won the regular army's respect. Today the regiment was highly praised by Maj. Gen. John F. Williams, chief of the National Guard bureau, here on an inspection trip from Washington, D. C.

The 202d is to be joined soon by four other coast artillery antiaircraft units. At war strength the five regiments will total 9,000 men, and will be commanded by Brig. Gen. Oliver L. Spiller, already in camp.

Regular army units here are to be boosted to 9,000. With aviation and other units, the fort's total population by March is expected to reach 25,000.

CAMP PEAY WORK AGAIN TIED UP BY UNIONS' DEMANDS

Tullahoma, Tenn., Nov. 16 (AP).—Only "emergency" work was in progress today on the $13,000,000 construction project at Camp Peay, National Guard training center, as the result of indecision on overtime wage scales for union labor.

Announcement that work had been halted for a second week-end came from the constructing quartermaster, Maj. Carl H. Brietweiser, who said data gathered in long conferences yesterday with American Federation of Labor craft leaders will be sent to Washington for a decision.

QUOTAS FOR LAST 101 DRAFT UNITS ARE ANNOUNCED

Hours of Induction for 262 Men Listed.

The state selective draft administration announced the quotas yesterday for 101 draft boards in Chicago and Cook county which will be called upon to supply volunteers or draftees on Nov. 25, 27, 29, and 30. Men from the other 79 local boards in Cook county already have been selected and will be inducted tomorrow and Tuesday.

The 200 to be inducted this week and the 262 who will be inducted later in the month comprise the Cook county quota of 462 men for the first draft call. Practically all of these are expected to be volunteers—those who prefer to serve their year in the army immediately rather than wait for their call as determined by the draft lottery.

All those chosen for the first draft by their local boards will be inducted at the 122d field artillery armory, 234 East Chicago avenue.

The new quotas, with dates and hours for induction, follow:

The names of the last of the 200 men to be inducted into service tomorrow and Tuesday were announced yesterday by draft boards which had not reported previously. They are:

WILMETTE, Cook county, board 2—John C. Millet Jr., 920 Chestnut avenue, Wilmette; William E. Fowler Jr., 312 Essex road, Kenilworth.

Board No. 126 in the 31st ward announced that Ben S. Slutsky, 1150 North Francisco avenue, instead of Stanley P. Malec, 2706 Cortez street, as previously reported, would be one of the two men from that district to be inducted this week.

A DRAFT RULING: DEPENDENTS CAN BE ILLEGITIMATE

New York, Nov. 16 [Special].—Illegitimate children and divorced wives may be listed as dependents by men in filling out the questionnaire of the Selective Service administration, Col. Arthur V. McDermott, head of the administration here, announced today.

The divorced wife may be legally listed as a dependent and will be accepted as such "even tho registrant is unable to furnish such person money or other support for temporary periods because of registrant's physical or economic situation," Col. McDermott said.

In listing children, he said, registrants may include those born out of wedlock, those still unborn, and those adopted, up to the age of 18.

G. O. P. BANQUET WILL CELEBRATE STATE VICTORY

Ben L. Berve, chairman of the Republican state central committee, announced yesterday that the committee is arranging a banquet in the Stevens hotel on Dec. 16 to celebrate the party victory in Illinois on Nov. 5.

The winners on the state ticket headed by Dwight H. Green, governor elect, will be guests and invitations have been sent to Wendell Willkie, Irvin S. Cobb, and other figures in the national field. The proceeds will be used for the operation of the committee.

At Springfield, Hugh W. Cross, lieutenant governor elect, discussed with Adj. Gen. Leo Boyle the plans for state inauguration day, now tentatively set for Jan. 13, the date on which, under the constitution, Green's term as governor begins. The new general assembly, the 62d, meets on Jan. 8.

DRAFTEES TO GET GALA WELCOME AT FT. SHERIDAN

County's First Contingent Arrives Tomorrow.

At 11:08 a. m. tomorrow the 65 piece 14th Cavalry band will stand with instruments poised on the platform of the North Shore station at Fort Sheridan. Two hundred members of the 61st coast artillery will line up beside them in their best parade dress. Before them a color guard will stand with regimental and national colors overhead.

As they arrive at Fort Sheridan that will be the first view Cook county's first draftees will have of the army life which has claimed them for the next year. Earlier in the morning they will have taken the soldier's oath and passed a physical examination in the 122d field artillery armory, 234 East Chicago avenue.

They will be busy from the moment they arrive at Fort Sheridan until they leave—possibly two or three days later—to go to their permanent stations. Elaborate plans for their reception have been made by Brig. Gen. Clyde R. Abraham, post commander.

General to Explain Duties.

Immediately after their colorful welcome at the station they will be addressed by Brig. Gen. Abraham, who will explain what the army expects from them. They also will hear Col. Hammon D. Birks, acting commander of the recruiting reception center. Then, escorted by the band, the colors, and the troops, they will enter the military reservation.

Their first visit will be to the mess hall. After the army rations they will begin a pilgrimage thru six stations on their way to becoming full fledged soldiers.

First they will go to the gymnasium where they will be registered and the records from their local draft boards will be examined. Then they will proceed to barracks, where each man will be assigned sleeping quarters. There are 20 new 65-man barracks at Fort Sheridan, each equipped with new steel cots, three inch mattresses, sheets, pillows, blankets, and something new—olive drab quilts very soft and warm.

Draftees to Get Aptitude Tests.

From the barracks the draftees will march to the post theater for tests to determine their aptitudes.

Following this test the recuits will return to the gymnasium, where they will be interviewed by reserve officer personnel experts. They will be asked about their education, previous employment, hobbies, and the preference they might have for any branch of the service. A few days later they will be notified in which of the 210 field classes they have been placed.

Next, at the warehouse, they will be fitted with uniforms. The last stop will be at the hospital, where they will be given inoculations against typhoid and paratyphoid fever and a vaccination against smallpox.

AS IT IS TO YOUR PRIDE!

DON'T think that because this big 1941 Dodge Luxury Liner looks and acts "like a million," you've got to dig deep to possess her. You don't! In fact, "just a few dollars more than the smaller, low-priced cars" is still sweet music to Dodge buyers everywhere!

And what do you get for your money?

Well, sir, you get the finest car that the great Dodge organization has turned out in 26 years!

You get a car that—thanks to brilliant Dodge craftsmanship—is a joy just to look at...low-swung and jaunty...with an air that says: "Man, here's the way to go places in style!"

You get a car that is bigger and roomier...with seats almost as wide as a divan and just as comfortable...big "V-shaped" windshield...and a 47.6% larger rear window that further exemplifies the high standards of safety for which Dodge has been notable through the years!

You get the world-famous Dodge economy engine that is something to marvel at...quiet as a kitten...yet with a surge of power that will surprise you!

And now, the new Fluid Drive*, combined with Floating Power, gives you smoothness beyond compare! Nothing new to learn...just far less gearshifting. And what a pleasure in traffic.

You get—but what's the use? The way to get the whole exciting story of this great new Dodge is to come in for a demonstration right away.

Tune in Major Bowes, C. B. S., Thursdays, 9 to 10 P. M., E. S. T.

ENJOY THE TRIPLE THRILL OF DODGE FLUID DRIVE*!

1. Shift or not, as you like! Nothing new to learn. Simply less to do. Greater comfort—added safety.
2. Marvelous in Traffic! You start and stop smoothly without jerk or jar. And when you want it, a flick of your finger into the getaway gear gives you a burst of speed.
3. The Smoothness of Oil! Power from the engine is transmitted to rear wheels through a shock-absorbing cushion of oil. Combined with Floating Power, Dodge Fluid Drive gives unbelievable smoothness, ease of handling and longer car-life—and this, of course, means famous Dodge economy.

ROOSEVELT VOTE DROPS SHARPLY IN COOK COUNTY

Gets 54 Pct. of Total in Official Returns.

BY PARKE BROWN.

President Roosevelt's loss of popularity in Chicago and its immediate suburbs was established definitely yesterday with the proclamation of the official returns from Cook county for the election of Nov. 5.

The President carried the county this year by 229,687. In 1936 his lead was 551,958 ,a difference of 322,298. As far back as 1932 the Roosevelt majority was 229,085 or almost the same as the lead given him locally this year.

In 1932 the Roosevelt Cook county total was 919,231, in 1936 it rose to 1,253,164, and this year it dropped to 1,168,141. In 1932 Herbert Hoover's vote in Cook was 690,146, in 1936 Landon's was 701,206, and Willkie's total on Nov. 5 was 938,454.

This time Roosevelt received 54.63 per cent of all the ballots cast in the county. In 1936 his percentage was 64.1 and in 1932 it was 57.1.

This year he was not only topped by State's Attorney Courtney for the third successive time but he ran behind the prosecutor by a wider margin than he did on either of the two previous occasions. In 1932 Courtney ran ahead by 26,453. In 1936 he ran ahead by 36,744, and this year his margin over Roosevelt was 52,935.

Drops in City, Suburbs.

Roosevelt lost ground in both Chicago and its suburbs within the county. His total vote in Chicago in 1936 was 1,099,141 and this year it was 1,029,538, a loss of 69,603. In the suburbs he received 154,223 four years ago and his total this time was 138,603, a drop of 15,520. His loss of support in the entire county was 85,023.

The other side of this analysis is that Wendell Willkie received 43.89 per cent of all ballots cast this year and in 1936 Alf M. Landon received 35.9 per cent of the total vote.

The official results, proclaimed by County Clerk M. J. Flynn, showed only immaterial changes from the unofficial returns immediately after the election. In the race watched most closely, that for the United States senatorship, Wayland Brooks, Republican, made a net gain of 347 votes over the unofficial returns in his contest with James M. Slattery.

Small Minor Party Votes.

The minority parties, Prohibition and Socialist, received such small totals in Cook county that, except for the presidential race, they are omitted from the following summary of the official figures:

TWO AMERICAS LINKED BY PLANE IN 6 HRS. 35 MIN.

Survey Craft Hops Gulf; Halts at Belize.

woolly white clouds formed beneath us, as predicted by Vernon Clapp, Export's meteorologist. The cold, turbulent air over the warm gulf water caused the clouds.

Hours Passed Above Clouds.

Soon the clouds stretched from horizon to horizon, solid and gleaming in the rising sun. Hours passed, with the crew making sunsights for celestial navigation and taking bearings on ships and Cuban radio stations. With no landmarks in the sky, navigation over a 700 mile water jump is a ticklish problem. As in all long range flight, the entire crew, including three pilots, the navigator, two radio men and two mechanics, were busy. This observer was busy watching the others.

Twenty minutes before we were scheduled to sight the Yucatan coast, Mitchell began descending thru the clouds, found them 2,300 feet thick, and came out underneath at 4,300 feet. Almost at that minute land was sighted by Co-captain Richard McMakin, but instead of being off to the west it was straight ahead. The plane had drifted 12 miles west of the proposed track, but this was corrected in half as many minutes.

Pass 260 Miles of Coast.

Continuing its descent, the plane followed the rugged, wild coast past green islands, deep lagoons, and tiny &fishing villages with fleets of lateen rigged boats offshore, for another 260 miles. Then the pink, green, blue, and sapphire roofs of Belize were seen. The big flying boat, motors roaring, circled the town and then dropped gently into the swells of the roadstead at 1:35 p. m. Chicago time.

An hour was spent getting the boat safely anchored among the fishing boats and mahogany lumber freighters. Then the skipper, Charles Blair, and the co-captains were greeted by Gov. John Hunter, British crown representative in Belize. He declared Export's service was welcome for it would reduce the five day boat trip to New Orleans to five hours and, at this stop, connect with ATCA [Air Transport of Central America] for all Central American capitals.

The Trans-Atlantic is scheduled to leave tomorrow morning for the Coco Solo navy base at Cristobal, Canal Zone, where it will complete the first half of its round trip flight.

SCOTT RADIO WITH RECORD PLAYER

To hear Wagner by record or radio on a Scott is to hear a "living performance" of this surging music . . . rich, eloquent, moving.

Those delicate overtones and resonances that are so often strained out of fine music by ordinary radios or record-players, come triumphantly through a Scott . . . bringing into your home the full wonder and glory of fine music.

To hear Brahms truly . . . to catch the elusive moods of Debussy or brooding Sibelius . . . your radio must capture shades of sound that give music its depth and brilliance, but which elude the average instrument! The very musicians whose broadcasts or recordings you value most, know this and listen with a Scott: Toscanini, Barbirolli, Stock, Ormandy, Reiner, Horowitz, Heifetz, Menuhin, Rodzinski.

Deems Taylor, noted composer and commentator for the New York Philharmonic Symphony, says "During the past fifteen years I have owned at least a dozen radio sets, and at one time or another have listened to every brand on the market. I can only say that I have never heard anything like this one. In its uncanny fidelity of tone quality, perfection of reception, elimination of interference, and absolute precision of tuning, it goes beyond anything I would have thought possible."

If you love music, from Guy Lombardo to Toscanini—listen with the instrument the artists listen to. Surely you have never, never met the musical equal of the Scott!

Everything you want in a radio is in a Scott

CHICAGO OPERA'S DON GIOVANNI IS SUPERBLY DONE

Margit Bokor Acclaimed; Pinza, Schipa Score.

"DON GIOVANNI."

[Opera in two acts. Music by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. Text by Lorenzo da Ponte. Presented by the Chicago Opera company in the Civic Opera house, Saturday afternoon, Nov. 16, 1940.]

THE CAST.

|---|---|
| Don Giovanni | Ezio Pinza |
| Donna Anna | Rose Bampton |
| Donna Elvira | Kathryn Witwer |

| Don Ottavio | Tito Schipa |
| Leporello | Virgilio Lazzari |
| The Commandant | Fred Destal [debut] |
| Masetto | Lorenzo Alvary [debut] |

Dances by Ballet theatre.
Conductor..........Paul Breisach.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

In a crowded and rewarding afternoon, the Chicago Opera company yesterday revived Mozart's "Don Giovanni," brought forward an important new musical personality in the person of Margit Bokor, presented for the first time this year the redoubtable Ezio Pinza and Tito Schipa, and gave the faithful Virgilio Lazzari an opportunity to be seen in one of his greatest parts.

"Don Giovanni," silent for five years, was presented in a manner which did justice to its qualities. Conductor, singers, musicians, stage men, and technical experts coöperated with one another to create a well integrated and therefore superbly effective production.

Musically, it was marked by taste, finesse, delicacy, and that peculiar Mozartean charm which is so much more than charm and which possesses such an uncanny power to open up great vistas onto the world of inner experience.

A Visual Delight.

Visually, the piece was a delight from start to finish. Settings, stage routines, lighting, and special effects betrayed a disciplined imaginativeness that amounted almost to genius.

Now about Miss Bokor, the comely Hungarian. She brought to the part of Zerlina a mischievousness, an elfin beauty, and an unreconstructed childishness which endeared her to the audience from the moment she set foot upon the stage. Hers is one of those arresting personalities which can command attention by the simplest means.

Musically, Miss Bokor is a fastidious soprano somewhat handicapped by a small voice. When used lightly, however, this voice is capable of many an enchanting effect.

Pinza Is Effective.

Mr. Pinza was extraordinarily effective in the part of Don Giovanni. He strode about the stage like the swaggering nobleman he was supposed to be, dominating both men and women by the look in his eye and [in extreme cases] the skill of his sword play.

Mr. Schipa began his afternoon auspiciously with the caressingly lovely phrases he addresses to the bereaved Anna and reached his great climax in his singing of the "Il Mio Tesoro." His handling of the air's more florid passages was a demonstration of the musical taste which, so our fathers love to tell us, was a commonplace a generation ago but which is certainly not very widely in evidence today.

Mr. Lazzari, who is seen regularly in more or less dead pan parts, yesterday gave a zestful and wonderfully well inflected performance of the servant Leporello.

Singer Hurt in Crash

MISS DORIS DOE.

Washington, Pa., Nov. 16 (AP).—Miss Doris Doe, 40 years old, Metropolitan Opera singer, and her mother, Mrs. Amy Doe, 60, of Bennington, N. H., were injured today in a traffic accident six miles east of this western Pennsylvania community.

Pennsylvania state motor police reported the Doe automobile skidded into an oncoming truck, which overturned.

Miss Doe suffered a slight concussion and head bruises. Her mother received head bruises. They were treated by a local physician and confined to a hotel room. The truck driver escaped injury.

EVENING OPERA

"RIGOLETTO"

[Opera in four acts. Music by Giuseppe Verdi. Text by Francesco Piave after Hugo. Presented by the Chicago Opera company in the Civic Opera house, Saturday evening, Nov. 16, 1940.]

THE CAST.

|---|---|
| Gilda | Josephine Tuminia [debut] |
| Duke of Mantua | Jussi Bjoerling |
| Rigoletto | Alexander Sved [debut] |
| Sparafucile | Douglas Beattie |
| Maddalena | Lydia Summers |
| Giovanna | Hellyn Fix [debut] |
| Monterone | Mack Harrell |

Dances by Ballet theatre.
Conductor, Leo Kopp.

The day's interest did not end with sunset for the evening performance of Verdi's "Rigoletto" brought the first American appearance of Alexander Sved, the first Chicago appearance of Josephine Tuminia, and the first appearance this season of Jussi Bjoerling.

The first named, a Hungarian, sang the name part with grandeur of style and a wealth of emotional meaning. Without doubt he is a major artist.

The old proverb which declares that you cannot judge a Gilda until the third act was justified again in the case of the promising young San Franciscan, Josephine Tuminia. The purity and sweetness of her voice were apparent early enough, but there was doubt about her musical sureness and her powers of projection until the duet with Rigoletto in the third act.

Mr. Bjoerling, a Swedish tenor with a milk smooth voice, made the villainous Duke of Mantua one of the most attractive characters of the week.

SCHIPA ON W-G-N TONIGHT

Tito Schipa, famous tenor, will sing on W-G-N at 8:23 o'clock this evening in the Stars of the Opera series. Each night at this time one of the Chicago Opera company stars is presented in a brief interview and solo.

Schipa considers Chicago his second home. He has sung here every year, except one, since he made his Chicago debut in 1919. He returned two weeks ago from a South American tour and now is planning a concert tour of the United States.

He will sing the rôle of Alfredo Germont in "La Traviata" in the opera here tomorrow night.

MILITARY GUESTS AT OPERA LEND COLOR TO SCENE

Army and Navy Officers in Center Boxes.

BY INDIA MOFFETT.

The scene at the Civic Opera house last night was unusually brilliant and gay, due largely to the fact that the two choice boxes, the center ones on the main floor, were occupied by army and navy officers and their ladies. The army men, in khaki with sparkling brass buttons; the naval officers, in blue with quantities of shiny gold braid, and their ladies, in colorful evening clothes, were the center of attention, and rightly so.

In the navy box were Admiral and Mrs. John Downes and their daughter, Mrs. Philip W. Mothersill, in brilliant scarlet; Capt. and Mrs. E. A. Wolleson and Lieutenant Commander and Mrs. Alfred H. Richards. Representing the army were Maj. and Mrs. Frederic L. Hayden, Col. and Mrs. Montgomery Taft Legg and Col. and Mrs. Eugene A. Lohman.

Film Beauty in Audience.

Another colorful figure whom many noticed during the intermissions was Ilona Massey of the movies, who was escorted by Alan Curtis, also of Hollywood. Beautiful Miss Massey, a Hungarian by birth, went backstage before the performance started to see her old friend, Alexander Sved, who was making his first operatic appearance in Chicago as Rigoletto.

Another interesting visitor in the opera house last night, and also at the matinée, was Mrs. William Francis Gibbs, daughter of the late Paul Cravath of New York, president for many years of the Metropolitan Opera company.

In New York Opera Guild.

Mrs. Gibbs is chairman of the membership committee of the New York Opera guild. She was the guest last night of the Walter R. Kirks, who had entertained at dinner for her earlier in the evening.

Mrs. Gibbs' black gown was enlivened by a bright red wrap, and a rose in her black hair of the same rich color. It held in place a spiderweb lace mantilla. The Kirks' other guests were Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, Col. and Mrs. George T. Langhorne, Italo Montemezzi, and Carleton Smith.

John Charles Thomas, one of the most popular operatic stars, was in the audience last night, being charming to every one with whom he talked, and making friends as rapidly off stage as he does on stage every time he sings.

THUGS ROB DELIVERY BOY.

Three thugs strong-armed Roy Cahill, 16 years old, 1634 Balmoral avenue, a delivery boy, in the alley at the rear of 1400 Catalpa avenue after he had made a delivery there yesterday and took $16.31. Cahill works for the Central Market, 5349 Clark street.

"Easy on the whip! You've got 140 horses there!"

Quick facts on Chrysler's low-cost use of tremendous horsepower!

THE only way to use the top horsepower of a modern motor car is to drive at close to top speed . . . and that speed is so high that there are only a few places where it is legal or safe!

What's more important to you is how much horsepower you use at average driving speeds . . . for it's just plain fact that every horse has to eat . . . every horsepower you use burns up fuel.

There's an enormous reserve of power in every Chrysler Spitfire engine . . . but as you see in the tables above, your Chrysler can cruise all day on only a small fraction of its total horsepower.

With Chrysler's Fluid Drive and Vacamatic transmission, you have a virtually unlimited number of speeds without gear-shifting . . . you automatically have the right gear ratio for thick traffic, ordinary driving, country cruising, or terrific speed if it's safe.

As a result, Chrysler's Spitfire engines operate with ideal economy under all driving conditions. If you want emergency power, you automatically get the correct gear ratio. The principle is exactly the same as the variable-pitch propellers in modern planes. By varying the propeller pitch, the pilot gets exactly the propeller ratio he needs for takeoff, climbing or cruising.

Chrysler Fluid Drive and Vacamatic transmission respond automatically to your driving. You don't have to think about it. You don't have to do anything about it. Yet, you're the boss, the car does exactly what you want it to do.

Why shift gears . . . when Fluid Driving is so much easier, smoother and safer? Why pay a big fuel bill when a Chrysler will give you everything from crawling speed to flying speed with economy and efficiency all the way!

Why spend money for a new car that fails to give you Chrysler's modern thrills, modern driving ease, modern economy? Why not see and try Chrysler Fluid Driving before you decide on any 1941 motor car? Your Chrysler dealer welcomes you!

RENOVATE STATE MANSION, READY FOR MRS. GREEN

Rooms Show Neglect of Bachelor Hands.

Touch of Mrs. Emmerson.

The music room, a long, graceful room with one mirrored wall, opens out of the north parlor. Bay windows, a Steinway grand, antique chairs, a battered green plush couch and a soft orchid and green oriental carpet left by Mrs. Louis L. Emmerson [1929-33] give the room great charm. A modern touch is added by the entrance here to the elevator installed by Gov. Horner.

A living room, dominated from the mantel by a portrait of Patrick Henry, opens out of the south parlor. If any room in the mansion may be called cozy, this one is, despite its great size. Its walls are cream, and a red and blue oriental covers the floor.

A 17th century grandfather's clock with a phases-of-the-moon-arch, comfortable arm chairs, cushioned window seats, and four built in bookcases [currently bookless] and an oil by Suzanne Small, sister of the late Gov. Len Small, make it restful and livable.

Mahogany Dining Room.

The state dining room, approximately 40 by 20 feet in size, is paneled in mahogany, the upper walls covered with a gold tapestry. Its draperies are of gold damask, its chairs upholstered in sprigged gold and ivory. The heavy mahogany table, over which glitters a prismatic crystal chandelier, will seat 24.

A sliding panel in the wall conceals two tremendous vaults in one of which the formal silver, a service for 24, is kept. The state silver, with the monogram EM [for executive mansion], is of plate, also for 24, and tumbles around in a sideboard drawer. The state china is of Lenox, white with a gold band, with the state seal embossed in gold, but the mansion also has a Royal Doulton service for 24.

A breakfast room adjoins. [Each room is separated by heavy, velvet portières.] It is homelike with pale, blue-gray walls, ivory paneling, draperies of a startling pink and a blue-tiled fireplace. A beautiful colisonné clock and candelabra, heritage from some unidentified régime, are on the mantel.

Ferns and Ivy in Sun Room.

A sun parlor [known as the Emmerson addition] is in the southwest corner. It is livable, sunny and gay, with reed baskets of ferns hanging in each of the six large windows and ivy clambering over the wall.

The kitchen, also on the state floor and modernized by Mrs. Emmerson, is light, airy, and large, with white tiled walls, a 10 foot refrigerator, two electric stoves and commodious storage space.

The second floor contains six bedrooms, four baths, and a family living room, as well as servants' quarters [six rooms] in the rear. Gov. Horner's Lincoln library, formerly on this floor, has been converted into another bedroom.

Stained Glass Dome.

The pride of most inhabitants of the mansion, however, has been its stained glass dome. You'd never know it was there unless you started to mount the stairway to the second floor. Then it glimmers down a beautiful well at you.

To man this household of 22 or more rooms requires a large staff. It currently consists of Clarence, the Negro butler who has been there 15 years; a first and second cook; a pastry girl; a first floor and a second floor maid, two housemen and a laundress. The last works diligently six days a week and to such end that, as a member of the household described it, "She keeps the state linen so slick a fly can't even light on it."

Bring Feminine Touch

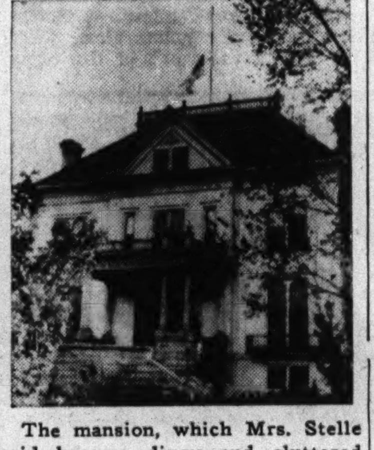
Mrs. Dwight H. Green (left) and Mrs. John Stelle. Mrs. Stelle became mistress of the governor's mansion last month, and Mrs. Green will move in when her husband becomes chief executive in January.



The mansion, which Mrs. Stelle said became dingy and cluttered with ash stands during the late Gov. Horner's bachelor regime there.

OCCUPATION TAX URGED IN PLACE OF SALES LEVY

Collinsville, Ill., Nov. 16 (AP).—A direct 1 per cent tax on all Illinois occupations was proposed today by James O. Monroe, Collinsville publisher and former chairman of the State Senate Revenue committee.

The suggestion was made in a letter to governor elect Dwight H. Green, urging substitution of the 1 per cent levy on "all occupations, businesses, and professions" for Illinois' 3 per cent sales tax.

Monroe, former democratic state senator, described the present tax as "virtually a discriminatory property tax."

Illinois Hunter Killed at Camp in Michigan

Ironwood, Mich., Nov. 16 (AP).—Eldo Johnson, 24, of Compton, Ill., was killed at a hunting camp 16 miles north of Ironwood last night when his rifle accidentally discharged. Robert Peterson of Sagola was shot fatally by a companion yesterday.

PART OF OPERA'S GREATEST DRAMA IS BACKSTAGE

Here's the Story of What Goes On There.

BY RITA FITZPATRICK.

Chicago opera audiences are witnessing breathless performances this season. But they do not see one of the greatest dramas of the opera. For the excitement and swift moving life of this drama is hidden and muffled by the great velvet curtains that cloister the stage.

Back behind the curtains in the opera house there is a little Hollywood, with its geniuses and scheduled confusion. It is a Hollywood whose panoply and precision do not cover months or a year, but one night. It is a world of seeming madness and modern science; a world that has taken millions of dollars to create.

Step backstage during a performance of "Aïda"—but step quickly into a corner so that none of the 52 workmen or the scores of members of cast and chorus bumps into you. Before your eyes stands a beautiful palace in Memphis, Egypt, where the first scene of the first act is to take place.

Scenes Change Swiftly.

But look behind the backdrop which is the exterior of the palace. You are in a temple where an altar fire flares weirdly in the foreground. Exotic urns tower to the ceiling and strange harps are clustered on marble steps. This is the setting for the second scene.

As if by magic the palace setting will be whisked away in one minute and 30 seconds at the end of the first scene, so the second scene must be ready. This double setting system explains why a Chicago Opera company production flows swiftly from one scene to another. It can be accomplished because its stage is one of the largest in the world—14 stories high, 125 feet across, and 75 feet deep.

Monte Fassnacht, young technical director, and his genial red-headed assistant, Dan McCarthy, have complete charge of the back stage and the grave responsibility of handling $10,000,000 worth of scenery, lights, properties, and costumes.

As the first act of "Aïda" draws to a close and the man at the curtain control shuts off the scene at the precise signal from the maestro, bedlam seems to break loose. Directors awarm behind the curtain crying, "Off stage, off stage." The cast scurries to obey.

Set "Striking" Is Dramatic.

Monte, as he is known to every one, even the workmen, hurries to the center of the stage and bellows "Strike." It is the command for 52 men to clear away one set, bring forward the one already set up behind it, and set up still another in reserve to keep the double setting system intact. They will accomplish this astounding task in 18 minutes.

Operators take their posts beside the 106 ropes which raise or lower the "pipes," or battens, carrying the beautifully colored backdrops. These backdrops weigh from 10 to 300 pounds. There are 1,500 of them stored in the pit at the back of the stage and another 2,000 in the opera studio and warehouse at 26th and Dearborn streets.

Property men, or "clearers," whisk away the harps, urns, and altar of the first act, while carpenters, called "grips," remove the flats, or stand-up scenery, setting others in their places.

The electricians, who are called "juicers," are ready on signal to turn on or off the necessary lights with their 1,250,000 watts of power. No stage in the world has as much lighting power. Enough to illuminate a small town, the electricity is controled at one small switchboard behind the footlights.

Lower Gigantic Cyclorama.

While the luxurious chamber of Amneris, daughter of the king of Egypt, is being prepared swiftly for the first scene in the second act, one of the most elaborate settings in the entire opera is being made ready behind the chamber for the second scene. It is to be a public square in Memphis, Egypt.

Because the setting simulates daylight, the opera's great cyclorama, which is the largest ever used in an indoors theater, is lowered. In theatrical parlance, a cyclorama is a curved cloth, or wall, which forms the back of modern stage settings. It is used to eliminate shadows and to suggest unlimited space, as of sky. Made of expensive Irish linen, the big opera house cyclorama is 110 feet high and has a circular sweep of 215 feet. It is raised or lowered by strong hoisting machinery.

As the second act comes and goes, backdrops of filmy foliage are let down to picture a little corner on the Nile river in the third act. With ingenious use of a lamp, even the ripples on the water are depicted.

Stage a Mass of Elevators.

The fourth act, however, brings into play one of the cleverest contrivances in any theater. Any three foot section of the floor of the stage can be raised or tilted by means of hydraulic elevators. In the last act of "Aïda" the back half of the stage is raised 10 feet, creating an effective use of upstage as an underground dungeon where the hero, Radames, captain of the Egyptian guards, has been sentenced to die.

Thruout the entire opera it has taken only 40 minutes to set up these spectacular scenes, altho approximately 2,000 pieces of scenery have been used.

But the workmen's duties are not over. The last act set must be cleared away and the first act set of the next night's opera put in place—one set going to the warehouse where scenery, properties and costumes for more than 100 operas are stored and maintained; the other coming from it.

The public, altho it cannot look behind the curtain during opera time, has an opportunity to see the inner working of this glamorous, cloistered world on scheduled tours from 5 to 6 p. m. each evening.

NAVY BUYS MORE BOATS; SEA TRAIN ALMOST FINISHED

Gets Two Luxury Yachts as Patriotic Gifts.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—The navy today neared completion of its 350,000 ton auxiliary vessel acquisition program with the purchase of 17 small craft, including four luxury yachts to be used as sub chasers, gunboats and patrol vessels.

One yacht, the Edmar, was given to the navy by Maj. Edward Bowes, the amateur radio hour man. In accepting the craft, the navy paid Bowes $1 as required by law. Another $1 "purchase" was the yacht Savitar from Joseph Seaman. The Edmar will be used as a sub chaser and the Savitar as a patrol vessel.

In all, the navy today paid $1,042,000 for 12 trawlers, to be converted into coastal mine sweepers; one tug to be used as a coastal supply boat, and four yachts. Two of the yachts cost the navy a total of $340,000.

Today's acquisitions almost completes a $60,000,000 buying program that started early in July, when the admirals prepared to build up a sea train sufficient to assist and supply the fleet in case of war.

125 Vessels Acquired.

In the last four and one-half months the navy has acquired 125 merchant and pleasure vessels from shipping companies, the maritime commission, fisheries, and individuals.

Eighteen sleek yachts have been acquired, seven of which were given to the navy by wealthy persons who either wished to aid the defense program or rid themselves of expensive upkeep charges. Most of the yachts will be used as sub chasers and patrol vessels, but a few have been converted into gunboats and coastal mine sweepers and mine layers.

The navy has purchased 34 large cargo and passenger vessels, ranging in size from 6,000 to 15,000 tons and in price from $500,000 to $7,100,000. The sum paid for the City of Newport News, an 8,378 ton vessel owned by the Baltimore Mail Line, which will be used as a navy transport.

Most of this fleet train is of a modern, high speed type of craft, powered by Diesel engines. The ships are being used as seaplane tenders, transports, hospital ships, submarine tenders, oilers, supply vessels, and ammunition ships.

More than 50 trawlers, from 100 to 300 tons in size have been purchased from coastal fishery companies. Chiefly Diesel powered, they cost from $50,000 to $250,000 each and are being converted into mine sweepers. For harbor duties, a number of tugs have been purchased at prices ranging up to $100,000.

The navy even bought one ferry boat at $74,000 from the Poughkeepsie and Highland Ferry company, which operates a line across the Hudson river near President Roosevelt's Hyde Park home. The ferry line has suffered of recent years thru the erection of the mid-Hudson valley bridge at Poughkeepsie.

Britain in Market.

Completion of the navy auxiliary program will leave the merchant vessel and trawler market open to Great Britain. The British are scouring the harbors of the world for all types of craft to replace those sunk by Nazi bombers and submarines.

All but the oldest and most sluggish tubs are acquired for duty in the Great British convoy trains which operate daily schedules across the north Atlantic and on the sea lanes to the east.

AMERICA'S FARM MIGHT TO PARADE ITS COLORS AGAIN

Live Stock Show to Open Here Nov. 30.

An established American tradition once more asserts itself in Chicago a week from next Saturday. On that day, Nov. 30, the International Live Stock exposition, spread over 20 acres of the International amphitheater at 43d and Halsted streets in the stock yards, opens an eight day stay for the 41st time.

In those eight days, city dweller and country cousin will view again the millions of dollars worth of superb farm animals, the hay and grain exhibits and the wonders of scientific farm methods. They will see, too, the typically American aspect of the show upon which none can place monetary values—the work of the hundreds of healthy and vibrant young people who will represent the 1,500,000 farm youths engaged in 4-H club work thruout the nation.

Biggest Show in History.

Early entries, larger than usual exhibits at summer state fairs, and rich crop yields in most section of North America foreshadow one of the biggest shows in the last four decades, B. H. Heide, exposition manager, said yesterday. And Manager Heide should know, for he has directed every show since they first began in the old exhibition hall before the turn of the century.

Hundreds of exhibitors, presenting 30 different breeds of beef cattle, draft horses, sheep, and hogs, together with various types of harness and saddle horses, will compete for $100,000 in cash prizes and innumerable trophies and medals.

In the horse shows, to be held each evening and on four afternoons, leading stables in the United States and Canada will display their stellar entries. Canny dogs—performing sheep herding feats calculated to lift the eyebrows of the most skeptical—trick riders, powerful six horse teams of draft animals, and parades of all the prize winning live stock will feature these daily shows.

The Grain Exhibit.

The hay and grain exhibit, one of the best known attractions since it was added to the exposition 21 years ago, again is expected to draw many of the show's visitors. The finest of their crops and grains will be displayed here by farmers from more than 34 states and the Canadian provinces.

The 4-H youngsters, as usual, are expected to snare a major share of audience attention. Not only will they be holding their 19th annual congress during the exposition, but most of them, bringing their fat cattle and plump lambs and pigs, will compete with veteran exhibitors in the open classes.

Usually Take Top Prizes.

Invariably, according to perennial exposition visitors, the youngsters manage to win top prizes. In the 1939 exposition, Mayfield Kothmann of Mason, Tex., only 18 years old, exhibited his white faced, red coated Hereford steer, 16 months old and weighing 1,240 pounds, and strode off with the grand championship in all steer classes. Roger Amsler, another 4-H boy from Rensselaer, Ind., exhibited the grand champion barrow.

Show officials expect that 448,000 people who saw the show last year will be augmented by several thousand more, if the annual rise in attendance in past years is a reliable indicator. Railroads serving Chicago are planning to offer low round trip fares from many points along their lines during the week of the exposition.

Unwed Mother Hides Her Baby's Body to Save Job

Miss Adele Zebrowski, 22 years old, was questioned by police yesterday after the body of her newborn baby boy was found next to a building at 3636 Shakespeare avenue, where she was employed as a maid. Miss Zebrowski told Sergt. James Lynch of the Shakespeare station that she wanted to get rid of the infant lest it attract the attention of her employer. Dr. Jerry Kearns, coroner's physician, reported that the infant died from a hemorrhage at the time of birth. Miss Zebrowski was taken to the county hospital for treatment. An inquest was continued to Dec. 6.

BARE RECORDS OF 3 PAROLEES HELD FOR RAPE

Six Club Members Seized on Girl's Charges.

Authorities disclosed yesterday the records of three parolees under arrest in connection with the rape of a young woman in a neighborhood club at 1656 18th place. The three parolees and three other men held with them will be viewed by other rape victims at a showup at the detective bureau today.

The parolees are Walter Gorski, 25 years old, 1956 Cullerton street; Mitchell Kopec, 25, of 1930 21st street, and Ben Malinowski, 23, of 1747 14th street. Gorski and Kopec have been identified by the victim, who is 20. She also identified Tracy Leonard, 25, of 2100 South 50th court, Cicero.

Two Other Club Members Held.

Police said that these four and the two others held were members of the Twin Cardinals club, the neighborhood organization. The girl was kidnaped from her escort Monday night and taken to the club where she was raped. Detectives were investigating to learn whether other similar crimes had been committed there.

Gorski and Kopec were arrested in July, 1935, and sent to Joliet for 1 to 20 years for armed robbery. They were paroled in May, 1939.

Malinowski was arrested for auto theft in June, 1934, and sent to Joliet. He was paroled two years later and while on parole was sent to the Bridewell for 20 days for reckless driving. He was returned to Joliet in April, 1937, for parole violation, and reparoled a year ago.

Gorski's release was sponsored by Michael Vodin, owner of a restaurant at 3216 Roosevelt road, who promised to give him a job washing dishes. Gorski later went to work for a west side fabric company. He was employed there at the time of his arrest.

Kopec Employed by Sponsor.

Kopec's parole was sponsored by Harry Manaster, 5120 Hyde Park boulevard, an official of the United Packers, Inc., 1018 West 37th street. Kopec got a job at the company as a canner. Manaster said that other members of the family who work for his company asked him to intercede for Kopec.

Malinowski's sponsor is Stanley Bafia, an undertaker at 1810 18th street. He is employed by the Stetson China company, 1801 West 74th street. Bafia said he knows the family and agreed at their request to be Malinowski's sponsor and give him employment until he found another job.

T. P. Sullivan, parole supervisor for the state, said Malinowski violated his parole by associating with other parolees and that he would recommend his return to prison if the police do not place a charge against him.

Choose Courteous, Neat Police for Loop

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Capt. Thomas Duffy gave instructions yesterday to 29 young policemen especially selected for service in the loop that they must give visitors a favorable impression of Chicago. Lieut. James McCarthy is at the left.

Twenty-nine young policemen were told yesterday they are expected to make a good impression on visitors to the city. They are to serve in the loop and downtown district and as they reported for duty at the First district headquarters for the first time they were met by Capt. Thomas Duffy, who said they were replacing old time policemen who had grown careless of personal appearance and good manners.

"You men were specially selected for duty in this district because you are neat, polite, courteous, and willing to be helpful," Capt. Duffy said to the newcomers. "As long as you remain that way you will be a credit to the city, to the department, and to yourselves, and when you forget that you are here to serve the public you will not be welcome in this district any longer.

"I want you to familiarize yourselves with every point in the city so you can answer any question put to you by a visitor. You will conduct yourselves so that persons passing thru the city will go away talking about what fine policemen they met in Chicago.

"An another thing: I give the orders here. No one on the outside gives any orders. The laws are to be enforced and sobriety must be maintained."

Capt. Duffy said that in the seven months he has been in charge of the First district he has not been subjected to any political restrictions.

FATHER OF FOUR SHOOTS WIFE'S LOVER TO DEATH

Joseph Ross, 26 years old, a Joliet cab driver, was shot and killed yesterday in front of the Joliet office of the Yellow Cab company by John Kelly, 34, father of four children, who accused Ross of stealing the love of his wife, Marie. Kelly said his wife, who is 28, left home Tuesday and he has been unable to find her.

After firing five shots into Ross' body, Kelly, who lives at 614 2d avenue, walked into the cab office at 7 Scott street and called police. He told them Ross had been having an affair with his wife for three months and that 10 days ago his wife told him she was going to leave him because of her love for Ross.

Kelly said he borrowed an automatic from a friend and went to the cab station, where he ordered Ross' cab. He said he warned the cab driver to stay away from his wife and fired after Ross reached into his coat, as if for a gun. A witness denied that Ross had made a threatening move. Kelly's children are Doris, 11; Lois, 10; Joyce Elaine, 7, and John Jr., 5.

4 Young Persons Killed When Car Goes in Canal

Marine City, Mich., Nov. 1 (AP).—Four young persons plunged to their deaths last night when their automobile careened off a highway three miles north of here and fell into Newport Shores Drainage canal. The victims were Ruth Cane, 16, Marine City; Melvin J. Jones, 19, Fair Haven; his sister, Elsie, 15, and Walter A. Fahs, 18, Lenox. One tire was found to be flat when the car was hauled from the canal.

FATHER SLASHES DAUGHTER AND KILLS HIMSELF

The coroner's office yesterday continued until Dec. 17 an inquest into the death of Martin Gierhahn, 53 years old, former assistant superintendent of Chicago airport, who stabbed himself to death with a butcher knife earlier in the day after slashing his married daughter, Mrs. Marge Rehder, 23 years old.

Martin Gierhahn.

His daughter and her husband, Kenneth Rehder, lived in the Gierhahn home at 6608 South Kilpatrick avenue. Gierhahn attacked his daughter with the knife while she was asleep in her bedroom. Her husband was attending a loop banquet at the time. Gierhahn then ran to another bedroom and slashed his throat.

Mrs. Rehder was taken to Holy Cross hospital, where her condition was said to be serious. Gierhahn's widow, Elizabeth, testified her husband had been ill since he lost his job at the airport last March. He had been assistant superintendent for three years.

LEADERS OF C. I. O. FIGHT TO STAVE OFF OPEN BREAK

Attend Surprise Parley in Search for Peace.

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 16 (AP).—Efforts to avoid a major split between the C. I. O. forces led by President John L. Lewis and Sidney Hillman's antiradical followers were being made today by C. I. O. leaders attending conferences prefacing the opening of their organization's national convention here Monday.

Hillman, C. I. O. vice president, head of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' union and labor member of the national defense commission, long has been in sharp disagreement with Lewis over labor policies.

Altho the leaders met last night in a surprise conference and strolled this resort city's famed boardwalk on apparently good terms today, there were indications they remained far apart on major policies. Neither would answer directly a question as to whether he expected a harmonious convention.

Favor Reunion with A. F. of L.

Hillman and his followers want the convention to go on record for a fresh try at unity conferences with the A. F. of L., curb the reputed influence of communists in high C. I. O. jobs, and make all acts of the C. I. O. president subject to approval of an executive committee.

A point of high controversy is the resolution of Hillman's union to prohibit any one from holding a paid job in the C. I. O. who is a member of a communist, Nazi, or Fascist organization.

Lewis refused to discuss the resolution but remarked it was his "considered judgment that the convention is unlikely to depart very far from previously declared policies and objectives."

Hillman said the resolution presented a sound policy for the C. I. O., especially with national defense at stake, adding that "labor must make sure that those who hold official positions have no divided loyalty."

Members of his union expressed confidence that C. I. O.'s big affiliates in steel, autos, rubber, and textile will support the Hillman bloc's program.

Lewis Assails Green.

Reports from the A. F. of L. convention at New Orleans, quoting William Green as predicting a split in C. I. O., brought from Lewis the comment that "Mr. Green is characteristically whistling in the dark as he is going by a graveyard."

"I doubt that Mr. Green is in a position to admonish the C. I. O. or accurately prognosticate what will occur in the C. I. O.," Lewis added.

"In addition to that, he has a few problems of his own regarding grafters, swindlers, racketeers, and panders in his organization. There is a biblical injunction about taking the mote out of your own eye before taking it out of your neighbor's. When he does that, we will be gratified to hear what he thinks we should do."

FIGHTS ORDER TO FREE GIRL IN TROTSKY SLAYING

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 16.—District Attorney Luis G. Garcia has appealed against a court order for the release of Miss Sylvia Ageloff, Brooklyn, N. Y., girl held for suspected complicity in the assassination of Leon Trotsky. Garcia said Miss Ageloff's innocence as an accomplice of Frank Jackson, the slayer, has not been sufficiently proved. The Mexican law does not provide any fixed time limit for discussion of Garcia's appeal, but it is believed a final decision on Miss Ageloff's release or further detention in Juarez hospital will be taken in a month.

Competes in Show

Virginia Loeb of Highland Park with Blue Gay II, a Persian cat owned by Mrs. John Trimmer, which is entered in the show at the Brevoort hotel.

No claws were sheathed and no hisses barred in the farm room of the Brevoor hotel yesterday. Such a ruling, had there been one, would have been impossible to enforce, for the room contained 127 cats. The cats, curried and brushed from whiskers to fluffy tails, were there to vie for the championship of the Chicago Persian society's 12th cat show. All classes were there from Buzzer, a stray, to Vee Roi's Foo Chow Shan, a pedigreed Siamese, and Lakeside's Blue Marvel, sired by Coeur de Lion's Bluejohn, which is quite a father for even a cat to have.

CAMP BUILDERS TO EMPLOY ONLY A. F. L. WORKERS

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 16 [Special].—Officials of John Griffith and Sons, Chicago general contractors in charge of the $4,250,000 building program at Camp Grant, announced today employment on the project will be on a "100 per cent A. F. of L. union basis." A local building trades council card designating the union with which a man is affiliated and certifying his good standing will be required of all employés.

Offices of the Rockford building trades council were crowded today, as a result, with men taking out union cards.

KEYNOTE OF A. F. L. CONVENTION WILL BE LABOR PEACE

Stimson in Address to Urge End of Strife.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 16 [Special].—Officials of the American Federation of Labor were making final preparations today for the opening of the organization's annual convention here Monday. Efforts to bring peace to the labor movement probably will keynote the meeting.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, who will address the delegates on the opening day, is expected to urge peace as an aid to the United States defense program. William Green, A. F. of L. president, is expected to make a peace gesture toward the C. I. O.

Watching C. I. O. Convention.

A. F. of L. leaders, confident of tranquility in their session, admit they are watching developments in the C. I. O. convention opening at the same time in Atlantic City.

Events there, these leaders say, may have a profound influence on happenings in their own convention. They are openly skeptical that John L. Lewis' promised resignation from the C. I. O. presidency will mean a lessening of his influence.

Sees Lewis Influence Remain.

Matthew Woll, A. F. of L. vice president, predicted that Lewis' influence in the C. I. O. will continue as long as he desires to assert it but said that the reshuffling of the National Labor Relations board membership indicates the influence of the government will be directed away from the C. I. O. and into channels favorable to the A. F. of L.

Four Hunters Are Killed When Train Strikes Auto

HILLMAN HOPES TO QUIET LABOR ON DEFENSE JOBS

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 16 (AP).—Sidney Hillman, labor member of the national defense commission, said today he planned to station "experienced labor leaders" in 25 regions thruout the country to facilitate the administration of the commission's labor policy. He said inexperienced leadership was involved in some labor disputes arising under the defense program.

Hillman, who also is a CIO vice president, said labor problems in the plants of the Ford Motor company and the Bethlehem Steel company where CIO unions have organizing drives under way, were getting "close attention" from the commission's labor division.

CIO has attacked the labor policies of both companies in cases before the labor board and the courts.

"I expect these matters will be satisfactorily adjudicated," Hillman said.

Reiterating his views that observance of federal labor laws was necessary under the defense program, Hillman declared:

"I can't conceive of a defense program with public backing if law violations are tolerated."

SCRATCHING THE BOTTOM OF THE BARREL.

Voters and taxpayers of Cook county had good cause for alarm in the debt statements of local governments printed a few days ago in THE TRIBUNE. They showed, to a greater extent than any previous accounts, just what machine government is costing Chicago.

For the first time in eight years the total debts of the six major local governments increased during the year ended Sept. 30. It is not only the fact of the increase, but the manner in which it was accumulated, that gives cause for alarm.

The governmental debts consist of funded debt, or bond issues, borrowings on tax warrants in anticipation of future tax collections, and floating or unsecured debts, including unpaid bills, pay rolls, and judgments. Over the first of these debts, the bond issues, the present administrations have no control. They did not contract the debts. They are required by statute to levy certain sums to retire them. When the tax collections come in they pay off the bonds.

This is a purely automatic process. In recent years it has reduced the total debts of local governments by considerable sums. A drop in the total obligations of local governments of $43,000,000 in the year ending Nov. 30, 1939, and of $42,000,000 in the year before that, consisted largely of bond retirements over which the present administrations of the local governments had no control.

It is over their tax warrant issues, and to an even greater extent over their general floating debt, that the local governments have direct control, and it was these classifications that increased. They increased for the six governments by $16,179,017, more than overbalancing the amount of bonds retired during the annual period.

An increase in tax warrants outstanding may or may not be serious, depending on whether the government in question is overstraining this particular form of borrowing power. The increase of more than $6,500,000 in the board of education's tax warrant issue is a sign that payless paydays for the school teachers are creeping closer. The school board depends to a larger extent than any other government on the general property tax, and failure to collect delinquent taxes is hitting it first.

An increase in floating debts is an even worse symptom. It is a plain indication that the government in question is living beyond its means in carrying on its current operations. In this connection the city government is the worst offender, even tho its statement does show a slight decrease in floating debt during the annual period. That decrease was possible only because the city discounted a judgment which it held against the county government, at terms which laid the transaction open to grave suspicion. That put more than $3,000,000 into the city treasury, and it was a nonrecurring asset. There will be no such windfall this coming year. Without this ill judged pawning of its county judgment the city's floating debt would have passed the $20,000,000 mark, instead of remaining at $16,945,618.

This increase in the city's floating debt is directly due to swollen pay rolls. There is not enough money to meet the pay rolls and pay city bills, and so the bills have been allowed to accumulate to the present staggering total.

The county government is suffering, on a comparative basis, from an even worse attack of payrollitis. Its floating debt increased during the annual period from $1,709,349 to $6,336,914. Of this, $3,163,000 represents the judgment that the city has put in pawn but which the county has still to pay. The remainder reflects the extent to which the pay rollers shouldered the county's creditors out of line at the cashier's window.

The city cannot make a budget balance this year unless it does something about its swollen pay rolls. The county is in even worse condition. It is doubtful if it can make a balanced budget under any circumstances. Its preliminary estimates show expenditures, on the basis of current pay rolls, of $18,970,000, without any provision for the unjust but perfectly legal judgment pawned by the city, and revenue of only $14,666,000 to meet these obligations.

For the first time since the old whoopee days the local governments, as a group, have been spending money faster than they took it in. The budget sessions of the next two months will provide a day of reckoning. Payless paydays are just around the corner.

MR. SHAUGHNESSY ON THE WEST COAST.

The many friends of Clark Shaughnessy, recently of this city, have followed the development of his career in golden California with admiring interest. Clark went west to go to town and he is receiving many encomiums for the big way in which he did it. He has taken the Stanford football team out of the thorns and into the blossoming end of the bush. Incredulous west coasters are wondering how he did it. It's wizardry and miracle stuff to groom Stanford for the Rose bowl.

Mr. Shaughnessy's last year's experience at the University of Chicago as a coach might have broken the spirit of a less spirited man. In a way it was valuable experience. A coach who has to take it at 60-0 Saturday after Saturday knows that he has met the worst and never again can be touched by grief. Then if he and his boys can learn to like the game for its own sake trouble is certainly far from their door.

Curiously enough, Chicago's prexy, who was getting just the sort of football he thought was admirable—ten cent football—blew up the works. A change of scene did wonders for Mr. Shaughnessy but, more than that, a change of men did wonders for Stanford. For the benefit of the readers who rely exclusively on this department for their sporting intelligence it may be noted that following the idea of change the Chicago Cubs management has decided to give Mr. Hartnett a chance elsewhere and the Cubs a chance under some one else.

The idea that a new man is not a good bet does not seem to apply in the highly competitive sporting world. Possibly we have been wrong politically.

FREEDOM OF BELIEF.

The Chicago Round Table of Christians and Jews is celebrating this month the fifth anniversary of its founding. Its purpose has been not to minimize the differences of belief which separate Protestants, Catholics, and Jews, but to emphasize the fact that in the presence of such enemies of all religion as Naziism and communism, free men and women of all faiths must stand together. If they allow themselves to be divided in the face of the enemy they will be destroyed one after another.

In the totalitarian theory the state is supreme in all fields, including the field of religion. In the American theory each individual retains to himself the right to decide questions of faith for himself. He may join any church or refuse to join all churches. The state is concerned with religion only in the sense that the government guarantees to each man and woman the right to worship as he pleases and to suffer no civil disabilities as the result of his choice. As the state may not interfere with religion, so religion may not interfere in matters of state.

Under this doctrine religious organizations are flourishing in this country as nowhere else in the contemporary world. They can expect to continue to grow in spiritual influence only so long as the state continues to leave matters of belief to the individual. Once the state begins to discriminate against any faith, the day cannot be far distant when the state will undertake to supervise and dominate all religious activity.

If we had not seen exactly this thing happen in the totalitarian countries we would find it difficult to believe that it could ever happen here. As it is, we cannot afford to blind ourselves to the danger. The enemies of liberty emphasize the differences which divide the faiths and thus seek to create an atmosphere in which persecution flourishes. The answer which such organizations as the Round Table are making is that men of all faiths—and, it should be added, those who have no religious affiliation—have a common interest in maintaining the right of independent belief. If they allow their doctrinal differences to divide them on this question they must all be beaten down in the end.

In emphasizing this aspect of the matter the Round Table has filled a most useful rôle. The organization is to be congratulated upon its accomplishments in the last five years; it deserves every encouragement for the future.

TOWARD PAN-AMERICAN GOOD WILL.

In the Voice of the People this morning we publish a letter from Mr. De Witt Worcester of International House, University of Chicago. Mr. Worcester offers a number of suggestions for promoting Pan-American coöperation. He proposes an exchange of students between the United States and the nations to the south and hopes that some Cecil Rhodes will arise to award scholarships to Americans who wish to study in the Latin countries. He thinks the cause might be advanced, also, by the publication in this newspaper of a series of authoritative articles on South American geography and history.

It is unlikely that any or all of these measures, of themselves, could achieve solidarity among the nations of this hemisphere. Mutually profitable trade relations would no doubt go a great deal farther in the desired direction. But when this has been said it still remains true that the proposals have much to commend them. It is highly desirable that the peoples of the two Americas become better acquainted.

There are many advantages in student exchanges which do not flow from mere tourist travel. The student is at an impressionable age. His stay is longer. If he is companionable, he will find friends among the people with whom he is living. He will get to know them in their homes. He will acquire some knowledge of their national attitudes and become familiar with their manners and customs. The time may come when he can be a most useful agent in explaining one country to the other, with the result that misunderstandings may be avoided.

Increasingly in recent years, the young men and women in the countries to the south have been coming to this country for their higher education. Increasingly, also, our students, particularly those interested in Spanish language and literature and American history and archæology, have gone southward for postgraduate studies. These exchanges have been helpful. Any means which can be found of stimulating them should be encouraged.

So far as newspaper articles are concerned, we have from time to time published material along the lines suggested and will continue to do so as opportunities present themselves. The difficulty lies in the fact that such articles are likely to be of limited interest and not particularly readable. We are not persuaded that the cause of Pan-American solidarity can be furthered by covering white paper with learned articles which only the fewest of subscribers will trouble to read.

THE MOST EXPENSIVE BOND.
[Richmond News Leader.]

"Interest," the old Virginia farmer kept saying of his improvident neighbor, "is going to eat John up."

Often it did, but neither John nor the luckless creature who falls into the steel talons of a black usurer is destined to equal one experience of New York City. In 1867-'73 the town of West Farms, then in Westchester county, issued $278,000 of bonds to improve Central avenue. Most of the bonds went directly to the contractor, and they paid 7 per cent, which, for the times was not exceptional. When New York City annexed that district in 1898 it assumed the debts. The municipality then made the stunning discovery that the bonds do not begin to mature until about the year 2122 and will not disappear from the books until 2147. Meantime, they cannot be called. To maturity, in interest alone, that $278,000 of bonds will cost $2,468,000 in interest, or almost 100 times the face. The moral for a municipality is one the individual learns to his grief thru costly experience: Short term borrowing is desirable because, among other things, it is a nuisance. If you discount and curtail a fresh note every 30 days, you get so sick of the debt that you discharge it as soon as you are able. If it's a long term loan you forget it until the interest pinches.

NOTES FROM DOWN UNDER

BY W. A. O'CARROLL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SYDNEY, Australia.—Altho the feeling of Australians—dinkum [native] Australians—toward Americans has been most cordial for many years, Prof. I. Clunies Ross told the Sydney University union that "Englishmen and Australians have done everything possible to make America want to keep out of the war." Ross, professor of veterinary science at Sydney university, was in America recently studying the wool trade.

"The British attitude to Americans in the last 20 years has been one of amused condescension," he said. "We emphasize what we regard as the Americans' undesirable qualities.

"I have seen Englishmen become rabid because Americans eat marmalade with their bacon and maple sirup with sausages. I have even known Australians, whose voices are not the most pleasant, express amusement at the American accent.

"In Britain they say that the Americans came into the last war only because they had invested much money. And there are excessively Anglicized Australians who do not like the American people.

"Every Australian university man who goes to America comes back with a very high regard for the Americans. The Americans see they have a common outlook.

"Americans suspect Englishmen of condescension—a suspicion which is well justified. A high British army officer told me: 'The Americans are a terribly inefficient lot. Every time they take out a warship it tips up.'

"Every time one of us adopt that attitude toward America he is playing Hitler's game.

"Australians have a responsibility to exploit the similarity of outlook of America and Australia."

Occasionally there are laughs on both sides, as when an Australian pronounces "skedule" as "shedule," and Americans similarly mispronounce Australian terms. For the rest, however, there is more genuine kinship among Australians and Americans than marks the attitude of the people of this country toward any other foreign nationals.

The Australians are highly resentful of conservative sections of England which still consider the self-governing dominions as colonies, and which refuse to concede a recognition of nationhood to the commonwealth in this war. The press and people are becoming more vocal than they were in their first polite protests to Downing street. The Sydney Sunday Sun pointed out that Nazi warplanes are being shot down over Britain by Americans, Czechs, and Poles, flying as nationals, and adds:

"The fact that these foreign squadrons have been formed within the fabric of the R. A. F. proves that somewhere in Britain's high councils is recognition of the real value of national pride and team spirit among fighting men. All the more mysterious, therefore, is the persistent and stubborn refusal to recognize the equal claims of dominions' airmen to fight as units.

"Every Australian would thrill to read of the share of Australian squadrons in defense of the motherland. But unimaginative brass hats with stereotyped minds deny us that. Not until we have representation in the kind of imperial war cabinet which directed the empire's efforts to victory in 1918 will Australia's national aspirations in this war be given proper expression."

Commenting on the statement of Baron Snell, deputy leader of the British government in the house of lords, that the time was "not opportune" for the formation of an imperial war cabinet, the Sunday Sun proceeded:

"Baron Snell is typical of that section of British thought which is remarkable for its lack of understanding of dominion ideals and aspirations.

"As partners in the British commonwealth of nations, Australia, Canada, and New Zealand are equally in the war with Britain. We are prepared to share the toil, the sorrow, the sacrifice. We have a right to know the path we are following, to advise on the steps the empire shall take.

"We want no more Norway debacles, no more Dakar blunders. We want no more cloaking of the needs of our fighting men with anonymity. We want Hitler to know that, as dominions, we are in this fight to a finish. Representation in an imperial war cabinet will force recognition of that fact."

W. J. McKell, leader of the Labor Opposition in the state parliament of New South Wales, said: "The Australian government must insist on a voice in those councils which decide how the empire's forces shall be used to protect ourselves. . . . The situation today is too serious for the Australian people to be content to resign their destiny as a nation into other hands, either because their own government lacks initiative, or to satisfy the Olympian self-esteem of English elder statesmen."

Australians are observing closely the silent revolution being wrought in England by the war and believe the forecast of Ernest Bevin, British minister for labor, that the tyranny of the "old school tie" will disappear after the war. The Australians were particularly impressed by Bevin's declaration that never again must the foreign office be restricted to the privileged classes of England. Newspapers wrote editorials about the "new order," and it became a pet subject with public speakers. Sydney's conservative Morning Herald wrote:

"The new order would be a mockery of our present hopes and tribulations if it permitted unemployment still to condemn people to a hopeless poverty, or monetary weaknesses to prevent the full use of a nation's resources and the most generous possible distribution of its products."

The more radical Sydney Daily Telegraph wrote: "We are at war largely because the old diplomacy failed to keep us out of war. It is not surprising, therefore, that there should be a great wave of resentment against the old order in Britain and a demand for a 'new deal' in politics. It was in response to this demand that Mr. Chamberlain [former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain] resigned and Mr. Churchill [Prime Minister Winston Churchill] became leader of the Conservative party in the face of strong opposition from party members.

"Britain is slowly understanding that, on a purely realistic basis of obtaining the highest efficiency, she must reorganize her diplomatic system and civil service. It is the morale of the common people of Britain, far more than ships and soldiers, that is enabling Britain to withstand the Nazi onslaught. The common people will demand that their voice be heard more and more in the expression of their country's policy."

The Sydney Sun wrote: "One of the basic principles of democracy is equality of opportunity, and this division of the nation by the 'old school tie' into a 'ruling class' and other classes denies this principle. Mr. Bevin announces that the diplomatic service will be opened to any one qualified, instead of to the 'limited court circular society of the chancelleries.' It is to be hoped that this will be done. British diplomacy has not had much success during the years preceding the war, and less since the war began. It must be regarded, in Mr. Bevin's phrase, as likely that 'if a boy from a secondary school can save us in a Spitfire, the same brain can be turned to the production of a new world.'"

The Sydney Truth wrote: "The autocracy that has ruled England for too long will disappear as the war progresses, and then England will emerge a true democracy for the first time in her history.

"The time servers, political misfits and deadbeats and fossils who have 'graced' the house of lords for so long, will disappear when the old order changeth. These crusty gentlemen, when they can no longer command a position in the house of commons as the elect of the people, are elevated to the peerage. Here they wield the big stick over the elected representatives of the people in the house of commons."

While the foregoing criticisms are quoted to relate to adjustments, hearty tributes are paid to the noble conception of liberty held in Britain by all classes. There also is acknowledgment that all classes are prepared to die in common kinship for that cause.

ARE YOU SORRY FOR YOURSELF?

WE are all creatures of our special environments. While we may exhibit strong individual traits, we mirror many of the characteristics of those about us. No one is sufficient unto himself and happiness depends upon contentment—which must come from our friends and from our surroundings. No matter how minor a part one plays in world affairs the consciousness that his work is well done is gratifying.

But there are some who are never satisfied—they cannot get ahead because they are quite too restless. The simple yet essential tasks of the day are neglected because too much time is spent in grandiose dreams for the future. More often than not these beautiful air castles fail to materialize and disappointments and despondency ensue.

On the other hand, ambition is a highly desirable trait and all normal persons desire to better their lot. But when dissatisfaction is paramount, gloom and despair are the aftermath. Rarely will an exceptional genius evolve from a grumbler or a grouch.

Nowadays physicians encounter more "queer" patients than ever before. This rather sizable group represents those with unstable nervous systems who are unable, in consequence, to cope with the world as they find it. Perhaps national and international unrest has contributed powerfully to this situation. At any rate, we are forced to admit that dependency—even mendicancy—has robbed millions of our citizens of certain indispensable qualities. Are we a free and independent people? If not, what is the remedy?

Nothing is to be gained by wringing the hands. If the roof leaks, mend it. But do it in dry weather before a storm launches a deluge, destroying the comforts within.

At least we can resolve to give our level best to every job that comes. Interest and enthusiasm increase efficiency. If rebuffs appear, we must try to discover whether they are justified. We can adopt a philosophy of life that will banish worry and hence save nerves. But this does not mean that we should be indifferent to criticisms or become calloused to suggestions. Deprived of a willingness to improve, we will plow a rut and remain therein.

I am more than ever convinced that a large proportion of our mental breakdowns arise because of selfishness. We give but little of ourselves to our communities—our state and nation—while we demand much. We become so self-centered in our thoughts and acts that we literally s h r i n k mentally. Conversely, we grow in intellectual stature as we envision the plight of the other fellow and do what we can to assist him.

The preservation of a sane outlook upon life, then, depends upon ourselves. Some will need help and sympathy from others. A few will be like sponges and become drains upon the nervous storage batteries of every member of the family. A fair proportion will need an outlet—one or more companions to whom emotional conflicts can be poured forth—with the hearers in an understanding mood. Without such a safety valve physical illness all too often is accepted as an alibi. Here the compassionate medical man can bring to a victim the type of encouragement that is needed—with a clear analysis of his symptoms.

Medical scientists have made great progress along many lines. Most of our infectious diseases have been robbed of their aforetime terrors, but we have a long way to go in our study of the emotions. Mental hygiene is probably more important today than any single phase of national health.

COLORED LIGHTS.

Mr. J. C. writes: At times when I look at a light it appears to have a circle of various colors around it. Is this significant?

REPLY.

Possibly—as it is one of the signs of hardening of the eyeball [glaucoma]. Ask your eye physician to investigate. Do not delay.

NOT ORGANIC.

Mrs. R. C. writes: Is a functional murmur common? Is it serious?

REPLY.

It is fairly prevalent and never serious. In fact, physicians pay far more attention to the condition of the heart muscle. If the rate is not overly rapid and the resulting circulation is good there is nothing to worry about. Such sounds are heard frequently in the presence of anemia.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, THE TRIBUNE.

HOOVER VS. ROOSEVELT.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Don't laugh. The campaign of 1932 may be over but the opposite theories of the two gentlemen still need to be cleared up. In spite of all the ballyhoo of three campaigns it seems to me the two divergent economies have not been clearly explained.

Let us take the case of a factory employing about 500 people. The time is 1932. The depression is on—no business in sight and slim prospects. Mr. Hoover, thru his Reconstruction Finance corporation, would subsidize the owners of the factory thru loans so they could continue to operate, keep the distribution of goods and services flowing, and keep the 500 wage earners at work.

Mr. Roosevelt could not see "pouring" money in at the top in the hope that a little would "trickle" down to the working man. Rather, he gave the money direct in relief and nonproductive work under PWA, CWA, and WPA, and let the factories and their owners go.

Some one says, "Yes. But why keep on producing when we already have overproduction?" We have never had overproduction in this country. It has been underconsumption. Ask yourself, "What could I buy if I had the money?" Another suit of clothes, an extra pair of shoes or two, a new set of golf clubs, a new chair, etc. The list is indefinite. If we could all buy what we actually needed without going into luxury items the wheels of industry could keep humming indefinitely. How much more could those 500 employés have purchased with the wages from their jobs than from meager relief checks and WPA allowances?

One of the more intelligent talks of the recent campaign was made by Jesse Jones of the RFC in which he pointed out how helpful this organization had been and how much of the money loaned thru it had been and is being repaid. But I failed to hear any one give a good report of the money spent under WPA and similar New Deal agencies. There is, of course, no doubting that this money has done a tremendous amount of good in preventing hunger and suffering, but here we are comparing two different methods of preventing such troubles. I am confident that had Mr. Hoover's plan been followed in 1933 by priming from the top as any good farmer knows a pump should be primed the country would have been saved much. And it could have been accomplished at far less cost than the method followed. People would have had creative work instead of created jobs under relief. Industry and commerce would have been kept moving instead of stagnating and the people would not have lost morale as they have under the relief system. In addition, a large portion of money loaned [not given] would now be coming back thru earnings instead of having to be paid "thru the sweat of every man who labors."

It is still not too late to give industry and business a break and let them put the country on its feet if the powers that be will only give them the opportunity to do so. M. D. PARKER.

EXCHANGE OF STUDENTS.

[See editorial in column 2.]

Chicago, Nov. 12.—In order to promote Pan-American good will, I would appreciate your consideration of these suggestions:

1. Give general publicity to the idea of exchanging student scholarships with the students of Central and South American countries. It is equally important for us to widen our knowledge of them as for them to know us better.

2. Conduct some contest which would award $1,000 scholarships to American students to study in the colleges of these other countries. We Americans know very little of South and Central America and undoubtedly increased knowledge would result in more favorable relationships between the countries.

3. Publish a fairly long and carefully drawnup series of articles on South American geography and history.

I believe that the carrying out of one or all three of these ideas might well be the start of a sizable movement of far reaching importance.

DEWITT WORCESTER,
International House, University of Chicago.

CITES JESUS' TEACHING.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—I have waited until I can wait no longer to react to the letter signed by 12 of my clerical brethren and good friends, every one asking us to stop our instinctive desire to "feed the hungry and clothe the naked" wherever they are and whoever they are—in any case our fellow children of God.

Jesus urged us to feed our enemies, I suppose, when He bade us "Love your enemies." Why and how ministers could urge people to refuse to do what they should not fail to do, by instruction of Jesus as well as by the voice of God in each man's soul, I cannot guess, except that "the world is too much with us." However, this letter is not to condemn the ecclesiastical 12 as much as to clear my own conscience. NORMAN B. BARR.

SHIVERING IN A SCHOOL.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—I am a student of the commercial department at Washburne Trade school. During the remodeling period of the old building of the school the students had no heat whatsoever during September, October, and even November! It is so cold there that we can see our own breath in the classrooms. Every one attends classes attired in heavy winter coats, hats, gloves, and even ear muffs.

It is impossible to typewrite or take shorthand dictation under these conditions. Many of the students got severe colds and others were forced to go home because they couldn't stand the cold.

One teacher told me "we would have no heat until after Thanksgiving and would have to wait for the downtown office to give the order for heat." My mother called the school board's complaint department without results.

I hope THE TRIBUNE can help us to remedy this condition. There are a lot of cold days between now and Thanksgiving. This is really a fine school otherwise.

A STUDENT.

MEET FORCE WITH WISDOM.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Can any one conceive the logic of meeting "force with force"? Every example of that process that I have ever seen results in combustion, and destruction of both forces.

To meet force with wisdom is more like the American way I should think.

MRS. N. ANDERSON.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If possible will you kindly give me what information you can about the following case? Some time before my father passed away he deeded his property to his four married daughters.

1. Since his death one of the daughters has passed away, leaving a son by her first husband, who also is dead, and her second husband. She did not leave any will.

2. Is it necessary for her part of this property to be probated and who is the proper person to do this?

3. The son or his stepfather?

4. Will there be any difficulty in case this property is sold?

5. Is the stepfather considered an heir?

6. Is it necessary for him to sign or for the husbands of the living daughters to sign in case the property is sold? This property is located in La Porte county, Ind. H. P.

1. Her share would pass to her heirs.
2. Probate would be necessary in order to produce a readily salable title to real estate.

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 7.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Is it possible in the state of Illinois for a husband to claim a share of the wife's inheritance? R. B.

CHARGE CONSENT DECREE FREEZES FILM MONOPOLY

Independents' Protection Lacking, Says Attorney.

Campaign news blanketed the announcement recently that a consent decree had been handed down in the government's much publicized drive on the alleged motion picture trust. Now that the election is over, motion picture operators are studying the decree.

It is reported that the more study they give [illegible] the more they suspect that the decree allegedly designed to protect the independent theater owners, will freeze monopoly in the industry more firmly than ever before. And this time the monopoly seems to have the approval of the department of justice.

"In my opinion," said Joseph Rosenberg, attorney for the Allied Theater Owners of Illinois, "the department of justice with this consent decree has blessed the present motion picture monopoly instead of unfreezing it."

"Complete Recession" Seen.

Attorney Rosenberg called attention to a statement issued to members of the Allied organization, made up of 110 theater owners in Illinois. Abram F. Myers, general counsel for the parent organization of the Allied, said in this statement:

"The main object of the government's recent suit was to compel the distributors to divorce themselves from their theater holdings. However, the decree marks a complete recession by the department from the position taken by it in pleadings in the case.

"Exhibitors do not know what influence intervened in the department of justice and brought about this abrupt change of front. Gossip naturally centers on prominent personages who are directly or indirectly interested in the motion picture industry."

Big Names in Industry.

Theater men cited the position of Frank S. Walker, postmaster general, as president of the Comerford theater chain, with 105 theaters in Pennsylvania and New York state. The chain is connected with the Paramount company.

James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, is head of the Globe Productions company, a moving picture concern.

The consent decree was drawn to end court action brought against the big five of the motion picture industry on June 20, 1938, under the Sherman antitrust act. Defendants are Paramount Pictures, Inc.; Loew's, Inc.; RKO Pictures, Inc.; Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc.; Twentieth Century-Fox Film corporation, and their subsidiary and affiliated companies.

Judge Reserves Decision.

Approval of the court is necessary before the decree goes into operation. Judge Henry W. Goddard heard objections Thursday in the United States District court in New York City and reserved his decision. The decree has been accepted by government representatives and defendants.

Three other companies — United Artists, Universal Pictures, and Columbia Pictures—were named defendants in the original bill of complaint. They did not join the consent decree and are awaiting court action by the government.

The announced main object of the suit against the motion picture companies was the divorcement of motion picture production and distribution from exhibition. The litigation also was aimed at the evils of block booking and blind buying.

What Block Booking Is.

Under the block booking system a theater owner was forced to contract for all the major pictures of a given studio for a year in advance. By doing this he must buy blind with a bare outline of the picture at hand.

In regard to producers and distributors owning motion picture theaters, the official department of justice statement explaining the beginning of the antitrust litigation said:

"The department has concluded after long and careful study that free competition in the industry [both in production and exhibition] ought to be restored and that the most direct course to that end is to divorce the business of production and distribution from that of exhibition."

Delays Action for Three Years.

The consent decree, however, holds that "the government will not seek divorcement or dissolution for a period of three years. In the interim the defendants have agreed not to engage in any general program of expansion of theater holdings, with certain stated exceptions. Thus the status quo will be maintained during the three year period to the extent that it is practicable."

The statement by Attorney Myers to the Illinois Allied organization called attention to the divorcement section of the decree that points out that the order shall not "prevent any defendant from acquiring theaters or interests therein to protect its investment or its competitive position or for ordinary purposes of business."

"Had it not been for the clause 'or for ordinary purposes of its business'," the statement said, "the standstill would have been similar to that existing under a temporary injunction, with freedom of action only to protect existing property rights pending final outcome of the case. But the addition of this clause robs the section of all its force, renders the section so vague that it cannot be enforced and marks a capitulation by the department of justice as astonishing as it is complete."

In regard to block booking, the decree rules that the producer and distributor must restrict his sales to groups of five pictures. All pictures must be shown to the trade before they are offered for sale, the decree holds, in order to halt blind buying. These provisions do not take effect until the opening of the next motion picture buying season on Sept. 1, 1941.

PRO-WAR GROUP DENIES IT HAS SPENT A MILLION

Tells Aims for Additional Aid to Britain.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 16.—Spokesmen for the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, leading interventionist organization in the country, today denied reports they had spent a million dollars on their pro-war propaganda campaign.

Officials of the committee, which is headed by William Allen White, announced at the national headquarters here that a total of $221,382 had been received in contributions and $203,752 spent as of Nov. 9.

The campaign for contributions has been promoted by John Price Jones, Inc., an expert fund-raising concern which receives a slice of all the money collected. According to committee officials, individual contributors numbered 10,206 at the close of business on Nov. 9.

Other Figures Unavailable.

There were no figures available, the officials said, on the money collected and spent by the 719 local chapters of the committee organized thruout the nation. They claimed the amounts were negligible.

These chapters are at the moment engaged in arranging the so called "unity mass meetings" where a forum is provided for the committee's pro-war speakers. Hearers are urged to get behind President Roosevelt for "national defense." The various chapters also distribute the tons of propaganda literature which the committee is showering on the populace and help out with local radio programs.

Committee officials asserted the figures on their national budget included approximately $25,000 raised and spent by Robert Sherwood, the playwright who wrote the "Stop Hitler Now" full page avertisments carried by leading newspapers in the country in June.

Two Other Advertisments.

In addition, the spendig item also reflects the cost of two other newspaper ad series titled "Between Us and Hitler Stand the British Fleet" and "Help Britain and It Won't Happen Here."

Now that the Presidential election is over, the Committee to Defend, etc., is waxing bolder in its drive toward war. Before the tilt at the polls the committee concentrated its efforts on building up public sentiment for the transfer of the 50 American destroyers to the British navy and for aid along other lines.

But the latest batches of propaganda leaflets put out by the committee are urging an outright declaration of war against Germany by the United States immediately. The literature is similar to that of the last war in its promise that the trick can be done without sending an American expeditionary force to foreign shores.

A New Pamphlet.

This call to arms is sounded in the new pamphlet, "Battle of America—How We Can Avoid It," by Livingston Hartley, well known interventionalist author. Held up until after the election, this inflammatory publication is now being distributed by the thousands. Hartley painted an attractive picture for the immediate entry of the United States.

"We know in our hearts that we shall not escape a battle of America if Germany wins this war," declared Hartley.

"We know that we should have only one way of escape then. That would be surrender to Hitler and his partners, surrender of our independence and liberties, in order to avoid attack. America is not going to surrender. America will fight first."

Hartley went on to argue this country would be better off jumping into the conflict now while the British fleet is intact and can be integrated with the American navy. In the meanwhile, he insisted, the United States should take every gamble and risk to help Britain to the utmost. He also disclosed new objectives of the pro-war forces.

"Things Unthought Of."

"We may have to give Britain greater priority in deliveries of new military planes," he continued. "We may have to change the neutrality act to allow Britain to buy our products on credit. We may have to change the neutrality act to allow these products to go to Britain in American ships. We may have to become a nonbelligerent instead of a neutral. We may have to do things unthought of now to help Britain win.

"It will be objected by those who will not look ahead that all such steps risk war. Yet Hitler cannot attack us as long as he is fighting for his life against England. He will not court defeat in a fit of temper knowing that he cannot get at us and that we, thanks to Britain's command of the Atlantic, can get at him."

There was no mention in Hartley's effort of any possibility of this country trying to get along with Germany.

HIDE IN TRUCK; ROB DRIVER.

Lawrence Bloom, driver for a dry cleaning shop, was robbed of $25 and a suit of clothes last night by two robbers who waited in his truck at 6902 Paxton avenue until he returned from a delivery.

WEDDING UNITES MARY HALE AND H. F. GILLETTE JR.

Julie Walcott and Jane Anderson Also Brides.

BY JUDITH CASS.

In a lovely ceremony in Christ chuch chapel in Winnetka yesterday noon Miss Mary Hale became the bride of Howard F. Gillette Jr. Miss Hale is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Hale of Winnetka and Mr. Gillette is the son of the Howard F. Gillettes of Santa Barbara, Cal., formerly of Chicago.

The Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard read the ceremony, which was followed by a wedding breakfast in the home of the bride's parents. Mr. Gillette and his bride will be at home on East Walton place after their return from a trip to Tryon, N. C.

Miss Hale wore the lovely ivory satin wedding gown which belongs to Mr. Gillette's aunt, Mrs. Charles Wesley Dempster [Mary Gillette]. The heavy Brussels lace on the gown was echoed in the lace Juliet cap which held the circular tulle veil in place. Miss Hale carried a bouquet of Easter lilies and lilies of the valley.

Miss Eunice Hale, who came from Bryn Mawr, was her sister's only attendant. Mr. Gillette Sr. was best man.

Julie Walcott Married.

In another ceremony in Christ Church chapel yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, Miss Julie Walcott became the bride of David R. Gallagher. The Rev. Mr. Gerhard officiated. The wedding guests returned to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Howe Walcott of Highland Park, after the ceremony, to drink a toast to the young couple. Mr. Gallagher is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael F. Gallagher of Highland Park. After a wedding trip to Florida and Jamaica, Mr. Gallagher and his bride will live in his home in Deere Park drive.

Miss Walcott wore the satin and lace gown in which her mother and her sister, Mrs. Roderick McKenzie, were married. A coronet of the lace which belonged to her grandmother held her veil in place.

Mrs. McKenzie was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Charles Butland and Miss Evelyn Shuman. Charles Butland was best man.

Mullins-Anderson Rites.

Miss Jane Anderson wore her mother's pearls with her white satin gown for her marriage to Frederic John Mullins in St. Paul's Episcopal church at 8:30 o'clock last night. Miss Anderson is the daughter of Mrs. E. Malcolm Anderson of Greenwood avenue and the granddaughter of James E. MacMurray, former Illinois state senator. Mr. Mullins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Mullins of Long Beach, Cal., and Salem, O. The Rev. F. C. Benson Belliss officiated. After a wedding reception in the home of the bride's mother, Mr. Mullins and his bride left for a motor trip to the south.

RADICALS' VOTES DECIDE N. Y. RACE, ANALYSIS SHOWS

Democratic Party Still in Minority Role.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 16.—The radical vote in New York state tipped the scales toward President Roosevelt in the election 10 days ago, an analysis of nearly complete returns showed today.

Mr. Roosevelt carried his native state by approximately 250,000 as compared with the 1,112,000 plurality he enjoyed in 1936 over Republican nominee Alfred M. Landon.

This margin of victory in 1940 over Wendell L. Willkie was more than accounted for by between 400,000 and 450,000 votes cast for the President by the so-called American Labor party. The Labor party, strictly a New York product, is a rallying standard for thousands of communists in New York City, disgrunted Socialists, and parlor pinks.

The party had no official Presidential nominee of its own or on the ballot, but informally indorsed the candidacy of Roosevelt.

Democrats Lag Again.

For the second time in two years the Democrats wound up as a minority party in the state. The G. O. P. became the majority party in 1938 when District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey was beaten for the governorship by only 65,000 votes by the incumbent, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman.

In the gubernatorial election the Laborites also furnished the balance of power for the Democratic candidate, polling 419,979 for Lehman. The Labor party gave the President 274,924 votes in 1936 and turned out 482,790 for Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia's election in 1937.

This year's sizable bloc of Labor party votes went to Roosevelt despite a bitter cleavage in the organization. The state structure of the party is in the control of the big textile leaders like Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and David Dubinsky, president of the Ladies' Garment Workers. The New York county wing is dominated by the communists.

Hitler Pact Brings Schism.

Stalin's nonaggression pact with Hitler at the outset of the European war and the Russian dictator's subsequent friendly actions toward the Nazis brought about the schism. Prior to that the communists were welcome in the Labor party.

Figures have not yet been released by the secretary of state on the communist write-in vote for their Presidential candidate, Earl Browder. Reports of district bell pushers for both the Republican and Democratic parties were that many of the communists were sticking with Roosevelt.

This was accounted for, it was said, by the work done by numerous communists and fellow travelers who still hold positions in the relief and public works setups here in New York City, as well as the Reds holding key positions in federal departments and enterprises.

Ruled Off Ballot.

In a ruling by the Court of Appeals, the highest judicial tribunal in the state, the communist party was ruled off the ballot this year on the grounds signatures to their petitions were fraudulently obtained. Republicans do not regard it as very likely that the Reds voted their ticket. They think most of them balloted for Roosevelt under the Labor party emblem.

In addition the Labor party received an increment of votes from the Socialists who were likewise split over the war.

Drinking by Pedestrians in Car Crashes Shows Rise

A trend toward increased drinking among pedestrians involved in automobile accidents was evident during October, George G. Traver, manager of the Greater Chicago Safety council, reported yesterday. In October, 1939, only one pedestrian involved in an accident was found to have been drinking, while this year the number increased to 49.

[ADVERTISMENT]

THE KING GOES ON AN AMAZING HUNTING TRIP

During the recent cold spell, the King went on a hunting trip. Unfortunately he ran out of bullets just about the time he happened upon a big bear, in an ugly mood. Naturally this disturbed the King some and he broke into a cold sweat—so cold in fact that the beads of perspiration froze into solid chunks.

Thinking fast, the King took the frozen beads, rammed them into his gun and shot them with unerring aim. But when these unusual bullets found their mark in the bear's head they melted and it looked bad for the King until the liquid began to do its work and the poor bear died from water on the brain.

Now, you may think that's a tall tale—just as many people wonder at the amazing prices the King displays in his ads. But while you may have trouble checking up on the hunting story, it's a simple matter to verify these values. Just take a hunting trip down to the King's Lumber Yard. You won't run into any bears but you'll see some bargains in top quality building materials that are real "bears" for value. And you can bring them down with mere buckshot, so generous are our budget terms.

CANCEL DIES' SPY HEARING IN FEAR OF NAZI REPRISAL

Hitler Set to Expel U. S. Consuls, Says Texan.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—Representative Martin Dies [D., Tex.], chairman of the committee investigating un-American activities, today called off hearings scheduled for next week on the subversive activities of German and Italian consuls in this country.

Dies said he feared that if public hearings were held, "some voluntary or irrelevant statement" in the testimony might be seized upon by German or Italian governments as a pretext for demanding the recall of American consular agents from Germany and Italy.

The chairman said he had received information that Hitler plans such an action as a reprisal against any committee disclosures.

Reveals Hitler's Plan.

Dies added that he is in favor of releasing a 500-page report of committee investigators showing the fifth column activities of German consuls and agents in this country. He said he will seek the approval of other committee members to take this action.

"It has come to me from reliable sources that cannot be disputed that Hitler already has made his plans to demand the recall of certain American consular representatives in Germany and conquered territory," Dies said. "We do not want to give them a pretext for such a demand.

"The evidence we have is well documented and proven in such a way that there is no dispute about it. I think the best method would be to release the evidence itself."

Two Aims Uppermost.

The "reliable sources" mentioned by Dies are believed to refer to the state department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which have opposed open hearings by the Dies committee.

"If an attempt were made to subpena consuls to testify at committee hearings, the Germans might do the same thing in a harsher way in retaliation," Dies said.

"The evidence we have confirms that the axis partners, Germany, Italy, Japan, and Russia, are working very closely in the United States, exchanging information and coöperating actively in many ways.

"They want, first, to prevent this country from quickly preparing its defense; and, second, to prevent our extending aid to Britain.

"There is no question that their agents are entrenched in industries vital to national defense. That proof already has been obtained."

ABBOTT ESTATE GIVES EVANSTON HOSPITAL $40,000

Trustees of the Abbott estate yesterday announced a gift of $40,000 to the Evanston Hospital association, bringing to $125,000 the estate's gifts to the hospital, in addition to land valued at $150,000.

Robert T. Sherman, president of the association, said the $125,000 will be used in the construction of a two story clinical and research laboratory to the north of the hospital at 2650 Ridge avenue, Evanston. Work on the structure already is under way, and it will be completed about March 1, Sherman said.

The Abbott estate was established under the will of Mrs. Clara A. Abbott, widow of Dr. Wallace C. Abbott, who founded Abbott Laboratories. Trustees are Alfred W. Bays and Henry B. Shattuck.

HUNTER ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Boy Skaters Drown

Kane county's first ice skating tragedy of the season took the lives of two seventh grade pupils yesterday in South Elgin, three miles south of Elgin on the Fox river. A third boy, who attempted to rescue his companions, narrowly escaped drowning.

The victims were William Walz, 12 years old, and Edward Nichols, 13, both of South Elgin. Their companion, Lyle Campbell, 11, of the same city, saw his two friends drop as the thin ice gave way beneath them about fifteen feet from the west bank of the river. Lying flat on the ice, young Campbell stretched out his leg to help Walz but was pulled in himself.

The boys' cries attracted Mrs. Peter Johnson and her son, Stanley, 12, who live nearby. By the time the Johnsons reached the river, Lyle was clinging to the ice alone. They pulled him to safety with a 10 foot branch from a willow tree. Firemen from Elgin and South Elgin recovered the bodies of the other two boys, but attempts of an inhalator squad to revive them were in vain.

MARTIN BECK IS DEAD; EX-DEAN OF VAUDEVILLE

New York, Nov. 16 [Special].—Martin Beck, once dean of the country's vaudeville showmen and veteran producer in the legitimate theater, died today following an operation.

Beck, who built the famous Palace theater which became the goal of every vaudeville actor, was in his early 70s. His wife, Louise, was at his bedside.

Beck, who was born in Czecho-Slovakia, came to the United States as an actor for German companies. One day, stranded in Chicago, he walked into a beer garden and induced them to let him put on a show. Soon he was drawing so many people that admission was charged. He was invited to run a music hall next door, and that led him to open a vaudeville house in San Francisco, Cal., which was the first of the Orpheum theaters. For 27 years he was president of the Orpheum circuit, which eventually numbered 48 theaters.

Last year Beck accused his niece, Mrs. Lillian Schrein, who was manager of his corporation, of theft. She contended that large sums of money she acquired constituted gifts of a man to his mistress. However, she was convicted and sentenced to two to four years in prison.

RED PARTY ACTS TO MAINTAIN ITS STANDING IN U. S.

Votes to Cut Link with Internationale.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—A special national convention of the communist party adopted unanimously today a resolution to "cancel and dissolve organization affiliation to the communist internationale and all other bodies of any kind outside the boundaries of the United States."

Recommended by the party's national committee, the resolution said the purpose of the action was to "remove the communist party from the terms of the so-called Voorhis act" which becomes law next January.

The committee's recommendation was made known to the 200 delegates in an address by Earl Browder, national secretary, who termed the act "harmful and destructive of the democratic rights of the people."

Act Requires Registration.

The Voorhis act requires registration with the justice department of all "foreign controlled" organizations, which it defines as those receiving material support from a foreign government or political subdivision or from a foreign or international political party, or whose policies are determined by or at the suggestion or in collaboration with a foreign government or political party.

In registering, such organizations are required to file the names and addresses of their officers and of all governments, organizations or persons who contribute anything of value to them. Maximum penalties for nonregistration are fixed at $10,000 and five years in prison.

Aimed at Violent Action.

In addition to foreign controlled organizations, the act requires registration of any organization whose aim is overthrow of the government by force or violence or is engaged in military activity or aims at control of the government by any unconstitutional means.

Browder declared that the Voorhis bill was "the American application of Hitler's reichstag fire trial," and asserted that the communist party was "not under any foreign control, but does have international affiliations."

IOWA BEATS NOTRE DAME, 7 TO 0; N.U. LOSES

MINNESOTA TAKES BIG NINE TITLE; OHIO STATE, WISCONSIN WIN

IRISH FUMBLES SET UP HAWKEYE TOUCHDOWN; GREEN GOES OVER

Upset Snaps Victory String at Six Straight.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 16.—Iowa's valiant Hawkeyes, deserted by thousands of their fans after losing four straight games, this afternoon played Notre Dame's Irish off their feet in the final quarter to win, 7 to 0, on a touchdown by Bill Green, the young man against whom the Irish had been warned a million times this week. Bill Gallagher added the point.

Thus did the Hawkeyes cast down 48,000 Notre Dame enthusiasts and thrill 2,000 Iowa loyalists who witnessed Iowa's first visit to Notre Dame in history. Iowa used only 15 men.

The outcome gave the Hawks a record of three victories in history over Notre Dame to none for the Irish. The first was 10 to 7 in Iowa City in 1921, the second that 7 to 6 drama special in Iowa City a year ago. Last year's Iowa victory in Notre Dame's seventh game cracked a slate of six straight triumphs. Today's accomplishment also gave the Irish their first defeat in seven games. Incidentally, it was the first shutout for Notre Dame since the 13 to 0 Southern California victory in 1938.

They Earn the Victory.

Iowa got its opportunity on two fumbles after the half way mark in the final period, but these Irish misadventures did not detract from the Hawkeyes' accomplishment. The fumbles, the first by Capt. Milt Piepul on Iowa's 12 yard line, and the second by Steve Bagarus several minutes later on the first play after Iowa had failed in an attempted field goal from placement, apparently came when Milt and Steve were hit so hard their teeth rattled.

Early in the decisive fourth period Notre Dame advanced inside the Iowa 1 yard line where the Irish relinquished the ball. Jim Youel, kicking from the edge of his end zone, got off a beautiful punt to the Irish 42 yard line. Notre Dame made another big rush goalward which faltered when Piepul fumbled on the Iowa 12 yard line, a fumble which Capt. Mike Enich recovered in the air and carried to the Iowa 47 yard line before Piepul bumped him out of bounds. A second later Youel kicked to the Irish 25 yard line, where followed a pass interception by Al Couppee, who was downed after Al had run eight yards to the Irish 33.

Then Came the Payoff.

Green got four yards, a pass by Youel missed, and Gallagher, replacing Barney Mertes, gained a yard. At this juncture, Gallagher made the aforesaid try for a field goal from placement on the 25 yard line. The ball was wide to the left and was taken out to the Irish 20. Here was where Bagarus fumbled, Ken Pettit recovering on the 24. Green then skirted his left end for eleven yards, after which he followed thru his right tackle for twelve more yards to the Irish 2 yard line before Gordy O'Reilly brought him down. Gallagher hit for a yard at center, then Green broke to his right, cut back thru the line and scored standing up. Gallagher's kick from placement was perfect.

Irish Lost Last Chance.

Notre Dame's hopes of a tie were smothered shortly after the final kickoff. On the second play, Bob Saggau's pass was intercepted by George Frye on the Irish 34 yard line. Green was good for seven yards on two plays, then Iowa was set back five yards for stalling. Youel went for seven and Green for six, after which Gallagher juggled the ball and took a one yard loss. The same player came right back for a seven yard smash to the Irish 6 yard line. On the next play Iowa smothered the ball, seconds before the final gun sounded.

The only consolation for the startled Irish in their defeat is to be found in the big try which carried the ball to within two feet of the Iowa goal at the start of the final quarter.

Saggau Has a Costly Slip.

Late in the third quarter Saggau caught a punt by Youel on Iowa's 43 yard line and appeared to have got into the open, when he slipped and fell on the Iowa 29 yard line. Saggau's pass into the end zone was incomplete, but another toss, Saggau to Juzwik, was good for twenty yards and first down on Iowa's 10 yard line. Enich broke thru to toss Piepul for a four yard loss as the third period ended.

On the first play of the final quarter Piepul made nine yards and then added a couple. Juzwik squirmed to within two feet of a touchdown, and Iowa took over on downs at this point. We've told you how brilliantly Youel kicked out, and how the Irish surged back until Piepul fumbled on the Iowa 12 yard line, where Capt.

KNOX DEFEATS MONMOUTH, 13-6, IN 56TH GAME

Monmouth, Ill., Nov. 16 [Special].—Knox defeated Monmouth, 13 to 6, in the fifty-sixth game of their football series. It was Monmouth's largest crowd of the year and ended the Scots' season without a victory.

Monmouth scored in the first quarter, without relinquishing the ball after the kickoff on two long passes, McConnell to Kauzlarich. Knox scored late in the second quarter on a forward and lateral, Herde to Swallow to Freda. Late in the fourth quarter Knox intercepted a pass on the 42, had a pass ruled complete on the 19, and scored on a pass Sellman to Rosenow. Lineups:

Mount Vernon, Ia., Nov. 16 [Special].—Cornell scored a 13 to 7 Midwest conference victory over Carleton today. It was Carleton's first conference defeat and gave the title to Beloit, which closed its season last week.

Gene Tornquist, Cornell back, completely outshone Dick Raiter, tiny Carleton quarter back. After two long passes by Raiter for Carleton's first quarter touchdown, Raiter was checked. Tornquist came back to spark his mates to a two touchdown offensive in the third period.

HAWKEYES GANG UP ON JUZWIK

This picture, made during the second quarter, is symbolic of the doings at Notre Dame yesterday, where Iowa, underdog and unappreciated, upset a mighty Irish eleven, 7 to 0. Steve Juzwik, Notre Dame's star half back, was after a pass from his teammate, Bob Saggau, but four alert Hawkeyes got there first and Juzwik was upset. ## LONG RUNS BY FRANCK, SMITH AND DALEY BEAT PURDUE, 33-6

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 16.—If there was any doubt that Minnesota's Golden Gophers are not just a plain, old fashioned, good football team it was dissipated today as the kids from up in these snowy parts whacked Purdue's luckless Boilermakers, 33 to 6, before a contented Dad's day throng of 30,140.

The Gophers clinched the Western Conference championship for the fifth time since 1932 with as convincing a demonstration of sound football as the conference can hope to see this year, with fingers crossed for the Gophers' traditional meeting with Wisconsin in Madison next Saturday. It was Minnesota's fifth conference triumph.

Mernik Branches Out.

And if you hear of anybody saying they are lucky to have a fellow named Joe Mernik around, just because of the extra points with which Joseph licked Northwestern and Michigan, it need only be mentioned that Joe made seven points this afternoon, and all of them from the field. Not only did Joe contribute his customary point after touchdown, but he also chipped in with two field goals, one of them from a quartering angle at 25 yards, and one from the center at 27 yards, just for fun.

The Gophers' versatility is revealed in the fact that they scored within the first fourteen seconds and finally in the last twenty-eight seconds. George Franck, of whom you may have heard, was merely standing around at the opening kickoff when Quarter Back Bob Paffrath failed to field the ball. George footed the ball around at the 5 yard mark, and after scuffing it along for another five, kept going for a touchdown.

Purdue Is Shocked.

The Boilermakers never did seem to recover from this sudden jolt. Thruout the afternoon they looked none too sharp defensively until they were facing a combination of extras in the final quarter, when John Petty and Johnny Galvin led the drive that brought them their six points. The end of the game saw Jim Lushine, a 240 pound sophomore tackle, pilfering a Purdue pass out of the air and going on for the final touchdown.

Galvin, Petty, and Capt. Dave Rankin stood out for the losers and if anyone is interested, you might look not only for Mernik next season, but also for a sophomore full back named Bill Daley, who scored the third touchdown to give the Gophers a 20 to 0 margin at half time. Daley managed to lead the ground gainers with an average of 11.2 yards, collected off 79 yards in seven tries.

All in 14 Seconds.

The customers had barely seated themselves in the still damp pews when Master Franck committed his combination bumble-and-run, courtesy of his chum Paffrath. Purdue had kicked off, Petty doing the honors, with Carter holding the ball. Franck was almost on the verge of returning the boot as he attempted to pick up the ball at the 5 yard line. His pedal idea continued only to the 9 yard mark, where he finally managed to scoop up the leather and continue therefrom to the touchdown.

He chose the left side of the field for the journey, there being no Purdue parties in that sector to interrupt him, once he had traversed his own 25 yard stripe. All of this, with the kick which Gordon Paschka came in to accomplish, after having missed his usual starting assignment at right guard, required the aforesaid total of 14 seconds.

Gophers Mind P's and Q's.

From there on, as previously related, the mysterious decline of the Purdue tackling technique and the fortissimo tempo of the Gophers blocking made up the complexion of the first half. The Boilermakers just didn't produce the fundamentals with which the Minnesotans continued to move thru them for two more touchdowns before the intermission, one of them within less than another six minutes.

After the shocking introduction Purdue accepted the ensuing kickoff, and, after failing to gain any yardage, punted. The Boilermakers, no thanks

Illini Beaten by Buckeyes' Power, 14-6

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 16.—Ohio State's burly young men overpowered the Illini this chilly afternoon in Memorial stadium, 14 to 6. In the first period after possession on Illinois' first down quick kick and again in the third period the Buckeyes shoved thru the lighter Illinois line consistently. At the end of each march Don Scott, 215 pound Buckeye quarter back, smashed over the Illinois left tackle for a touchdown.

A Dads' day crowd of 15,571 watched Ohio State convincingly demonstrate its superiority on the ground [only four passes were attempted and all failed] and finally these loyal fans were rewarded with the promised Illini air attack that swept to the enemy's end zone in the last quarter.

In this surging assault Illinois momentarily startled their complacent foemen, but when the point after touchdown was missed, leaving Ohio State better than a touchdown ahead, the Buckeyes regained poise. Three times, however, in the concluding ten minutes Illini incipient thrusts were ended in pass interception else this story might have had a different ending.

Unable to Halt Sweeps.

When Ohio State's machine started to roll there was nothing Illinois could do about it. The Illini perforce had to play Ohio State's game, and when they were unable to match power with power, or even to check the Buckeyes' sweeping reverses and end runs by defensive speed, they were helpless.

Scott scored twice, but it might have been Jim Langhurst, battering Buckeye full back, or Tom Kinkade, whose wide reverses continually threatened the flanks of the Illini line. Behind Ohio State's superior forwards, all the Ohio State ball carriers moved irresistibly.

The brisk southwestern wind that whipped diagonally down the gridiron was an important factor since advantage clearly rested with the kicker, whose team defended the south goal. Moreover, Illinois' air attack could not function against the wind. Illinois threw only two passes against the wind but riddled the Buckeye defense in the closing period when

BADGERS WHIP HOOSIERS, 27-10, ON BIG 2D PERIOD

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., Nov. 16.—Wisconsin's Badgers, who have had more than their share of lean days, went touchdown crazy this afternoon on windswept Camp Randall stadium. They battered a supposedly talented Indiana university eleven into stray pieces to soar to their third Big Nine victory, 27 to 10, a margin more than sufficient to make amends for the 14 to 0 loss to the Hoosiers a year ago on the same field.

At the very outset, tho, they gave 16,000 Dad's day patrons the chills with a fumble which the Hoosiers prompty turned into a field goal. Things then began to happen quickly. George Paskvan swung into action in a touchdown march and six points dropped into the laps of the victors before the first quarter was finished. The next quarter revealed the Badgers at their best. Indiana, totally outclassed, added to its woes by fumbling and the Badgers piled up three more touchdowns before half time. Thereafter they weren't vitally interested in more points.

Badgers Hold Hursh in Check.

The Badgers removed the potential sting from the Hoosiers' assault by giving Hal Hursh, the pitching half back, little leeway. He tried to warm up his pitching arm for three quarters but his enemies were on his neck before he could locate possible receivers. Later he did better, possibly because the Badgers, comforted by their big lead, were less vigilant. It was Hal's arm that played a prominent rôle in the fourth period when the Hoosiers, knocked flat in two charges at the Wisconsin goal, bounced back with a third one that fashioned their last seven points.

What the Badgers did to the Indiana line is a convincing story of the latter's ineffectiveness. Paskvan made one hundred and one yards in 16 attempts. His understudy, Bob Ray, added thirty yards in seven tries. Six other backs made small contributions to a total of one hundred and sixty-four yards by rushing compared to a skimpy eight picked up by the Hoosiers by the same method. But Indiana tossed the ball for one hundred

WOLVERINES GAIN 20-13 VICTORY; STAVE OFF LATE WILDCAT RALLY

Wind Blown Punts Wreak Havoc with Purple.

BY HOWARD BARRY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 16.—The Michigan football team, showing early punch and late staying power, beat Northwestern, 20 to 13, today. But before it was over the Wildcats lived up to their name. Fighting back with a flaming spirit after trailing, 20 to 6, they put on a finish that kept the 76,749 spectators on edge until the final gun went off.

With a raging north by northwest wind flinging snow in their faces, the Northwestern players were backed up against their own goal line thruout the early stages. With the aid of some brilliant running by Tom Harmon, Bob Westfall, and Harold Lockard, and an alert job of punt blocking by Ed Frutig, Michigan scored twice during the first period and again in the second. Between the second and third Wolverine touchdowns, Northwestern had shown a single effective flash when Bill DeCorrevont tossed a pass to Bob Motl that traveled about 35 yards thru the air. Motl took it on the 25 yard line and scored.

Strong Finish Falls Short.

As the game wore on, the spectators were beginning to fear it would be a dull show. Michigan's lead seemed too firm to be threatened. But they were reckoning without the Northwestern finishing power. With 10 minutes left to play in the last quarter, the situation changed in a flash.

Northwestern had the ball on its own 20 yard line. The time was getting short and the goal was a long way off. The ball was snapped to Full Back Don Clawson. On a reverse he handed it to Ollie Hahnenstein—and the fleet Wildcat back was on his way.

Wide around the Michigan left end he swept. Ike Kepford took out one tackler with a smacking block. Clawson cut on down the field and took another. Suddenly the crowd realized that only Harmon, the safety man, was between the runner and the goal. While Harmon was coming up to try the tackle, three Northwestern blockers formed a convoy for Hahnenstein. They took care of the Michigan man on the Wolverine 35 yard line while Hahnenstein cut back toward the center of the field and from there on he easily outran his pursuers. Dick Erdlitz came in to kick goal and North-

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—Chicago's Bears, pace setters in the western division of the National Football league, will find out tomorrow whether they have what it takes to win a championship in the toughest competition the gridiron provides. Their opponents will be the Washington Redskins, leaders in the eastern section, and it is not unlikely that the winner will carry on to the league championship and the right to meet the college All-Stars in Chicago next August.

The Bears went to Griffith stadium for their final workout this morning shortly after their arrival. Coach George Halas pronounced the physical condition of his squad the best in several weeks. Full Back Bill Osmanski and George Musso, one of professional football's leading guards, both of whom have been incapacitated temporarily, are ready for service.

Sellout for Two Weeks.

The game will attract a capacity crowd of 32,000. Owner George Marshall of the Redskins says there would be 100,000 looking on, if he had a place to put the overflow. Griffith stadium was sold out two weeks ago.

Coach Ray Flaherty plans to start the same lineup tomorrow that opened the second half against Brooklyn last Sunday. This will bring two rookies into the Redskin's battle front. Bob Hoffman of Southern California, will assume Max Krause's blocking back position. The other is Bob Titchenal, young center from San Jose State.

The Bears undeniably possess great explosive force. They can hit a blow that travels like a thunder clap, but whether they can hold a stout pace against a team which specializes in an aerial offense is something nobody, not even the Bears themselves, knows. It was a forward pass in the closing seconds of play at Detroit which beat the Bears a week ago.

Baugh's Passing Threatens.

Led by Sammy Baugh, whose pyrotechnics thrilled 80,000 in the 1937 All-Star game when he was fresh from Texas Christian university, the Redskins have the most effective forward passing game the league has known. Baugh this season has completed 91 of his 140 passes for a total gain of 1,208 yards. Only five of his pegs have been intercepted. Frank Filchock of Indiana, who is Baugh's relief man, is no slouch as a passer, either. He has connected with 26 of his 51 tosses. Sid Luckman, the Bears' best passer, has clicked on 35 of his 75 aerials while Bernie Masterson, the Bears' next best chucker, has completed only four out of 14.

While Washington has a marked advantage over the Bears in the air, the teams are about equal in rushing. The Redskins have made 1,022 yards in 279 plays from scrimmage for an average of 3.6 yards while the Bears have carried the ball 367 times for 1,317 yards, an average of 3.5 per try.

Coach Flaherty had hoped to have Andy Farkas, the league's leading scorer last year, ready for tomorrow's game, but he has decided to give him another week's rest. Farkas underwent a knee operation last September. Washington also will operate without Turk Edwards at tackle. Edwards' days as a pro player are numbered because of leg troubles.

POWER, PASSES OF TEXAS AGGIES ROUT RICE, 25 TO 0

College Station, Tex., Nov. 16 (AP).—The Texas Aggies, with ruthless power and a fabulous passing game, crushed Rice institute today, 25 to 0, and reached the brink of a second successive unbeaten season.

Never, in their string of 19 victories, had the Cadets struck with such viciousness as today—tumbling thru once-beaten Rice for 406 yards by ground and air.

John Kimbrough, the massive full-back, presented his All-America case for 1940 by shredding Rice's line for 108 yards on eighteen attempts for an average six yard gain.

Kimbrough shared the glory with a 6 foot sophomore end, Bill Henderson, who threw the crowd of 30,000 into a panic with eight consecutive catches for a total of 117 yards. He grabbed passes all the way from two to thirty-four yards.

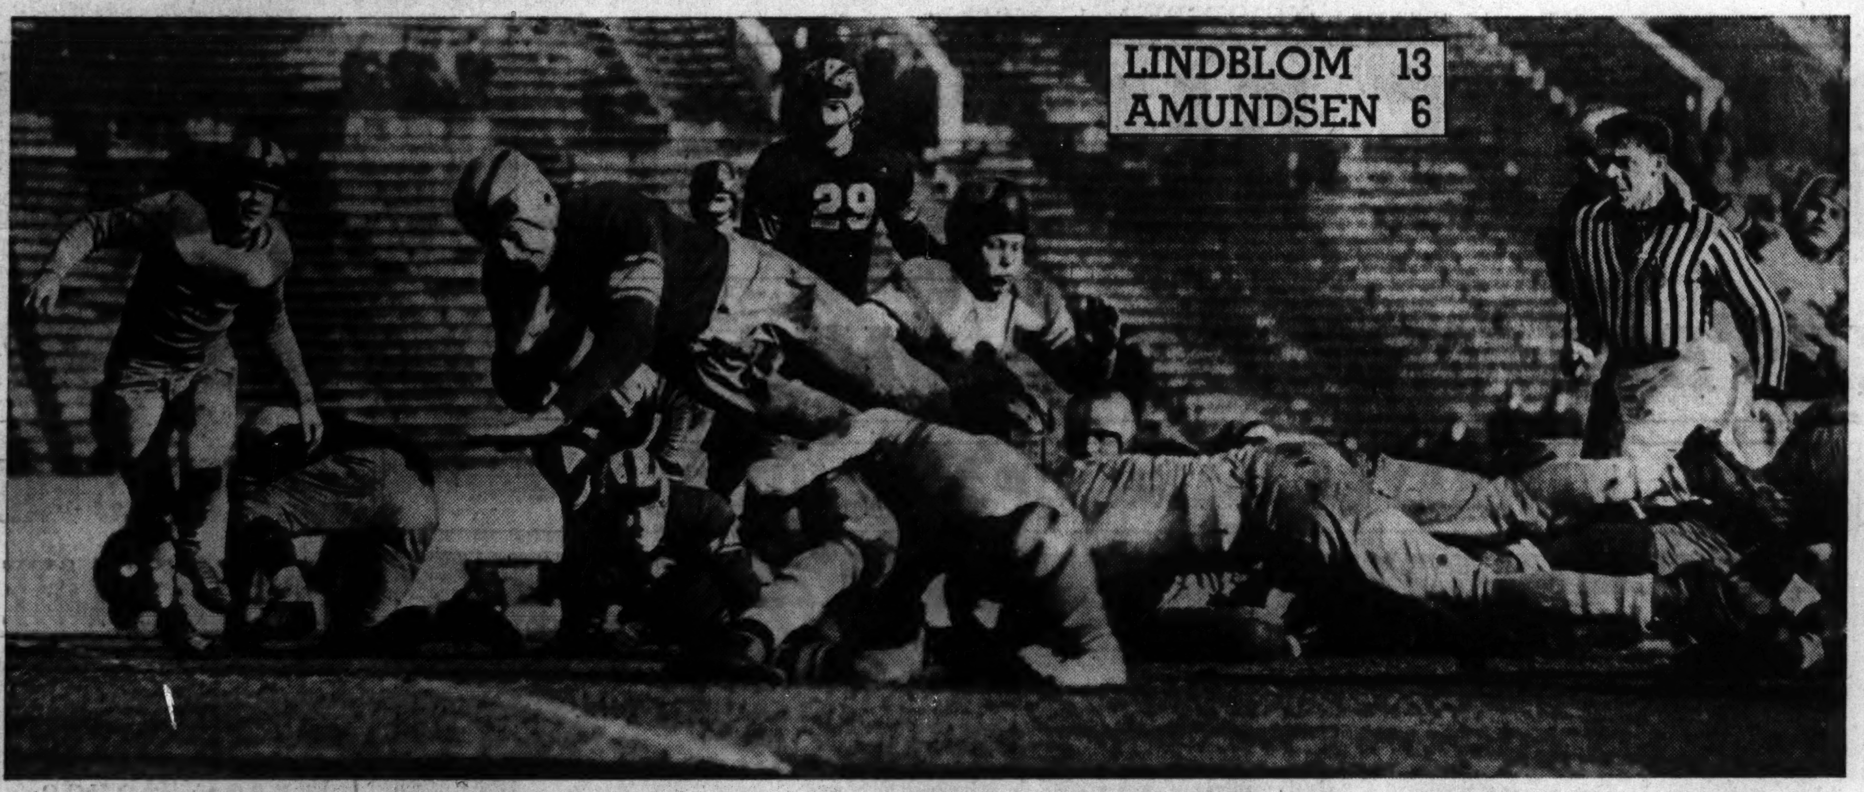
THRILLING MOMENTS AS FENGER, LINDBLOM WIN



An old favorite returns to the Public School league football finals. It's Ray Senkowski, star ball carrier of Lindblom's eleven, city champion in 1934 and 1935, shown gaining three yards against Amundsen, north section winner, in the semi-final game in Soldiers' field. Lindblom won the game in the fourth quarter, 13 to 6, and qualified to meet Fenger in the final round next Saturday. Watching Senkowski crash over the Amundsen line is Al Ozouf (No. 29), Lindblom 187 pound left half back. Senkowski scored Lindblom's first touchdown in the second period on a short plunge. The winning score was made on a fourteen yard run by Johnny Webright after a sixty-seven yard march. It was Lindblom's eighth consecutive victory in league competition and Amundsen's first defeat.

BY EDWARD PRELL.

Seventeen weary fellows slid off their bicycles in the Chicago Stadium last night and prepared to shuffle off to Buffalo, where Impresario Harry Mendel has thought up more of the same for a few weeks hence. It was the finish of Chicago's 43d six day race since 1914.

Torchy Peden, who has been riding professionally since 1928, and his dapper partner, Cecil Yates of Chicago, were the winners. Entering the final night with from three to five teams tied with them at various times for the mileage lead, they started a jam in the last wild hour of the race and stole two laps.

Three Teams Tag Along.

They were accompanied by Doug Peden and Archie Bollaert and Angelo De Bacco and Charley Bergna on the first one, but were off by themselves the next time. Torchy and Cecil also amassed the most sprint points, 1,460. It was Torchy's 37th conquest as a professional rider and Yates' 12th.

Three teams—the Doug Peden-Bollaert, De Bacco-Bergna and McConnell-Anderson combinations—tied for second in mileage. On a point basis, second place went to Bollaert and D. Peden, who accumulated 1,244. Third were De Bacco and Bergna, and Anderson and O'Connell wound up fourth.

Four hours before the finish Heinz Vopel, one half of the German team which entered the grind as favorite, pushed his bike off the track and announced he was withdrawing. Vopel told Promoter Harry Mendel he was suffering from neuralgia, sinus trouble, a fever and other ailments too numerous to mention. So he and his associate, Gustav Kilian, quit the chase. It wasn't the first time the Germans had scuttled their vehicles. In Washington recently, Kilian gave up the night before the finish.

Wissel Quits, Too.

Vopel's action was disappointing to 15,000 pedal enthusiasts, who had come out suspecting the Teutons would be able to make up their two lap deficit and win in a driving finish. Earlier in the day the Germans had started a jam, but the other eight teams grimly kept at their heels and prevented them from bettering their position.

There were only 17 of the original field of 22 riders because Ewald Wissel, making it a grand slam for the German contestants, withdrew in the final hour. His partner, Charley Yaccino of Chicago, refused to quit tho and finished out his string 15 minutes after the race officially ended at midnight.

John Salerno, 170 pound Schurz full back, cracks thru the center of Fenger's powerful line for two yards in the second period of yesterday's game in Stagg field. Fenger, defending champion, experienced no serious trouble against the North Siders, however, and triumphed, 52 to 0. It was Fenger's 34th game without defeat. It will meet Lindblom in the final round for the Public School league championship next Saturday in Soldiers' field. The winner of the league title will oppose the Catholic league champion in the annual All-City game on Nov. 30.

LEAGUE GAMES TONIGHT.
Montreal Canadiens at Chicago.
Detroit at New York Americans.
Toronto at Boston.

Bill Stewart, prominent in many a baseball and hockey argument during a long career as a sports arbitrator, comes back to Chicago today for another officiating assignment that may cause a rumpus before the Blackhawks oppose the Montreal Canadiens tonight in the first of 15 Sunday contests in Chicago Stadium.

Stewart, former manager of the Blackhawks, gained considerable mention in print last winter following a verbal flareup with James Norris Sr., owner of the Detroit club of the National league during a game in the Stadium, over which Norris rules as landlord. Yesterday Stewart was shoved into the limelight again when Maj. Frederic McLaughlin, owner of the Hawks, filed a protest against Stewart's assignment as referee of tonight's battle.

Protest Is Overruled.

Frank Calder of New York, president of the league, overruled McLaughlin's objections last night, stating that he did not intend to alter Stewart's assignment. Calder said he had received McLaughlin's protest, but that the assignment would stand. He refused to comment. McLaughlin based his protest on allegedly poor officiating by Stewart when the Hawks played a 2 to 2 tie with the Americans in New York on Thursday. The Hawks' owner accused Calder of "bad judgment" in sending Stewart to Chicago.

Regardless of whether Stewart carries on, however, the Hawks will take the ice in an attempt to achieve their first home victory of the 1940-'41 season.

Lose Opener, 1-0.

They started the league campaign unsuccessfully on Nov. 7, losing to the American, 1 to 0. But, they hit a winning stride on their first road trip, whipping the Canadiens in Montreal last Sunday, 3 to 1, beating the Bruins in Boston on Tuesday, 6 to 5, and then gaining a tie with the Americans in Thursday's game which created McLaughlin's objections.

Dick Irvin, once one of the game's greatest forwards, will make his first Chicago appearance as Montreal's new manager. Irvin has been connected with major league hockey, either as a player or coach, for 14 seasons.

Cornell Tops Dartmouth, 7-3, on 'Fifth Down' in Last Seconds

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 16 (AP).—Mighty Cornell was rocked and shaken by Dartmouth's Indians for 57 minutes today before it unleashed a passing drive that gave it a 7 to 3 victory before a startled crowd of 10,000.

The Ithacans pulled the game out during the last six seconds when, on a disputed fourth down with six yards to go, Walt Scholl ended a fifty-seven yard aerial drive by tossing a touchdown pass to Half Back Bill Murphy. That more than offset the seventeen yard placement field goal the Indians' Bob Krieger booted early in the final period.

Pass Batted Down.

Capt. Lou Young and his players, however, insisted that Cornell's scoring play came on a fifth down and just before it was made, Young demanded that Referee Red Friesell give his team the ball on its 20 yard line, for Full Back Ray Hall had batted down a pass by Scholl on the previous play.

The disputed series started after Scholl had passed to Murphy for a first down on Dartmouth's 5 yard line with 1 minute to play. Cornell then rushed to the 1 yard line where, after stopping the clock by rushing Righ End Al Kelley back into the game, it drew a five yard penalty for an extra time out.

Most of the writers' charts showed that Mort Landsberg had rushed twice and Scholl once before the latter threw the pass that Hall batted down behind his goal line. Friesell refused to discuss the incident and the only comment Earl Blaik, the Dartmouth coach, made was "I have every confidence in Referee Friesell."

Cornell's coach, Carl Snavely at first thought both teams had been offside, thereby nullifying a play, but the officials assured him that such had not been the case.

Almost Goes for Touchdown.

Dartmouth lost little time tipping off the Big Reds they were in for an exciting afternoon, for Half Back Ray Wolfe ran back Jim Schmuck's opening kickoff for fifty yards to Cornell's 45. If he had just a bit more speed, it would have gone for a touchdown, for he was dragged down from behind.

After the teams changed sides for the final quarter Hal McCullough punted out to Joe Arico and he returned it thirteen yards and then made seven more to Cornell's 20. Hall and Arico then carried the ball to Cornell's 8 yard line, when with fourth down coming up and three yards to go, Krieger made good with his try for a field goal.

Cornell Speaks

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 16 (AP).—President Edmund E. Day of Cornell and Athletic Director Jim Lynah tonight issued the following statement on the Cornell-Dartmouth game:

"If the officials in charge of today's Dartmouth-Cornell game ruled after investigation that there were five downs in the final series of plays; and that the winning touchdown was made on an illegal fifth down, the score of the game between Dartmouth and Cornell will be recorded as Dartmouth, 3; Cornell, 0."

Both President Day and Lynah emphasized their confidence in the officials and pointed out that the game was in their hands at all times and that they would abide by their final decision.

PENN, 48; ARMY, 0.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 16 (AP).—This is to report that the army's defenses against aerial attack on the football field are still "on order" and that the University of Pensylvania came back to early season form today to give the cadets a 48 to 0 whitewash—the worst an army team ever experienced. Before 47,000 spectators in the windswept stands of Franklin field, Penn humiliated Army as it had Maryland, Yale, and Princeton.

The only time Army even came near scoring, a referee's decision deprived it of a touchdown. This was in the closing minutes of the first period with Penn leading by six points. Ted Lutryzkowski ploughed over the Penn goal line from the 1 yard line. But referee H. O. Dayhuff penalized Army fifteen yards for using an illegal shift.

Three times in the second period, Penn scored on spectacular passes.

COLUMBIA, 0; NAVY, 0.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Navy crashed like big breakers against the rock bound defenses of Columbia today and was lucky to escape with a scoreless tie before 31,000.

Altho the Midshipmen rolled over the Lions with nine first downs to three, just as they had dominated their last two losing frays with Penn and Notre Dame, the heroics and the drama belonged to the Lions.

The fought back fiercely every time their lair was threatened. In the last five minutes they prowled deep into Navy's territory to setup a field goal attempt by Len Will on the 15 yard line. It was a difficult angle shot, struck the left upright of the goal posts, and bounced to the outside.

CANADEO AND GONZAGA BEAT DETROIT, 13-7

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 16 (AP).—Sparked by its brilliant half back and captain, Tony Canadeo of Chicago, Gonzaga defeated University of Detroit today, 13 to 7.

Canadeo, a one man gang, scored both Gonzaga touchdowns in second and fourth quarter rushes and added the extra point after the last one.

A Detroit fumble gave Canadeo his cue. Aided by Cecil Hare and George Derr, Canadeo hammered to the Detroit 4 and went over from there on a line smash.

Detroit received the opening kickoff of the second half and, marching eighty-two yards, scored before Gonzaga even got its hands on the ball.

TORONTO TAKES LEAD; DEFEATS MONTREAL, 4 TO 2

TORONTO, Ontario, Nov. 16 (AP).—All the latent scoring power in Toronto's lineup came to the surface tonight as the Leafs beat the Montreal Canadiens, 4 to 2, in a National Hockey league game before 11,762. It was the third straight victory for Toronto and their second over the Canadiens since Thursday.

The victory sent Toronto into the league leadership over the idle Chicago Blackhawks.

The first three Toronto goals came from the sticks of players who had yet to score this season. Sweeney Schriner and Wally Stanowski got their goals in the first period and Lex Chisholm his tally late in the second. Lineups:

It's Fenger and Lindblom for City Prep Title

BY JAMES SEGRETI.

Fenger vs. Lindblom.

That's the order of battle in next Saturday's game for the Public School league football championship and the right to appear against the Catholic league's representative in Mayor Kelly's All-City game in Soldiers' field on Nov. 30. The two south side elevens triumphed yesterday in the semi-finals, Fenger overwhelming Schurz, 52 to 0, in Stagg field, and Lindblom defeating Amundsen, 13 to 6, in Soldiers' field.

It's the Same Old Story.

The story of Fenger's victory is the same that has been written for three years, and the score bettered by five points the total Fenger compiled against the same Schurz eleven last year in the final round, 47 to 0. Ray Florek, Henry Stevenson, and Joe Kredens, who had a hand in routing the North Siders last season, enjoyed success again yesterday, Florek and Kredens each scoring three touchdowns and Stevenson, two.

Florek's three touchdowns boosted his total to 19 for 10 games this season. It was Fenger's 34th game without defeat and the South Siders remained on top as the state's highest scoring eleven with 430 points in 10 contests. The squad might have added several more touchdowns against Schurz had Coach Chuck Palmer permitted the regulars to play longer than 25 minutes.

Quarter Score, 19 to 0.

Palmer sent the regulars against the North Siders at the start of the game and within 12 minutes Schurz was staggering hopelessly around the field, Fenger holding a 10 to 0 lead at the quarter. The champions produced three more touchdowns in the second period and the half ended with Fenger holding a 38 to 0 advantage. The South Siders were held scoreless in the third period, but the regulars returned for another brief workout to score two more touchdowns in the final quarter.

Florek, 182 pound full back, who is 18 years old and is 5 feet, 10 inches tall, gave the Schurz players a look at his wizardry on the first play after the opening kickoff when he dashed 84 yards to score his first touchdown.

Stevenson Goes 70 Yards.

Stevenson, 150 pound quarter back, and Kredens, 169 pound left half back, also contributed spectacular runs, the former scoring one of his touchdowns on a 70 yard punt return, and Kredens making one of his three scores on a 64 yard run.

Lindblom's victory over Amundsen was its eighth straight in league competition. Altho Lindblom, city champion in 1934 and 1935, enjoyed a 6 to 0 lead at the half, the squad was forced to rally to score the winning touchdown in the final period.

It was Amundsen's first league defeat, the team having won seven consecutive games in taking the north division title. It also was a personal victory for Lindblom's coach, E. Lansford Moore, over one of his former pupils, Coach Louis Jorndt of Amundsen, a tackle on the 1925 and 1926 Lindblom elevens.

Score on Ninety-three Yard March.

Lindblom's first touchdown came early in the second period after an eighty-five yard march left the ball on the Amundsen 8 yard line as the first quarter ended. Ray Senkowski, 186 pound right half back, hero in Lindblom's drive to the central division title, crashed over from the 1 foot line on fourth down.

The score was tied in the third quarter when Amundsen's touchdown specialist and star passer, William [Red] Johnson fired a short toss to Howie Kirchwehn, 170 pound quarter back, who ran eight yards to go over.

In the fourth quarter Lindblom again began a succesful march, driving sixty-seven yards to the Amundsen 14 yard line. Then Johnny Webright, Lindblom's 149 pound quarter back, slipped thru tackle for the winning touchdown. Lindblom added the extra point on a forward pass, Al Ouzof to Warren Toren. The lineups:

ALBION'S 14 GAME STREAK ENDED BY LAKE FOREST, 14-7

Lake Forest finished its season undefeated by beating Albion, 14 to 7, yesterday in Lake Forest. Albion had won its previous 14 games. Yarwood took a pass from Becker for Lake Forest's first score and Gates returned a punt 68 yards for the second. Gates added both extra points. Both touchdowns were scored in the first quarter.

In the third quarter, Long plunged over for Albion and Alsip converted. Full Back Becker and Half Backs Gates and Metz were outstanding for Lake Forest, while Trimble shone for Albion.

LEO RISKS LEAD AGAINST JOLIET CATHOLIC TODAY

Seeks Football Title in South Section.

Catholic League

GAMES TODAY.
Leo vs. Joliet Catholic, Shewbridge field, 2 p. m.
Mount Carmel vs. Fenwick, Stagg field, 2 p. m.
St. Rita vs. De La Salle, St. Rita field, 2 p. m.
St. George vs. St. Patrick, Evanston, 2 p. m.
St. Philip vs. Weber, St. Philip field, 2 p. m.
St. Ignatius vs. St. Mel, Austin field, 2 p. m.

Leo and Mount Carmel, two of Chicago's leading Catholic prep elevens, which have represented the Catholic league in Mayor Kelly's annual All-City spectacle for the last three years, will take their place in the city's football spotlight this afternoon. Leo, which participated in the interleague series in 1934, 1935, and 1937, meets Catholic High of Joliet in Shrewbridge field. Mount Carmel, which opposed Fenger, the Public School league winner in 1938 and 1939, faces Fenwick of Oak Park in Stagg field.

There were many observers on the south side who last Sunday prematurely handed the south section title to Leo after the Lions conquered Mount Carmel, 6 to 0. However, Coach A. L. [Whitey] Cronin and his back field stars, Henry Baranowski, Tom McDonald, and Bob Kelly will wait until they have met and vanquished Joliet before making preparations to entertain De Paul, which already has earned the right to appear in the final round by winning the north section title last week.

Leo Aware of Trouble.

There also were a few other title indications, particularly the visit of Wally Fromhart, Mount Carmel coach, to the Leo clubhouse last Sunday to extend his congratulations to Coach Cronin. But Leo's eleven is aware of the fact that it can find itself in second place by losing to Joliet, while Mount Carmel is winning from Fenwick. After all, the Leo players contend, Mount Carmel experienced difficulty in disposing of Joliet several weeks ago, winning by one touchdown, 6 to 0. Leo now enjoys the sectional lead with four victories and one tie, while Mount Carmel occupies second place with four victories and one defeat.

Thrice Leo reached the prep spectacle and each time it was turned back. It was Lindblom in 1934 and 1935 by scores of 6 to 0 and two years later Bill De Correvont and his Austin associates routed Johnny Galvin and his team mates, 26 to 0.

Seeks Shot at De Paul.

With Mount Carmel out of the way, Leo's followers are confident the squad will participate in this year's game in Soldiers' field on Nov. 30. If the Lions triumph over Joliet they will encounter De Paul next Sunday afternoon, probably in Soldiers' field, for the title and the right to represent the league against the Public School league winner. De Paul was beaten by Mount Carmel in its only early season practice game, 13 to 12.

Evanston Tops New Trier and Ties for Title

Evanston High school's football team yesterday gained a tie with Proviso of Maywood for the 1940 Suburban league championship by concluding its season with a 20 to 6 victory over New Trier before 5,000 in Dyche stadium. It was Evanston's fourth victory in five games. The north shore eleven lost only to Proviso.

New Trier held a 6 to 0 lead at the end of the first half, but in the third quarter Gene Kwasniewski raced eighty yards for Evanston's first touchdown. Left Half Back Winter added two more touchdowns in the final period.

HARVARD ELEVEN FINDS ITSELF TO BEAT BROWN, 14-0

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 16 (AP).—Harvard's fast improving football team gave a convincing demonstration of superiority today in smashing out a 14 to 0 victory over Brown.

In the third period Charlie Spreyer sparked a sixty-three yard march to the Brown goal line, launched after Loren MacKinney halted a Bruin thrust with a pass interception.

Late in the fourth period Brown was pushed back to its 13 by Spreyer's punt and tried a desperate gamble, which backfired when Burgy Ayres intercepted Ernie Savignano's pass. Spreyer and Fran Lee alternated to lug the ball to the 8 and Lee romped over on a well executed demonstration of Dick Harlow's famed naked reverse.

STANFORD NEARS ROSE BOWL; WINS 8TH IN ROW, 28-14

Indians Score 3 Times in Third Quarter.

Palo Alto, Cal., Nov. 16 (AP).—Stanford's Indians nailed their battle flag to the ramparts of the Rose Bowl today with a 28 to 14 victory over Oregon State before 35,000.

With six conference triumphs to its credit now, Stanford can do no worse than tie with Washington, which still has two games to go. Stanford meets only California. And inasmuch as the Indians already have vanquished Washington, 20 to 10, there is little left except the shouting.

The assumption on all sides today was that the balloting of 10 conference members, who vote on the western representative for the Rose Bowl, would be a mere formality.

They Rally Again.

As was the case in victories against Southern California and Washington, Stanford put on another stunning rally to conquer one of its toughest opponents.

The score was tied, 7 to 7, as they came out for the third period. In nine minutes, Stanford had crashed over three touchdowns. It smashed fifty yards to break the tie; pounded 33 yards after recovering a fumble, then went 61 yards after an intercepted pass.

Oregon State came back in the last quarter to capitalize on a fumble by Stanford substitutes and move nineteen yards for a touchdown. For a short time thereafter, the northerners were still in the running. They passed and smashed 70 yards to Stanford's 11 yard line, but lost the ball on an intercepted pass.

Substitutes Take Over.

Stanford opened the contest at its lowest physical ebb of the season. Its first string full back, Norman Standlee, was out with a knee injury. Other players nursed bruises and sprains from a rigorous schedule that has seen six conference and two nonconference victories chalked up to make Stanford the only undefeated, untied major college eleven in the far west. Substitutes, however, fitted into the intricate scoring machinery as tho they had been vital cogs from the start of the season.

BEARS WIN, 14-6.

Berkeley, Cal., Nov. 16 (AP).—Scoring twice in the first half on long touchdown runs, University of California defeated the University of Oregon, 14 to 6, today.

A crowd of 25,000 saw Jim Jurkovich, fleet California half back, score late in the first period on a thirty yard dash down the side lines. Oregon retaliated with a fifty-five yard pass for a touchdown, Half Back Leonard Iseberg to Half Back Tommy Roblin, both substitutes.

California made it 14 to 6 midway in the second period, after being penalized fifteen yards to Oregon's 43 yard line for holding.

On first down, Half Back Orv Hatcher passed to Jurkovich streaking down the side line with only one Oregon man near. Jurkovich hooked the ball with one arm, side stepped, and crossed the goal.

HUSKIES WIN, 14-0.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 16 (AP).—Two touchdown runs by Full Back Jack Stackpool, one of them for seventy-eight yards, gave the University of Washington a 14 to 0 victory over Southern California today before a homecoming crowd of 30,000.

Aside from a couple of third period thrusts the Trojans' attack was ineffective, and it was only the quick kicking of Halfback Jack Banta which prevented Washington from rolling up a higher score.

Backed up by Banta's kicking, the Huskies took possession on their own 13 yard line. They moved to the 22 in two plays, then sent Stackpool to the short side outside the Trojan right tackle. Stackpool cut back thru the secondary, then outdistanced the ponderous Trojans to the goal line. Johnny Mizen added the extra point.

Interference on a pass from Half Back Dean McAdams to End Earl Younglove by Quarter Back Ray Woods on the 5 yard line set up the final score.

WILSON DEFEATS LISLE ELEVEN ON STAGG FIELD, 12-0

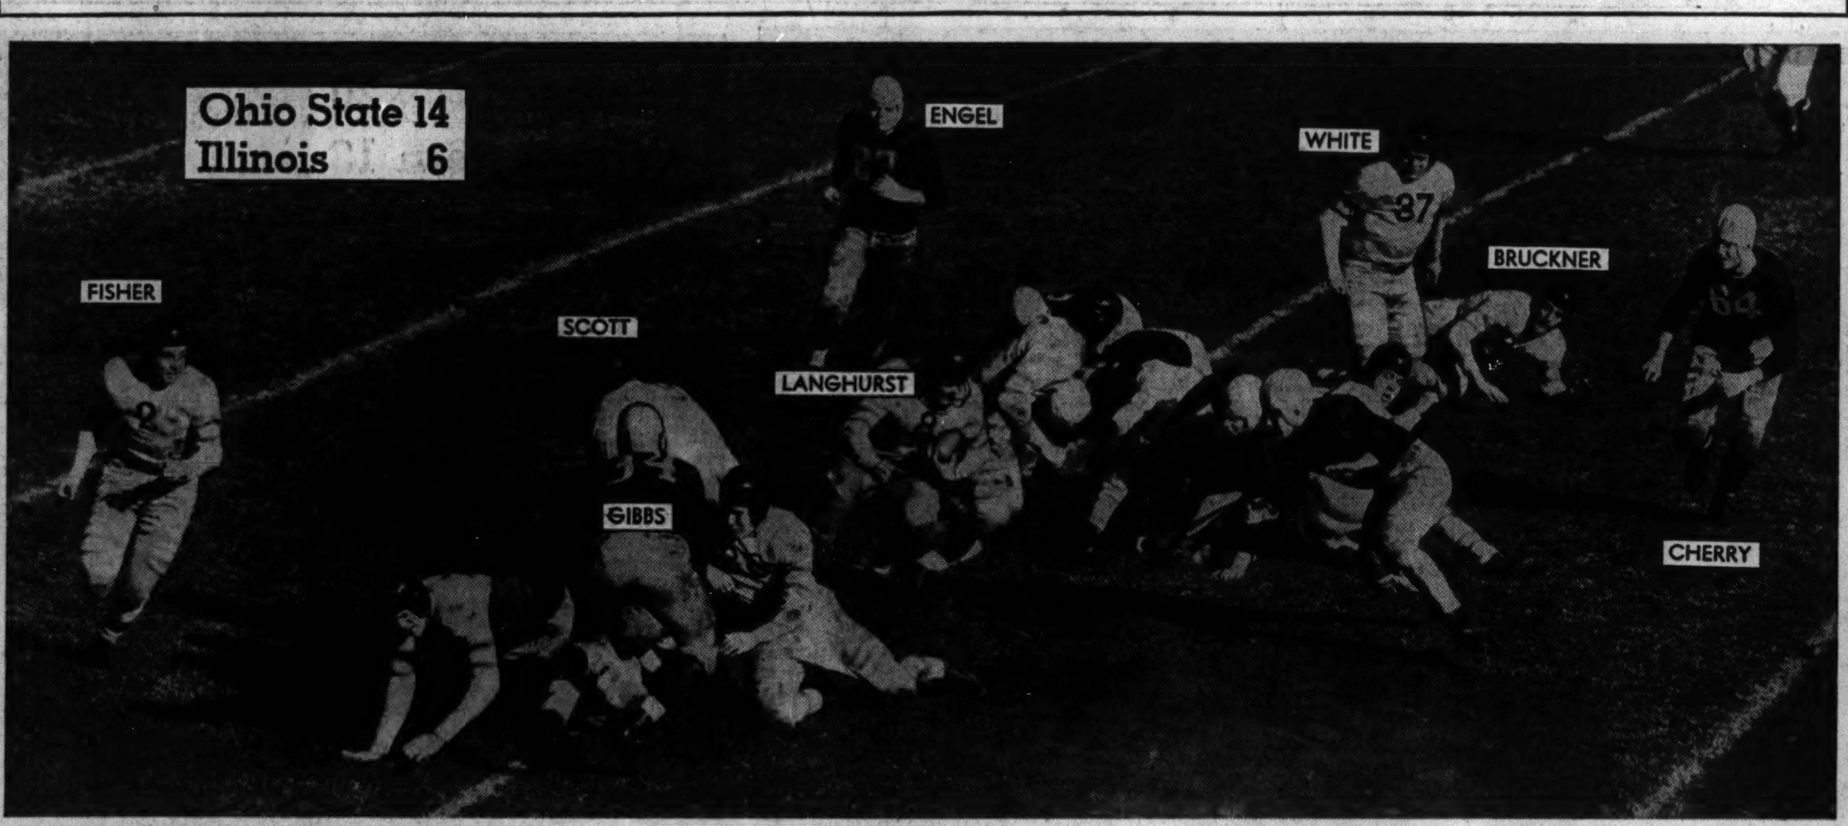
WAS MR. LANGHURST EMBARRASSED! HE DROPPED IT



Jim Langhurst (arrow), Ohio State back, appears to be going places in the first quarter of yesterday's game with Illinois in Champaign. But a moment later he fumbled and Ralph Ehni of the Illini, not in picture, recovered on his own 16 yard line, stopping a scoring threat. Other Ohio State players are Fisher (2), Roman (28), White (37), Bruckner (30). Illinois men identified are Gibbs (34), Engel (27), Bernhardt (81), Cherry (64). The Buckeyes won, 14 to 6. # Ohio State's Power Proves Too Much for Illinois, 14-6

Dick Good, sophomore half back, with the wind behind him, completed 9 out of 15 passes. A series of three started the touchdown drive which was consummated by Myron Pfeifer, Illini full back.

Go 38 Yards in Eight Plays.

Illinois wasted no time after the start of the fourth period in getting into scoring position by exchange of kicks. On the second play of the quarter Ralph Ehni kicked forty-nine yards with the wind and out of bounds on Ohio State's 38 yard line. Three plays later, Jim Sexton's return kick was partly blocked by Bob Gibbs, left end, and the ball was downed by the Illini on the Ohio State 38. From here Illinois scored in eight plays.

After an Ohio State offside penalty, Good passed to Paul Milosevich on the Buckeyes' 17 yard line. Good's next pass to Cliff Peterson in the flat failed to gain, but Good then shot the ball to Ehni for a nine yard gain. On the third down play Pfeifer hit over Ohio State's left tackle for a first down but fumbled. The ball was recovered by Bill Kolens, Illinois tackle, on Ohio's 6 yard line.

Pfeifer fumbled again on the next smash and this time Ehni recovered on the 3 yard stripe. Twice more Pfeifer carried. On his second plunge he went over from the one foot mark. Dave Dillon replaced Nate Johnson at tackle to try the kick for the point which sailed wide of the mark, however.

Parade Seventy-Seven Yards.

When Illinois won the toss and defended the south goal, Good was included in the starting lineup. Good's quick kick on the first down after the Ohio State kickoff was returned twelve yards by Jim Strausbaugh to his own 28 yard line. This was the signal for a march of seventy-seven yards in 10 plays, Ohio State traversing five yards a second time because of an offside penalty.

Langhurst's third down reverse established a first down on Illinois' 40 yard line when he escaped around the Illini right end and down the east side line. Strausbaugh then went around the other end and was brought down by Pfeifer on Illinois' 22 yard line. At this point Ohio State was offside but Kinkade hammered thru for eleven yards and in two more plunges Langhurst made the third consecutive first down on the Illinois 7 yard line.

Harry Siebold tackled Langhurst after gain of a yard, then stopped Kinkade on a reverse for a yard loss. On third down, however, behind a split line deployed to overpower Illinois' left tackle, and with three backs in front of him, Scott drove all the way to the goal line. Scott added the extra point.

Ohio State had advantage of the wind in the third period and Scott's second kick set up the Buckeyes' second touchdown. On second down, from his own 28 yard line, Scott quick kicked sixty yards out of bounds on the Illinois 12 yard line. Ehni was forced to punt on third down and the wind checked the flight of the ball which was downed on the Illinois 39.

Eight Plays to Touchdown.

Ohio State scored in eight plays. Kinkade's reverse made ten yards, three plays later Langhurst plunged and then went wide around the Illini right end until Liz Astroth ran him out on the 10 yard line. Scott hit guard for four yards and Langhurst matched this inside of the Illinois left tackle. Then Scott, behind the same line formation of the first period, hammered over left tackle for the touchdown. He again kicked the point.

Princeton's Late Goal Wins Over Yale, 10-7

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 16 (AP).—Bob Sandbach, whose brother, Ken, was a mighty man around here back in 1935 and 1936, trotted onto Palmer stadium just before the last of the 45,000 fans was about to freeze in his seat late today and placekicked a twenty-seven yard field goal to give the Tigers a 10 to 7 victory over Yale.

The two rivals, contending for the Big Three crown that used to be so important, had been deadlocked at 7 to 7 ever since the second period, when, with a little over two minutes to go, Sandbach broke out of his blanket and entered the game.

Sandbach Does It.

Princeton, with a substitute, Ed Rose, shredding Yale's line, had moved from the Elis' 46 yard mark right down to scoring territory. Then Sandbach came running out. He warmed up while Princeton was being penalized for delaying the game. Then he stepped back and sent the ball over from the 17 yard line.

Princeton scored in the opening quarter when Dave Allerdice completed a fifty yard pass to Bob Peters. Allerdice went far back, and Peters, fighting off Fred Harrison of Yale, speared the ball on the 15. Then he stiff-armed Harrison and ran on across. Sandbach ran in and kicked the seventh point.

Willoughby Leads Yale.

Once Yale marched over 50 yards to the brink of a score before being halted. Then Yale came right back behind the ripping runs of a sophomore back, Chuck Willoughby of Flint, Mich., to go forty-four yards for a touchdown. The 165 pound Willoughby, after having sparked the drive both with his passes and runs, took a seven yard pass from Harrison for the score. Hovey Seymour kicked the point to tie it at 7 to 7.

NEBRASKA BEATS PITTSBURGH, 9-7, ON A FIELD GOAL

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 16 (AP).—The Pitt jinx which Nebraska buried a year ago nearly bounced back today but couldn't quite make it, and the Huskers left the snow framed gridiron with a 9 to 7 decision, their sixth since they were defeated by Minnesota in the season's opener.

Twenty-two thousand fans forgot the bitter cold in the last half minute as John Stahl, Panther end, dropped back to the Nebraska 13 yard line after a great Pitt drive had wilted on the 5, and tried a place kick which would have given the Panthers victory. He missed.

Pitt played the Nebraskans to a standstill thru most of the game. The Panthers once came from behind to take a one point lead.

IOWA CONQUERS NOTRE DAME IN 4TH PERIOD, 7-0

Enich and his lads took charge of things and went on to victory.

It was another of those games in which the basic statistics mean little. For instance, the losers made 11 first downs to 6 for Iowa. Iowa made the only first down in the first period and in the second the Irish got 6 firsts to none for the Hawkeyes. All of Iowa's first downs were from rushing. Notre Dame's were 4 from rushing, 5 from passing, and 2 from penalties. Incidentally, the Irish were penalized only once in the game, five yards for off side late in the third quarter.

Green Is the Big Shot.

The individual yardage was more significant. Green made net gains of seventy-five yards of the Iowa total of seventy-seven. Gallagher netted the other two. Juzwik gained forty-nine, Peipul thirty-six, and Saggau thirty.

The spectacular triumph saved what had been a bleak season for Iowa as emphatically as it smashed Notre Dame's dream of an undefeated campaign.

Iowa, previous to today had won, 46 to 0, from South Dakota, and 30 to 12 from Wisconsin, then had gone into a tailspin with successive losses, 10 to 6 to Indiana, 34 to 6 to Minnesota, 21 to 6 to Purdue, and 14 to 6 to Nebraska. Notre Dame had won, 25 to 7 from College of Pacific, 26 to 20 from Georgia Tech, 61 to 0 from Carnegie Tech, 26 to 0 over Illinois, 7 to 0 against Army and 13 to 7 over Navy.

MIDGETS ENTER SECOND WEEK OF INDOOR RACING

A second set of eight events for the national indoor midget auto racing championship will be contested tonight in the International amphitheater, 43d and Halsted streets, under the auspices of the Chicago Auto Racing association. Time trials will start at 7 p. m. with the first race scheduled for 8:30.

Wally Zale of Chicago, who won the inaugural feature last week, will attempt to protect his point lead against the array of drivers expected to surpass the record field of 50 which performed in the first show. Zale piled up 62 points toward the national title, which is being defended by Harry MacQuinn of Indianapolis.

WESLEYAN GETS SHARE IN TITLE; BEATS MILLIKIN

Bloomington, Ill., Nov. 16 [Special].—Two touchdowns in the last period gave Illinois Wesleyan a 32 to 18 victory over Millikin today and a share in the Illinois College conference championship. Both Lake Forest and Wesleyan won three conference games.

Three times the alert Wesleyan eleven, mixing passes with its ground gain, grabbed touchdowns. Three times Millikin, using its own aerial attack to good advantage, tied the score.

In the fourth period, a pass, Wetterlund to Robinson, good for twenty-five yards, advanced Wesleyan to the 20, and three plays later Morrow went over from the 3. This time Wesleyan held its lead, Robinson going forty yards for another touchdown after a pass interception just before the gun.

Minnesota Takes Big Nine Title; Defeats Purdue, 33-6

to a couple of offside penalties nor, for that matter, to Bruce Smith, found themselves backed up almost to their own goal line, Rankin being the only obvious active operative in the Boilermaker defense corps.

Finally Petty punted to Franck, who took up where Smith had left off, and after returning the Petty punt twenty-nine yards he contributed a first down on the Boilermaker 19 yard mark. Paffrath lost a couple of yards, but on the next play Smith scampered twenty-three yards for the second touchdown. Then followed the only time in the half that the speedy Gopher was out of the game, the recess being granted when the invaluable Mernik came in to convert the point.

Daley Breaks Loose.

It took the Gophers right into the start of the second quarter before they made their third touchdown. Just at the end of the first period Petty, who only six plays before had punted out of bounds on the Minnesota 10 yard line, fumbled on a second down play, and Judd Ringer, who had come in at left end for Minnesota, recovered the ball. On the next play the hard running Daley, working back of noble blocking, shifted thru the left side of the Purdue line and went thirty-five yards to the goal. Byelene dashed in to spoil Daley's attempt for the extra point.

The outset of the third quarter saw the Gophers go down to the Boilermaker 2 yard line, only to be restrained by the third holding penalty on Bill Johnson, who, in addition to this assessment, also cost his associates a pass interference. It might be added, however, that Mr. Johnson was one of the front runners for Messrs. Franck, Smith, and Daley. Shortly after the Johnson misdemeanor that boy Mernik stepped in and made his aforementioned field goal from a difficult north by east angle.

Purdue Gets One.

The Purdue lads made their move in the fourth quarter, Petty succeeding in the seventh minute of the period. Galvin was the leading operator in this charge. He completed three passes, once the Boilermakers took over the ball in midfield. All three went to Quarter Back Fred Smerke, the latter receiving the third and decisive one before he was run out of bounds on the Minnesota 3 yard stripe. The Gopher motley of seconds and thirds restrained Petty therefrom until fourth down, at which point he dived over. Galvin's try for the point failed.

With less than two minutes to go Mr. Mernik touched off another Minnesota drive and topped it off with his second field goal of the afternoon, leaving little doubt about the genius of his toe. This was from center field on the 27 yard line.

With 28 seconds remaining Lushine broke thru to catch the hapless Frank Fijala's pass and continued on for the remaining fifteen yards. Just to show that Mernik is not the only member of the Gophers who can make extra points John Bartelt added the conversion.

ELMHURST BEATS WHEATON, 19-13, ON LATE RALLY

Elmhurst college surged from behind in the fourth quarter to defeat Wheaton, 19 to 13, in the 15th game of their football rivalry in Wheaton yesterday.

Elmhurst scored on the second play of the game when Don Cash intercepted a short pass and raced thirty yards for a touchdown. Wheaton's first score came in the second quarter when Wulff ended a fifty yard march on 1 yard touchdown plunge.

A pass, Gustaf to Cash, for fifty-two yards and Green's eight yard run scored for Elmhurst in the third quarter. McCarrell retaliated for Wheaton on a one yard plunge and place kick following a third quarter march from its own 34. The final score of game came in fourth quarter when Green plunged from 1 yard and then kicked for the extra point.

ST. LOUIS BUYS PITCHER CASTER FROM ATHLETICS

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 16 (AP).—Purchase of George Caster, 31 year old righthanded pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, was announced today by the St. Louis Browns. Caster won only four games while losing 19 last year.

"Don't let that 1940 record fool you," said William G. De Witt, general manager of the Browns, in announcing the deal.

"Caster pitched in a winter circuit following the 1939 season and, as a result, he tired after four or five good innings last year. We are certain that he'll come back and do us a lot of good."

ST. JOHN'S DEALS CULVER ITS FIRST DEFEAT, 29 TO 19

Delafield, Wis., Nov. 16 [Special].—St. John's Military academy blasted Culver Military academy's midwest prep championship hopes today, giving the Hoosiers their first defeat, 29 to 19.

In the opening period Wallace of St. John's ran fifty-two yards for the first score. A kickoff recovery by Finley in the Culver end zone and a Culver safety gave the Johnnies a total of 15 points.

In the third period Wallace ran sixty-six yards for a score, Quarter Back Horner converting again. Late in the period Horner intercepted a Culver pass and went 80 yards to score, and then added the extra point on a placement.

Culver came to life in the final period with Moran, playing a beautiful game, scoring the first Cadet touchdown on a 23 yard run. Full Back Stanton's placement was good. Half Back Fuller and Fee added two more scores in last eight minutes of play.

DE KALB BEATEN BY CHARLESTON ON PASSES, 12-0

De Kalb, Ill., Nov. 16 [Special].—Charleston Teachers took third place in the Little 19 race today by whipping the De Kalb Huskies, 12 to 0. Bill Glenn, Charleston's passing ace, was mainly responsible for both scores.

Glenn passed 35 yards to Suddarth on the De Kalb 5 and three plays later Suddarth plunged over from the 1 foot line. Glenn missed the try for extra point. Midway in the third period, a pass, Glenn to Stanford, covered 52 yards for another touchdown.

Pass Theft, 70 Yard Run Win for Marquette

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 16 [Special]. An intercepted pass and a seventy yard run by Ray Apolskis, brilliant center of the Marquette university football team, enabled the Golden Avalanche to bounce from behind and hand Michigan State a surprise 7 to 6 defeat before a homecoming crowd of 10,000 today.

It was one of the most spirited of Marquette homecomings with Pat O'Brien, movie star and an alumnus, and other celebrities in the stands, but the Hilltoppers' outlook was dark until Apolskis grabbed a Spartan pass early in the fourth quarter and, behind quickly formed and efficient blocking, raced to a touchdown.

Kemnitz Kicks Extra Point.

Guard Bob Kemnitz, whose place kick enabled Marquette to defeat Michigan State last fall, 17 to 14, made good on his second try for the conversion to bring the winning point. He missed the first, but the Spartans were offside.

The setup for the winning points was provided after Mike Schelb returned a Marquette quick kick to the Hilltoppers' 37, and a first down was added on the 19. State lost twelve on an attempted pass, and then Wy Davis tried another toss which Apolskis hauled in on his 30 to go the full seventy yards for the score.

Michigan State scored on the first play after the second half kickoff. Wyman Davis returned the kickoff to his own 20 and then, on a wide sweep at left end, beat a trail down the side lines for eighty yards to score. Maro Miller, full back, missed his attempted conversion.

State Halted on 3 Yard Line.

Each team had one scoring opportunity in a first half that was marked by tight defenses, but both thrusts fell short. Late in the first quarter, Fred Carter, Michigan State guard, recovered a fumble on Marquette's 23, after which, on fourth down, Half Back Mike Schelb passed to End Bob Friedlund on the 7. Four drives at the line failed, however, with Schelb finally winding up on the 3 yard line.

Two long passes by Half Back Jimmy Richardson, one to Quarter Back Bill Phillips and the other to End Don Vosberg, carried Marquette downfield in the second quarter, but the Hilltoppers' attack sputtered out on the Spartans' 17.

Broman's Power Scores Win for North Park, 12-6

North Park's Vikings defeated the Wheaton college freshman-sophomore team yesterday in Wheaton, 12 to 6. Wheaton scored in the first quarter when Nickson took a lateral and plunged a short distance. Broman scored for North Park in the third period on a power drive and later climaxed a 50 yard march with another plunge.

Wildcats' Rally Is Halted Before 76,749.

western was back in the ball game with the score 20 to 13.

Second Long March Halted.

Ten minutes remained to play—but Northwestern was rolling now. Starting on their own 21 yard line, the Wildcats marched inexorably. It was Hahnenstein for six or Clawson for fourteen or Kepford for twelve as they pounded on and on.

And presently it was first down on the Michigan 15 yard line. Hahnenstein was stopped with a gain of a yard, but on the next play he sliced off Michigan's left tackle to the 7. It was third down with two yards to go for a first down on the 5 yard line.

The Michigan line, weary under that repeated hammering, then showed its mettle. Twice again the Wildcats tried to force a breech. Twice Hahnenstein hurled himself toward the opening he hoped would be there. But it wasn't. On fourth down Westfall broke thru and tossed him for a loss and Michigan took the ball on its 7 yard line.

When Northwestern regained possession of the ball after the Wolverines had made three running plays and a punt, they were far back on their own 45 yard line. Their last bid for a tie ended when Paul Kromer intercepted De Correvont's long pass intended for Motl.

Only One Important Pass.

Both teams depended largely on rushing today, only one forward pass figuring importantly. That of course was DeCorrevont's scoring toss to Motl. Tho Michigan gained only 186 yards by rushing against Northwestern's 228, the Wolverines did their running in the spots where it counted most. They capitalized on three chances when they got control of the ball within their opponents' 35 yard line, tho in one of these cases they were forced to make up for losing possession on a fumble by blocking the answering punt.

Northwestern lost some yardage by being forced to let punts roll instead of catching them. They returned only one out of ten. On the other hand, Lockard's twenty-five yard return of a Northwestern punt led directly to one of the Michigan touchdowns.

Michigan Starts Early.

The first time they got the ball, the Wolverines began to click. Hahnenstein, standing inside his own 5 yard line and punting into a heavy wind, sent the ball skimming out to Harmon, who took it on the Northwestern 43 and returned to the 35. On the first play, he got loose around the Wildcat right end for seventeen yards. A five yard offside penalty checked the Wolverines momentarily, but Westfall's answer was a plunge thru center to the 7 yard line, where he dropped the ball when tackled vigorously. George Benson recovered for Northwestern.

After one line play failed to catch the Wolverines off guard, Hahnenstein punted from the end zone. Frutig, Michigan left end, got thru and slapped the ball as it rose, knocking it out of bounds on the 1 foot line. Then Harmon went over for a touchdown at the first crack. His placement was good and Michigan led, 7 to 0.

A few minutes later, the Wildcats were again in difficulty. A fifteen yard penalty for illegal use of hands set them back to their own 3 yard line. Again Hahnenstein punted from the end zone. This time Lockard took it on the 30 yard line over near the east side of the field. He zipped and dodged his way down the side lines for twenty-five yards before he was pulled down.

Take 14 to 0 Lead.

That gave the Wolverines a first down on the 5 yard line. Harmon cut over the Northwestern right tackle for four. He was able to add about two feet on the next crack. Then Westfall plunged for the touchdown. Harmon kicked goal, running Michigan's advantage to 14 to 0.

On the last play of the first quarter, Northwestern got past the center of the field for the first time. Harmon's kickoff had gone out of bounds, giving the Wildcats possession on their 35 yard line. A thirteen yard smash by Benson and a three yard thrust by Hahnenstein then took it to the Michigan 49. On the first play of the second quarter, De Correvont, who had just come into the game, whipped a pass to Motl, who had got behind the Michigan secondary. The Wildcat end had nothing to do but run with it after he had taken the toss on the 25 yard line. Clawson's place kick for the extra point failed.

Another Punt Boomerangs.

Michigan got the opportunity for its third touchdown later in the second period when another Northwestern punt from the end zone failed to come off properly. De Correvont was doing the kicking this time, with the wind blowing at an angle from behind him. He booted it fairly high, the gale caught it and carried it out on the Northwestern 26 yard line.

Immediately the Wolverines struck again. Westfall cracked the middle of the line for 11 yards. Then he cut off tackle for eight yards more. Lockard fumbled and recovered with little loss. Two plunges by Harmon put the ball on the 3 yard line. Then Westfall broke thru for the touchdown. This time Harmon's kick failed. That made it 20 to 6.

144 ADVANCE TO QUARTER-FINALS IN C. Y. O. BOXING

Await Resumption of Bouts Tomorrow.

BY FRANK MASTRO.

One hundred forty-four of the best amateur boxers in the city—48 in each of the open, novice, and beginners divisions from the south, west, and north sections—are marking time for quarter-final competition in the annual Catholic Youth organization tournament in C. Y. O. center tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

These hardy youngsters qualified for the bouts after two weeks of spirited fighting in the outlying districts. Half of them will fall by the wayside during the week's campaign, one of the most difficult in the 10 year history of the event. The boys displayed courage and stamina to survive early battling, but only those who combine knowledge of the game with these assets can hope to continue on to the semi-final round, scheduled in the C. Y. O. center Nov. 25 and 26.

There they will compete with suburban representatives, who will be determined in preliminary and quarter-final fighting in Catholic High school in Joliet Friday and Saturday.

20 Bouts Each Night.

More than 20 bouts will be offered on each of the three nights of city competition this week. Every weight will be represented in all three divisions.

The 16 survivors in the beginners class will fight for titles on the same night that open and novice division finalists are chosen Nov. 26.

The 1940 open and novice class champions will be crowned in 16 contests in the Coliseum Dec. 4. Seven 1939 medal winners, four in the open division and three in the novice, have reached the quarter-finals. The open champs are Al Noto, flyweight of St. Angela; William Goldsmith, welterweight, Corpus Christi; Isaiah Wells, middleweight, Holy Family; and Dave Brown, light heavyweight, St. Nicholas [Evanston]. Novice title holders are Henry Delulio, flyweight, St. Matthew; Al Reasoner Jr., featherweight, Corpus Christi, and James Hunt, lightweight, Corpus Christi.

Brown Now a Heavyweight.

All in the open ranks except Brown are defending their championships. Dave is competing as a heavyweight this time in an attempt to emulate his brother, Clarence, who won the title in this weight three years ago. By their achievements in the novice class, Delulio, Reasoner, and Hunt became eligible for competition in the advanced open division. Delulio is back as a 112 pounder, but Reasoner has returned as a lightweight, and Hunt as a welterweight.

Tickets for the finals in the Coliseum go on sale in C. Y. O. center tomorrow. They will sell for $2.20, $1.10, and 55 cents.

Hagen, Dubs Feature Card at Marigold

A six round bout between Harvey Dubs, Windsor, Ont., lightweight, and Floyd Hagen of St. Paul, will feature this week's Chicago boxing schedule. They meet in Marigold Gardens tomorrow night. It will be Dubs' third Chicago appearance. He stopped Pete Ferrand and beat Eu Eulien earlier. Prior to making his Chicago debut Harvey scored a one round technical knockout over Indian Jimmy Maddox in Milwaukee Oct. 28.

Hagen also will be making his third start in this city, having previously beaten Gene Ward and losing to Johnny Pleasant. Pleasant scored a three round knockout after suffering a knockdown himself in the second round.

Supporting matches of eight rounds match Clarence Brown, 1937 Catholic Youth organization heavyweight champion, with Orlando Trotter; Settimo Terracina, Jewish-Italian refugee, who weighs 170 pounds, with Frank Greene, and Mickey Hayes, Milwaukee heavyweight, with Billy Gillespie.

In four earlier matches in Marigold this year Hayes knocked out Flash Roulette and Bill Peterson, conquered Ed Stanley, and fought a draw decision with Greene. Terracina won an eight round verdict over Al Tibbits of Danville on Sept. 30. Prior to this feat he defeated Luther Brent in White City.

Wrestling shows will be held in White City tomorrow and the Coliseum Friday. The Coliseum card will be headed by Karol Krauser and Ralph [Ruffy] Silverstein. Preliminary matches involve the Swedish Angel and Oki Shikina, Rudy Kay and Adolph Goebels, Ralph Garibaldi and Jim McMillen. . . . Amateur boxing programs will be offered in White City and Winnetka Community house Wednesday. . . . There also will be an amateur card in Duncan Y. M. C. A. Dec. 5. . . . Tony Motisi, C. Y. O. welterweight, has retired from the ring to accept a job in Charley Bidwill's printing establishment on Plymouth court.

Plans to promote an overweight bout between Fritzie Zivic and Milt Aron, welterweight challenger, in Chicago Stadium next month, were spoiled yesterday following word that the champion would be unable to box again for five weeks. Zivic is said to be taking treatments for a groin injury suffered in his winning effort against Al [Bummy] Davis in Madison Square Garden on Friday.

Meanwhile, Aron opened boxing drills in Trafton's gymnasium yesterday for a 10 round contest with Steve Mamakos of Washington, D. C., in the Coliseum, also listed for Nov. 25.

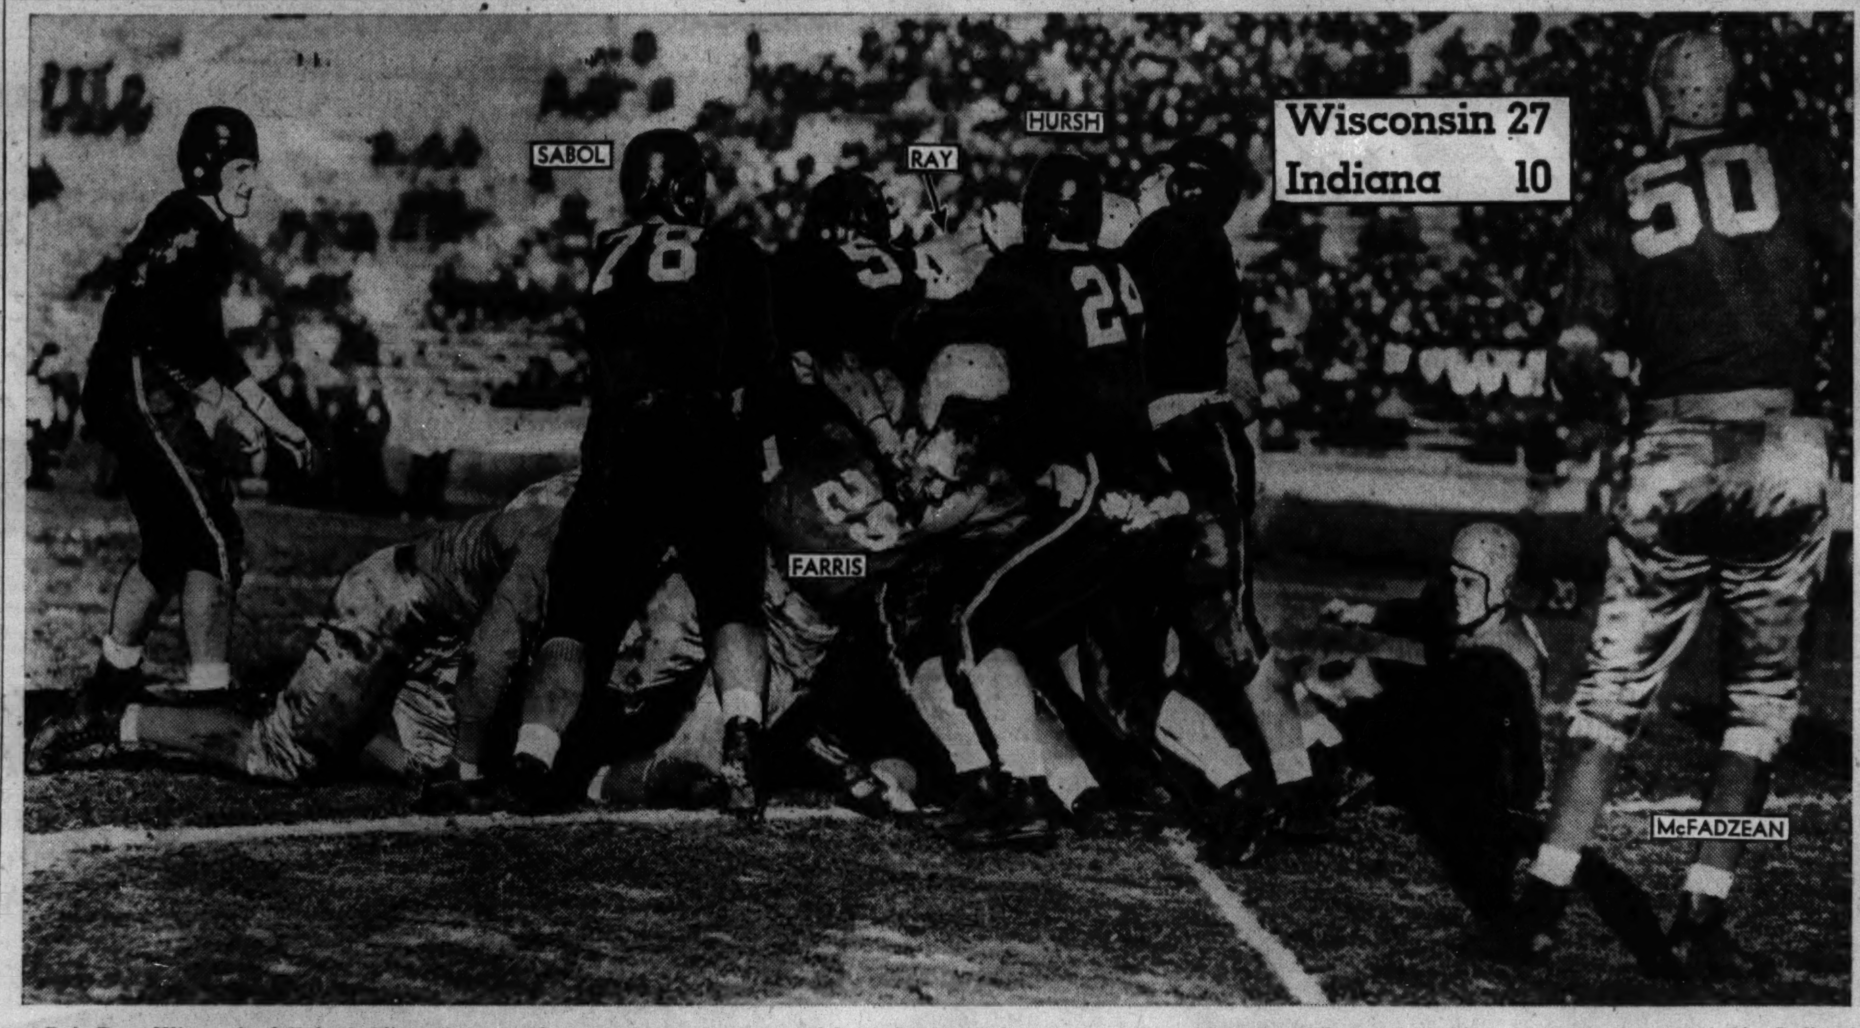
ONE YARD TO A TOUCHDOWN AND MR. RAY GETS IT



Bob Ray, Wisconsin full back, dives for a yard over center to score touchdown for the Badgers in the second quarter of yesterday's game with Indiana. Wisconsin had a big second quarter, scoring three touchdowns to hold a 27 to 3 lead at the half. Indiana's score came in the final period on a pass. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

SPOTTING THE PINS

BY C. H. BEUKEMA.

Inquiries and reservations received thus far indicate that the records of teams in competition and prize money paid out which were set last year will be eclipsed in this season's Chicago Bowling association tournament, scheduled to open on Dec. 26 on the Gold Coast alleys. Secretary Al Sindelar's office at 29 W. Randolph street is taking entries at a much more rapid rate than at the corresponding time preceding last winter's event. Entries must be mailed prior to midnight on Sunday, Dec. 1, to be accepted. The telephone number is State 7650.

The opening night again will be Bowling Proprietors' night. Secretary Math Luecker of the bowling proprietors already has lined up 60 of the 72 teams needed for the three squads that will start bowling at 6, 8 and 10 o'clock. Five-man teams will bowl every night thru Jan. 12, after which doubles and singles will be rolled on week-ends.

The Blatz Beers, tied for third place, will bowl the Monarch Beers in the big match of tonight's Classic league schedule on the Legion alleys, 7550 Cottage Grove avenue. All matches start at 8 o'clock. The Koenigs, tied for the lead with the Monarchs, oppose the Michelobs; the Pabst Blue Ribbons meet the Ambrosias, and Schlitz opposes the Ruppert Knickerbockers . . . The Lowers dropped to the lowest berth in the Pullman General Office league when they lost a full set to the Drawing Rooms. The Drawing Rooms' victory moved them to within a game of the leading S. O. S.'s, who have won 16 games and lost 8. In the women's league the Blue Bonnets and Forty-Niners each won three games to keep the lead with 17-10 records. Leona Sievers rolled 501, the first honor roll series in the circuit this season. . . .

Mart Bowlers Have Turkey Night.

Merchandise Mart bowlers won their turkeys early, 17 being distributed in the four leagues following competition on a handicap basis. Lloyd Thies of Hahn's Food shop rolled high score, 628, and tho his total helped his team win three games from Luster's Express, he was shut out in the turkey competition—because he neglected to enter. Dr. Milzer W. Deist, Mart Tower, with 619; Ed Guenther, Merchandise Mart, 618, and Lary Dutton, N. B. C., 614, all won birds.

Fitz Patrick's Trafficeers continued to lead by three games in the C. & N. W. "400" league, a circuit in which the spread among the 16 teams is only nine games, when they won three from Allstrand's Hostlers. Two season's records were set; a 986 game by the Trafficeers and a 2,623 series by Hallberg's Hoppers, who won three from White's Streamliners. . . . Nearly 800 children of preschool age have been "checked" while their mothers bowled during the three months the Lawrence Bowl has been in operation.

The "crucial" match between the first place Chapin & Gores and second place Trophy Beers, who have been brushing aside all competition in the North End Traveling league, will be rolled at 7 o'clock tomorrow night at the Willow alleys, 924 Willow street. The C. & G.'s lead the circuit by three games. Other matches:

Pepsi-Colas vs. Fox De Luxe at Kaadland, 7 p. m.; Samuelson's Kids vs. Schambergers at North Town, 7 p. m.; Budweisers vs. De Luxe recreation, 7 p. m.; Jolly Jacks vs. Koenig Brau at Stack & Ryan, 9 p. m.

Eichners Win Two from Seagrams.

Dave Eichners pulled Seagrams into third place in the Hyde Park Major by winning two of three close games in which the Eichners rolled 2,961 and the Seagrams 2,941. Seagrams are now a game behind Englewood Electrical Supply and DuBouchett, both of whom swept their series. The Eichners are a game behind the Seagrams. Ed Plageman was the league's high man with 245, 234, 669. . . . Stanley Dodge of Samuelson's Arcade won $25 in the junior classification and Andrew Czarnieski of Cooper's recreation, Harvey, $50 in the regular division of Brunswick's $50,000 Red Crown carnival last week.

The Mineralites, who are in fifth place with 17 games won and 13 lost, and the Burlington Zephyrs tied for the next spot, one game farther back, meet in the most promising match of tomorrow night's Windy City league schedule. Other matches:

J. M. Kralovec and Son vs. Bireley's Beverages; Quality Wet Wash vs. Reichman Jewelers; Betinis Boosters vs. O'Keefe Coals; Houcek Senators vs. Gills; Blue Rock Beverages vs. None Better Ice Creams; Nemecek Tailors vs. Furman Funerals; Budweisers vs. Vogel Brothers.

Forty-Niners Gain Tie for Lead.

Forty-Niner jumped into a tie with Challenger for the C. & N. W. league lead by winning two games from the erstwhile pace setters—even tho Challenger topped the winners by 99 pins on the set. Each has won 17 games and lost 7. Victory rolled second high series of the season, 2,593, for a sweep over Streamliner, which dropped the losers into a third place tie with Corn King—which in turn won three from Viking. . . . It was another big week for the Joseph L. Gills. They rolled 3,023 at Windy City, where they're tied for third, three games off the pace; 3,175 at Stevenson's, where they lead by three games, and 3,218 at Randolph, where they not only have a seven game lead but have won 26 out of 30 games.

Superior Motor Service moved into a tie with the Walter C. Edens for the Beverly Major league lead Friday night by winning three games from Dealers Transportation. The Edens, with a 986 average, rolled top series, 2,985, to win twice from the Chris Bauers. The Superiors, a quintet with a 914 average, rolled 2,786 to win. Each of the leaders has won 25 games and lost 8. The William C. Dannes remained two games off the pace by beating the B. & F. Men's Shop twice. Bill Smith of the Dannes rolled high series, 668, followed by Albert Lasky of the Harry Harts with 663.

Notes of Women's Bowling.

All the defending champions will be entered in the competition when the 1941 women's city tournament opens in Bensinger's 131 S. Wabash Recreation Jan. 4. The Congress Recreation team defends the five woman title which it won on a 2,603 score last season; May Davison and Margaret Luchsinger of the Pepsi-Colas, who rolled 1,176, defend the doubles crown; Mrs. Davison [619] defends in the singles, and Mrs. Luchsinger [1,716] seeks to repeat in the all events.

GEORGETOWN IS BEATEN, 19-18, BY BOSTON COLLEGE

Boston, Mass., Nov. 16 (AP).—Boston college fought its way into the front ranks of the nation's football teams today be removing Georgetown from the ranks of the undefeated, 19 to 18, in a frantic struggle before 40,000 in Fenway park.

Content to win their first seven games with a minimum of formations, the unbeaten Eagles played wide open offensive football today.

Leading 19 to 16 with 65 seconds left to play, Boston was backed down deep in its own territory with fourth down coming up and eighteen yards to go from its own 9. Deciding to trust to its defense to keep Georgetown at bay, the Eagles dropped Charley O'Rourke back into the end zone, ostensibly for a punt. But O'Rourke, weighing only 155 pounds, wouldn't risk a blocked kick. Like a penned-up fox, and just as smart, O'Rourke scurried back and fourth in his end zone until finally he was downed, as he had meant to be all the time.

Take Deliberate Safety.

That safety brought Georgetown up to within a point of Boston, but Boston's faith in its defense proved to be founded on fact as the clock ran out with the desperate Hoyas fast getting nowhere.

Thus Georgetown went down to defeat for the first time in three seasons and 24 games, and Boston came thru its eighth straight this year without either defeat or tie.

Hit squarely by two breaks that helped Georgetown to a 10 to 0 lead in the first five minutes of play, Coach Frank Leahy's Eagles came back to complete two scoring parades for a 13 to 10 lead at half time.

Then, when Georgetown went sixty-five yards from the third-quarter kickoff to lead again by 16 to 13, the Eagles once again had what it took to put on a sixty-seven yard retaliatory drive of their own that brought them the playoff score.

Georgetown Leads, 10 to 0.

A holding penalty when Boston took the ball on the opening kickoff put the Eagles in the hole, which was dug deeper when Lou Ghecas returned a punt to the Boston 33. Two running plays and a pass by Julius Koshlap gained nine yards, and on fourth down Augie Lio, Georgetown guard, kicked a field goal from the 32.

Georgetown kicked off again, and Boston was on the spot once more. O'Rourke, trying a quick kick, had it blocked and the ball rolled out to the Boston 10. Two plays, including and eight yard pass, took it to the 1, and from there Koshlap powered over. Lio's extra point put the visitors in front, 10 to 0.

Right back came Boston, covering seventy-three yards in seven plays that included laterals and forwards, with the payoff on a lateral from O'Rourke to Lou Montgomery, which was tipped in the air by Al Matuza, Georgetown center, into the waiting arms of Henry Woronicz, Boston end, who stepped over from the 1.

Eagles March Ninety Yards.

Two exchanges of punts, and Boston rolled again, ninety yards this time. O'Rourke started the Eagles off by slipping off Georgetown's right end for thirty, accounted for twenty-eight more with a pass to Frank Maznicki, and got his boys a first down on the 1 when Georgetown was charged with pass interference in the end zone. Mike Holovak scored over from there, and Maznicki added the point.

Georgetown went 65 yards to its second touchdown within the third quarter's first five minutes, running a double reverse, with Joe McFadden carrying for the final five. This time Boston went sixty-seven yards, nineteen of it O'Rourke's pass to Toczylowski, the final forty-two on another heave to Maznicki.

and thirty-five yards, most of it in the fourth quarter when Archie Harris put on the individual thriller with a catch and sprint good for sixty-nine yards.

Indiana Rushes Into Lead.

The battle wasn't a minute old before the Badgers revealed a charitable inclination. Johnny Tennant captured the kickoff and lugged it out to his 28 yard line. On the first play he fumbled and Eddie Rucinski recovered for Indiana on Wisconsin's 24 yard mark. The Hoosiers made three attempts to proceed on the ground, whereupon Gene White dropped back to the 25 yard line and booted a field goal.

The Hoosiers' hilarity was painfully shortlived, the Badgers ripping those three points apart in a hurry. They took the kickoff on their own 28, and helped considerably by a long pass thrown by Tennant to Dave Schreiner, drove to Indiana's one yard line. But Tennant fumbled again and the Hoosiers kicked out.

The Badgers bounced back with another devastating charge, this time going over with the opener of the touchdown shower. This assault began with Tennant carrying Hursh's punt 20 yards to the Wisconsin 45. Tennant passed to Gene Lyons for a 12 yard advance. Paskvan dove into the right side of the Indiana line, but the plunge developed into a sprint and he raced to the 5 yard line. On the second play he leaped over a pile-up of players for six points. An off side by Indiana gave Gage two chances at the extra point, but he missed both.

Badgers Roll Up Lead.

An epidemic of fumbling broke out at the start of the second quarter and the Badgers were the eventual beneficiaries. Brooks fumbled on the first play after a punt and Gage grabbed the ball for Wisconsin on the Hoosiers' 17 yard line. The Badgers lost the ball on downs, but it was promptly returned to them on a fumble by Ray Dumke. Henry recovered for the Badgers on the enemy 26 yard mark. Those 26 yards were melted down in a hurry. The big item was a pass by Hoskins to Schreiner, who was chased out of bounds by Bob White on Indiana's 4 yard line. In two plunges Paskvan went over again and Bob Ray, replacing Paskvan, kicked the point that made the score 13 to 3.

Five minutes of the second quarter remained when Zimmer, trying to run, was thrown for a ten yard loss by Lyons. On the next play Zimmer fumbled, thus setting up another Badger touchdown. Wasserbach recovered the ball for the Badgers on the 9 yard line. Two plays proved sufficient. Hoskins made two yards at right end and McFadzean, finding a hole at right tackle, wove his way across the goal line. Ray's foot harvested another extra point and the Badger margin swelled to 20 against 3.

Ray Scores on Plunges.

Zimmer carried the kickoff out to his 19 yard mark. In the first play, Zimmer picked up nine yards but three subsequent plays were incomplete passes and the Badgers took possession of the ball on Indiana's 28 yard line. A pass into the end zone by Tennant was incomplete so the job was turned over to Ray, who plunged and ran to the Indiana 4 yard line. Three more plunges carried him over and he kicked the point which made it 27 to 3.

Early in the fourth period the Hoosiers began to learn what the grass looked like in Wisconsin territory. They battered their way to the Badgers' 25 yard line for a first down, but McFadzean intercepted Hursh's pass on his 3 yard line, coming back to the 13. The Badgers kicked into more comfortable surroundings, but the Hoosiers made another attempt. Hursh's passes began to click and the Badgers' soon were back on their 6 yard line. This threat finally failed and the Badgers put the ball in play on their 20 yard line.

Hoosiers Finally Go Over.

Apparently not disturbed by the dual repulse, the Hoosiers tried again and this time they succeeded. They took a Badger punt on their own 21 yard line. Hursh heaved a long pass to Harris, who grabbed the ball on Wisconsin's 40 yard line, cut toward the opposite side of the field, and proceeded to the 10 yard line, where Gile stopped him. On the second play, Hursh passed to Harris for the Hoosiers' lone touchdown. Buchianeri kicked the extra point.

INDUSTRY CUTS SPEEDY PACE BY SEASONAL LAGS

Defense Work Holds Near Peak Rate.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

The speed of industry's long sustained forward movement was reduced moderately on the whole last week when some of the normal peacetime enterprises yielded to seasonal lagging tendencies and fell behind others directly engaged in production of national defense materials.

Cotton textile output declined more than the usual seasonal amount and latest available figures indicated a slackening in freight movement and electric power production. Automobile output, while reaching a new 1940 high mark, did not expand as much as usual for the week.

However, plants working on government orders for airplanes, steel, tools, ships, and munitions held to practical peak operations.

Construction Work Booms.

Closely tied in with these industries was a pronounced increase in engineering construction work which, with a gain of 75 per cent in contract dollar volume, was one of the brightest developments of the week. Contract awards totaled 139 million dollars, compared with 79 millions in the preceding week.

Several large expansion projects were announced by manufacturers of steel, synthetic rubber, aluminum, and munitions. A steel plant at Birmingham, Ala., will be enlarged 20 per cent at a cost of about $25,000,000. Numerous additional military orders were placed by the government.

Meantime many corporations declared increased or extra dividends that will reach investors before the Christmas buying season ends, and banks prepared to distribute $365,000,000 to members of Christmas savings clubs, about 4½ per cent more than such savings amounted to a year earlier. These funds are expected to help quicken sales in the retail trade, whcih reported seasonal gains last week when many shoppers had to face blizzards or severe cold.

Wholesale Trade Irregular.

Wholesale trade, continuing active for the most part, sagged seasonally in some lines. Steel production barely crept ahead to 96.1 per cent of capacity, compared with 96 per cent a week earlier. Residential construction increased, bank check volume was larger, and banks increased their loans to business in Chicago and New York City.

The weekly index of industrial activity, compiled by the Associated Press and adjusted for seasonal variations, with components based on 1929-'30 levels as 100, showed the following changes:

| | Latest week. | Prev. week. | Year ago. |
|---|---|---|---|

Indications that the federal reserve board has become concerned over the possibility of inflation were seen in statements which M. S. Szymczak, board member, made at a meeting of Chicago bankers. He urged enlargement of the board's powers to deal with credit problems.

Voices "Warning" to Banks.

Earlier Donald M. Nelson, connected with the national defense advisory commission, warned commercial banks that their future status with regard to government regulation depends on the way in which they meet demands for defense project financing.

Nelson said that the federal reserve system will serve as operating agent for the defense commission in efforts to gear small business units to the arms program. Later George J. Schaller, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, appointed Howard P. Preston, the bank's first vice president, and H. J. Chalfont, cashier of its Detroit branch, to represent the reserve system in the Detroit area in the small business phase of the arms work. A. L. Olson, assistant vice president of the Chicago bank, represents the board in the Chicago area.

Ten Billions of War Goods Are 'On Order'

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16 (AP).—The army already has placed orders for more than 71 per cent of the planes, tanks, barracks, supplies, and other war material for which congress has provided funds, an official compilation showed today. Actual production, however, has barely started.

In round figures, war department contracts awarded since July 1 for purposes other than the army's ordinary maintenance expenses have passed a total of $4,500,000,000.

The navy's latest total is $4,187,941,695. And for all defense purposes more than ten of the sixteen billions voted by congress to reënforce defenses have been obligated.

Tanks Nearly All Ordered.

For the army virtually all of a contemplated total of nearly 6,000 new tanks are in process of manufacture or plants and machinery are being created to build them.

Aircraft manufacturers have orders for all of a scheduled 18,641 army combat and training planes. The navy has contracted for some 7,000 aircraft.

Contracts have been awarded for construction of 26 powder mills, shell loading plants, aircraft factories, and other munitions facilities to cost over $750,000,000.

New Barracks Being Built.

Orders have been scattered among hundreds of manufacturers for the uniforms, blankets, and the myriad of other items of equipment required for an army of two million men.

All except 10 per cent of the barracks and other housing for the expanding land forces are to be ready by the year's end, according to present army schedules. Thirty-one major camps and cantonments are being created, aside from scores of smaller new establishments to house and train the million and a half soldiers expected to be in uniform by next June.

Prospective delivery dates for most items are a closely guarded military secret. However, it is expected to be next summer before production will reach anything like full speed.

May Delay Some Orders.

Two billion dollars more remains to be expended for war materials for the army, including new facilities to produce munitions. At current rates it will all be obligated before congress meets in January.

There is a possibility, however, that substantial orders may be delayed and spaced over the next several months, officials said, to avoid adding to the backlog of many plants now running 24 hours a day.

But despite the heavy demands made on some plants, officials said the defense preparations thus far had little more than tapped the nation's industrial resources. Under the war department's industrial mobilization plan, worked out since the world war, tentative emergency tasks were assigned to some 10,000 plants. Thus far, officials said, only about 2,000 have received contracts.

It was the 18th consecutive monthly gain. The larger restaurants had the largest percentage gains, the announcement said.

CO-OP RATE TOO HIGH, USERS OF ELECTRICITY ASK PRIVATE SERVICE

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 16 [Special].—Charging that service received from a power coöperative, which receives current from the Tennessee Valley authority, is "unsatisfactory," and that the rates charged are higher than those charged by the Franklin Power and Light company, a group of 25 Williamson county residents has asked the state utilities commission to allow them to ask current from the private power company, which also receives its current from TVA.

A hearing on the case, the first in the state in which patrons have sought a change from public to private power supply, has been set for Nov. 22. The petition, which was filed by A. R. F. Lance, was signed by 24 others served by the Middle Tennessee Electric Membership corporation.

The petitioners say that they were told by the power company that it had "an agreement with the coöperative whereby neither would serve customers now being served by the other. The petition charges that if such a contract exists, it is contrary to public policy.

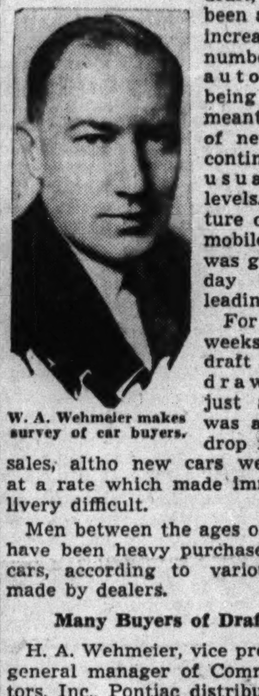
Draft Tension Eased, Used Car Sales Rise

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.



W. A. Wehmeier makes survey of car buyers.

With some of the uncertainty cleared regarding men subject to draft, there has been a noticeable increase in the number of used automobiles being sold and meantime sales of new cars are continuing at unusually high levels. This picture of the automobile business was given yesterday by several leading dealers.

For several weeks prior to draft number drawings and just after there was a noticeable drop in used car sales, altho new cars were moving at a rate which made immediate delivery difficult.

Men between the ages of 21 and 35 have been heavy purchasers of used cars, according to various studies made by dealers.

Many Buyers of Draft Age.

H. A. Wehmeier, vice president and general manager of Community Motors, Inc., Pontiac distributors, made a study of 720 purchasers of used cars in a period just before the draft acted as a drag on the market. It showed that 411, or 57 per cent, were between the ages of 21 and 35.

In a much broader study, covering a greater range of car buyers, the following results were shown:

| Age | New cars | Used cars |
|---|---|---|
| 21-25 | 11.4% | 25.5% |
| 25-30 | 13.6 | 18.0 |
| 30-35 | 10.7 | 12.8 |
| Total within draft age | 35.7 | 51.3 |
| Over 35 | 64.3 | 48.7 |

One of the largest automobile finance companies estimates that only about 15 per cent of time purchasers of automobiles are eligible for the draft, altho in practice only a small part of the 15 per cent will actually be subject to call.

Pickup Follows Lottery.

Wehmeier said yesterday that about a week after the draft lottery used car sales began to improve, and this improvement has continued. Further, the effects of the speeding up of industry working on defense are beginning to be felt, he said.

"During the world war factory workers largely relied on public transportation systems to take them to and from their jobs," he said. "The present emergency finds a much different situation. Factories have been located at distances from street car lines and other transportation systems so that workers now rely to a considerable extent on automobiles in getting them to their jobs."

Some Offering Refunds.

The automobile finance companies are making various arrangements to take care of those who are drafted. One of the larger companies has a plan whereby a man who is drafted may turn back his car and be credited on its books with the value of the car less 3 per cent per month for each month he has operated the car.

Another makes a cash refund on a basis of the Chicago delivered price, including taxes, on new cars. Deductions include the cost of clearing title, an amount sufficient to put the car in resale condition and a rental fee of $25 a month. The rental fee on used cars is $15 a month for those selling for less than $300 and $20 a month for those selling for more than $300.

PREPAREDNESS BOOM AHEAD?

At that time he pointed out the probable effects of the re-armament program and emphasized that regardless of election results an inflationary upturn should develop. He listed 30 dividend stocks well suited to guarding against capital depreciation and to meet increased income taxes.

| Corn | .64½ | .63⅝ | .50⅛ |
| Oats | .38⅜ | .38 | .37 |
| Rye | .47 | .46⅛ | .52⅛ |
| Soy beans | 1.04 | .99⅛ | 1.00 |

Soy beans soared 3¼ to 4¾ cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday as the result of general buying and short covering which more than offset heavy profit taking sales. All deliveries of beans sold above the dollar mark for the first time since last May and the close was at the top.

Extremely small receipts of cash beans and reports that processors were paying much higher prices in the interior than Chicago handlers were offering were said to have been responsible for the upturn in prices. Receipts in the last week were about 300 cars, only 25 per cent of the arrivals in the same period last year. The December delivery led the upturn.

Price High Last January.

It was recalled that futures sold up to $1.21¾ a bushel on the Board of Trade last January, altho the 1939 crop was about 8,000,000 bushels larger than this year's harvest.

Strength in soy beans had much influence on the grain markets. Wheat was about ¾ cent lower in the early trading, but short covering and commission house buying developed when beans turned upward and at the finish wheat was ⅜ to 1 cent net higher. Corn was ⅜ to ⅞ cent higher with May selling at a new seasonal high mark. Oats finished ⅜ to ¾ cent higher and rye gained ⅜ to ½ cent.

Offerings Fail to Increase.

Despite the recent rapid rise in wheat prices there has been no material increase in sales of cash grain by farmers, it is reported. Some interests have revised their views as to the price that will be necessary to bring out any appreciable quantity of cash grain.

Country offerings of cash corn for deferred shipment continue extremely light. A large part of the current receipts is said to represent consignments by country elevator men.

Recent low temperatures are reported to have been beneficial as some corn recently put in cribs had started to heat due to a high moisture content.

SEEK NEW DEEP RESERVOIRS OF OIL IN ILLINOIS

Centralia, Ill., Nov. 16 (AP).—Paul Rossi's No. 8 Brooks well was just another Devonian lime well in the Lake Centralia-Salem oil field until announcement that it would be deepened to the Trenton formation attracted attention of the whole Illinois oil industry this week.

The Trenton lime is unexplored in the lake field, largest in the state, and the well may determine whether the field's production already has passed its peak or whether new deep reservoirs of oil await development. The 15 square miles of the field already has production from five formations.

The Brooks well, in Salem township, has been producing from the Devonian at 3,432 feet and will be deepened to a contracted depth of 4,600 feet.

Production will be transferred to Anker-Holth's plant at Port Huron, Mich. Financial details of the transaction were not announced.

Here is the first of 25 powerful locomotives being built for the New York Central system by the American Locomotive company and Lima Locomotive works. They are designed for either passenger or high speed freight service, an innovation in New York Central operating practice. The diameter of the drive wheels, 69 inches, is 10 inches less than the drivers on the standard Hudson type passenger engines of the road. The engine pictured was turned out at American Locomotive's shops at Schenectady, N. Y.

Britain Spends 82½% of Total Income on War

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Britain's wartime expenditure for the last two weeks was estimated to total approximately 82½ per cent of the entire national income for the period.

Latest official figures issued by the treasury show the average weekly costs since the beginning of October have amounted to £72,000,000 [about $288,000,000], compared with £70,100,000 [about $280,400,000] in September and £67,600,000 [about $270,400,000] in August. During the last two weeks, however, the British government has spent nearly £14,000,000 pounds daily [about $56,000,000] on the war and civil services—a rate just about equal to the nation's entire prewar income.

Still Lags Behind Nazis.

Despite the rapid expansion of government spending in recent months, a study of Anglo-German war finance, published by Thomas Balogh in an economic bulletin of the Oxford Institute of Statistics this week, indicates Britain is still lagging behind Germany in the actual expenditure for war purposes.

Balogh estimates that at the time of the attack on France, Germany was spending at the rate of 55 to 60 billion reichsmarks or approximately £4,000,000,000 [about $16,000,000,000] annually. The aggregate war effort of the axis powers, including the value of loot such as foodstuffs, raw materials, armaments, and tributes derived from occupied territories, he estimated at about £5,000,000,000 yearly [about $20,000,000,000].

Against this, Britain in the current financial year is estimated to be spending a little more than £3,000,000,000 [about $12,000,000,000] for actual war purposes, to which must be added the contributions of the dominions and colonies and the capital expenditures made in the United States.

Food Costs Soaring.

The Oxford Institute of Statistics also published figures revealing huge increases in the prices of food and materials in Britain since the outbreak of the war. The all around jump in prices quoted far exceeds the figures given in official government estimates.

"Compared with October, 1939," the bulletin states, "prices for food increased 15 per cent and materials 21 per cent, the corresponding rises since the outbreak of the war amounting to 46.7 per cent and 37.2 per cent."

Forty unions representing more than 1,250,000 engineers, most of them key men in arms production, are expected to ask the government soon to end a deadlock in negotiations for increased wages.

2 RESERVE BANK DIRECTORS ARE ELECTED AGAIN

C. P. A. EXAMINATION
. . . . NEW CLASS PLAN

Thoroughly tested over 4 years, this new plan embodies strikingly different and efficient methods. The quizzer method (so effective in preparation for the bar examinations), an optional laboratory period of 3 hours each Saturday afternoon for practice in answering problems under examination room conditions, an intensive review of accounting, continuous coaching by successful C.P.A.'s, thorough study of A. I. A. examination problems, and consultation at any time with an experienced C.P.A.—these are some of the facilities and services.

Evidence of our success in coaching for the examinations is seen in the fact that over 10% of the C.P.A.'s in the U. S. are LaSalle members. Furthermore, if you fail in passing the examination, we will continue coaching you without further cost until you do pass.

These loop evening classes begin the week of November 24 and continue for 25 weeks. Classes meet once a week—one on Tuesday, one on Thursday and one on Friday—at 6:30 P. M. The cost is moderate and convenient payment terms can be arranged.

COLLEGE LAND YIELDS OIL, EASING SCHOOL'S FINANCIAL TROUBLES

Oakland City, Ind., Nov. 16 [Special].—Financial difficulties of Oakland City college, a little Baptist school with an enrollment of 250 students, are being swept away with the output of an oil well which has settled to a steady daily production of 150 barrels. Discovery of the producer, which came in flowing 300 barrels a day, has opened up a new Hoosier oil field in Posey county on a 640 acre tract owned outright by the college.

Additional wells are being drilled by the Sun Oil company whose terms give the school the usual one-eighth royalty. Dr. William P. Dearing, the college president, believes that all the overdue obligations of the institution will be settled within a year. A long delayed building program will begin as soon as debts are paid, he said.

Wells were drilled on the athletic field and then on nearby properties in the original search. A third try on almost forgotten property in Point township, Posey county, found oil at 2,680 feet in the Aux Vases sand.

PULLMAN SEEKS ORDERS TO HELP PLANE PROGRAM

An appeal to William S. Knudsen, production chief of the national defense commission, to permit the skilled men and production facilities of Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company, Chicago, to help speed the warplane building program was made yesterday by C. A. Liddle, president of the company.

Liddle sent a telegram to Knudsen which was an indirect protest against selection of Detroit as the possible site for a $21,000,000 airplane plant. The big plant will be a part of a program for construction of 12,000 bombers.

"Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company has in the Chicago area two plants suitable for assembly of airplane fuselages, wings, etc.," Liddle wired. "Shop organization is experienced in fabrication and assembly of aluminum alloy and stainless steel riveted or welded designs, an ample supply of trained mechanics have more experience in work of this nature than any other agent in the transportation field with the possible exception of the airplane industry."

CHICAGO STEEL RATE WILL TOP 99% THIS WEEK

Chicago district steel mill operations will reach a new peak at 99.1 per cent of capacity next week and production at other large centers will advance or hold to present high levels, a survey of the industry indicated yesterday.

Several previously idle Bessemer converters will be brought into operation in this area to bolster production by the open hearth method. Steel officials said that orders are still rising. Last week's rate was 98.6 per cent, the former peak.

Pittsburgh area steel production is scheduled to return to the all time high point reached two weeks ago at 97 per cent. Production at Birmingham, Ala., is scheduled to remain at 100 per cent. Youngstown, O., mills are expected to maintain output at an average rate of 93 per cent.

WARD'S PROFITS ARE SLASHED BY BOOST IN TAXES

9 Months' Earnings $2.61 a Share.

Nearly 4 million dollars in increased federal taxes charged against earnings of Montgomery Ward & Co. resulted in a substantial reduction in net earnings for the nine months ended with October, a statement issued by the big mail order and retail store organization disclosed yesterday.

Profit was $14,679,776, equal after dividends on the class A stock to $2.61 a share on the common stock, compared with $18,248,488, or $3.29 a share in the corresponding nine months of 1939. Net earnings for the three months ended Oct. 31 were cut to $4,405,322, equal to 78 cents a share, from $7,932,680, or $1.45 a share, in the 1939 period.

The boost in taxes affecting all businesses and designed to help finance the nation's defense program nullified an increase which Ward's nine month earnings had recorded on the basis of tax rates previously in effect.

Earlier Months' Tax Charged Off.

Against the third quarter's earnings, the company charged off the increased taxes applying to business for the preceding six months, the increased rates not having been approved by congress in time for inclusion in the reports for the earlier periods.

Net profit for the third quarter was $7,882,322 on the basis of income tax rates formerly in effect, against $7,932,680 a year ago, a reduction of 0.63 per cent. Against the 1940 figure, the company charged another $1,652,000 in excess profits taxes and normal federal income taxes at the new rates, as applied to the quarter's business. This resulted in dropping the quarter's net profit to $6,230,322, or 21.5 per cent less than a year ago.

The company then deducted an additional $1,825,000 from the quarter's total to cover the additional taxes applying to business of the preceding six months, and this brought the quarter's final net earnings down to $4,405,322, a reduction of 44.5 per cent from a year ago.

Gain on Previous Basis.

Net profit for the nine months was computed at $18,594,776 on the basis of federal taxes applying before the boost, compared with $18,248,488 a year earlier, an increase of 1.9 per cent. To pay the larger tax bill imposed by the new revenue act, $3,915,000 was deducted from the 1940 period's earnings, leaving the final figure at $14,679,776, or 19.6 per cent less than a year ago.

The effect of increasing taxes has been shown in the reports of other companies in various fields of business which have been made public recently. In the case of Ward, the tax boost is an important factor in the company's inability to reflect fully in net earnings the advantage of much larger sales. Several recent reports disclosed record-breaking business volume.

BANK CLEARINGS RISE, BUT STAY BELOW YEAR AGO

Chicago banks cleared checks totaling $367,200,000 in the five day week ended yesterday, the Chicago Clearing House association reported. In the preceding five day week the volume was $298,400,000. The amounts for both weeks were less than clearings of $397,000,000 reported for the corresponding 1939 week. The association's figures follow:

| | Clearings. | Balances. |
|---|---|---|

STOCKS DECLINE AGAIN AS SALES VOLUME DROPS

Market Ends First Losing Week in Five.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—A losing week for the stock market—the first in five—was concluded today, with steels, motors, aircrafts, and a wide assortment of industrials closing with losses of fractions to three points.

Prices softened from the start, and lows for the brief session were registered in the final hour.

Brokers attributed today's weakness mainly to the revival of nervousness over foreign affairs, many traders lightening accounts for the week-end recess because of the intensification of air raids over England and fears the axis powers were planning more severe blows at the British.

Business News Bullish.

Business news still was bullish but failed as a strong buying spur.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .3 of a point at 45.4 and for the week was down 1.2 points, the biggest weekly recession since mid-September.

A mildly encouraging factor was the slackening of volume on the decline. The turnover of 488,640 shares compared with 1,099,290 last Saturday and was the first dip under the million share mark in 10 consecutive sessions.

Rails and utilities held declines to negligible amounts. Among the few issues that retained modest gains were Union Carbide, American Telephone, and Du Pont.

U. S. STEEL CHICAGO LEADER.

United States Steel was the volume leader on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday, declining 1⅛ points to 71⅛ on trading involving 1,650 shares. Trading involved 15,000 shares in 75 issues, of which 14 advanced, 40 declined, and 21 closed unchanged.

Bliss & Laughlin slipped ⅞ to 19. Commonwealth Edison confined its loss to ¼, closing at 29¼, and Borg-Warner and Cities Service registered small fractional advances.

During the week Chicago trading totaled 147,000 shares, against 275,000 the week before and 136,000 last year. Of the 182 issues figuring in the week's trade, 64 advanced, 14 of them to 1940 peaks, 76 declined, and 42 were net unchanged by comparison with prices of the preceding Saturday.

SALES FINANCING FIRM VOTES $1 EXTRA DIVIDEND

Directors of the Associates Investment company, South Bend, Ind., sales financing company, yesterday declared an extra dividend of $1 a share on common stock, along with the regular quarterly payment of 50 cents. The company's action brings 1940 dividend authorizations to $3 a share, compared with $2.50 paid in 1939. The regular preferred dividend of $1.25 was announced.

General Box company, Chicago, ordered an extra dividend of 6 cents a share and a regular semiannual payment of 2 cents, bringing this year's distributions to 10 cents a share, against last year's 7 cents.

LEAD AND WOOL SET PRICE PEAKS IN WEEK'S TRADE

Most Other Staples Ease in Futures Marts.

Lead and wool tops, important national defense materials, occupied the spotlight among commodity futures last week by reaching new 1940 highs. The trend in most other staples was lower. Cash prices were generally steady.

Compared with a week ago, lead futures closed 0.04 cent a pound lower at 5.56 cents in December contracts after earlier rising to a peak of 5.62 cents. December wool tops gained 3 cents a pound during the week at $1.16½. The high was $1.16 9-10. The cash quotation was resumed by the Wool Top exchange on a bid and asked basis and was $1.19 a pound bid at the end of the week.

Copper and Tin Decline.

Copper dipped 0.05 cent a pound to 11.10 cents in December futures. Tin was 0.10 cent lower at 50.45 cents a pound in December and the cash price declined ½ cent to 50½ cents. Other cash metals held firm.

Rubber futures were unchanged from last week at 20.80 cents a pound in December deliveries, but the cash market advanced 0.15 cent to 21¼ cents. Hides receded 0.19 cent a pound to 13.01 cents in December and the cash price was ½ cent lower at 14½ cents. Silk eased ½ cent a pound to $2.56½ in November futures and the cash market was 3 cents lower at $2.58½.

Coffee, Cottonseed Oil Rise.

After reaching a 1940 peak early in the week, the Associated Press weighted wholesale price index of 35 cash staples, based on 1926 as 100, closed at 76.08 for a net loss of 0.42. The Dow-Jones commodity futures index closed at 57.44, an advance of 0.28.

INVESTMENT ADVICE.

The complexity of the problems involved in sound investment causes many persons to seek competent advice to supplement their personal judgment. Many investors desire suggestions of securities for investment or estimates of the prospective return from an investment.

The small investor may obtain helpful advice from several agencies without cost. Bankers often will help them steer clear of high-pressure promotion schemes and give them sound suggestions. Few bankers, however, have the time to make a thoro analysis of each individual's holdings or his particular requirements.

The research and statistical departments of stock exchange firms provide a more specialized advisory service than commercial banks. Weekly market letters, reports on business conditions and personal consultations furnished by many of these firms offer information and opinions that may assist the investor at arriving at decisions.

Advice from investment houses which act as dealers in or distributors of securities should be examined critically because their interest in selling securities "off their shelves" may sometimes color their comment or recommendations.

Altho the small investor can obtain considerable advice without having to pay for it, he will often find that he has difficulty in having adequate attention paid to his individual problems or in getting continuous supervision of his investments unless he pays a fee.

The average investor who cannot engage a competent investment counselor should restrict his investments to bank savings, government bonds or other high grade securities on which the yield is relatively low and the principal is reasonably safe.

Investment advice on a fee basis is offered by the trust departments of banks, by special advisory divisions of trust companies, by special branches of financial and statistical services, and by private investment consultants. These counselors offer continuous advice on investment matters suited to the individual needs of each client.

Unfortunately, there are incompetent or unscrupulous operators who pose as investment advisers. Many of them pretend to an ability to forecast the swings of the stock market. The fact is that there is no dependable formula for making profits by trading on the fluctuations of stock prices.

Legitimate investment counsel can be appraised by their training, experience, and reputation in the financial community and by their conservative emphasis on investment income rather than quick profits.

TAX LAW CHANGE IS OPPOSED AS BLOW TO TRADE

Involves Goods Shipped to Federal Areas.

The state finance department on Jan. 1 will place in effect a revised rule under the state retailers' occupation tax law which will remove tax exemptions on goods delivered within so-called federal areas in Illinois. A federal area consists of property and buildings owned by the federal government.

The change in the rule of the tax law was made recently by the department after congress had passed an act extending the states' taxing jurisdiction to federal areas.

Various Chicago business representatives have expressed the belief that the revised rule may result in unfair competition between Illinois concerns and out-of-state firms in filling natioanl defense orders for federal areas in Illinois. The Illinois tax, which is levied on the seller, will be applied to government orders, they said, while out-of-state firms that do not conduct regular business in Illinois could bid for orders without including provisions for the 3 per cent tax.

Believes Loss May Result.

A. J. McGivern, managing director of the Chicago Electrical Wholesalers' association, said that the revised rule "may tend to drive national defense business for government areas in our own state to firms in other states."

He declared the federal act was a "blunder" in that it was not specific enough to eliminate such a situation. Most of the other states, he said, have a sales tax, which would not affect government orders because it is levied on the buyer. McGivern said the act apparently was directed at concessioners and federal employés who pay no such taxes by having goods delivered on federal grounds.

John Harrington, an associate counsel for the Illinois Manufacturers' association, also asserted that the revision in the Illinois rule "might work a definite hardship on Illinois industry."

Will Make Study of Rule.

Officers of the Chicago Association of Commerce said a thoro study of the matter would be made by one of its standing committees.

Spokesmen of the finance department said they expected no unfavorable conditions to arise. Out-of-state firms most likely to bid on government orders are doing regular business in this state and therefore would be subject to the same levy, they said.

The congressional act will permit states to levy sales, use, and income taxes on persons living within the federal areas.

PRODUCE MARKETS

AMERICAN HAMS GIVE THANKS FOR A CLOSED MARKET

War Cuts Off Competition from Other Lands.

The American ham for the first time in many years will face no foreign competition at Thanksgiving this season as a result of the war in Europe. Every country that formerly competed for ham trade in the United States has either been invaded or has been forced to find other markets for its product.

Poland, prior to the war the strongest bidder for trade in this country, was knocked out a few months before Thanksgiving last year. Ten other countries, however, shipped about 350,000 pounds of ham into the holiday trade, mostly in the eastern cities. Most of this meat came in cans, cooked and ready to eat.

Similar Product Made Here.

Two years ago 13 countries dumped about 2 million pounds into American markets just prior to the holiday, the bulk coming from Poland. Three years ago 3½ million pounds came in. Some people liked the foreign product and still ask for it. Consequently some packing plants now specialize in the preparation of canned hams identical to the imported product.

Packers are preparing to offer hams in huge volumes at attractively low prices in competition with turkeys for Thanksgiving consumer trade, meat handlers said yesterday. Prices are expected to be only slightly above the abnormally low level existing a year ago.

All Meats Top '39 Prices.

Costs of all cuts of fresh meats held above 1939 levels last week. Pork and hogs crossed the 1939 lines on the price chart for the first time this season. At the week's close butcher shop owners paid from $13 to $15.50 a hundred pounds for loins, as compared with $10.50 to $13 a year ago, increases of 19 to 23 per cent.

Packers paid an average of $6.15 a hundredweight for live hogs at the stockyards, a reduction of 5 cents compared with the week before, but the price was 10 cents above 1939.

The week's average price of live steers rose 25 cents to $12.05, highest since November, 1937, and the second highest November cost since 1929.

The week's average price of live lambs to packers at $9.35 was 5 cents under the week before but 20 cents higher than a year ago.

MINOR DECLINES PREDOMINATE IN N. Y. BOND TRADE

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Minor declines held sway in a quiet bond market today.

Some of the recently advancing rails encountered week-end profit taking, but kept losses in most cases to small fractions. A few definitely weak spots developed in the foreign department, notably Denmark 6s, which dropped 7¾ points on sale of four bonds.

United States government obligations ended 8-32 of a point lower to 5-32 higher in extremely quiet trading.

TRIBUNE COMIC BOOK IS A NEW PRINTING FEAT

Its Pages Come Off Press Folded and Perforated.

BY LLOYD WENDT.

The mechanical department of THE TRIBUNE, which has repeatedly surprised the printing profession with new achievements previously considered impossible, completes another innovation today. It is the 24 page comic magazine book, perforated for assembly in book form, which is printed on the comic press with the regular, page size comic supplement. It comes out mechanically folded into the paper.

This accomplishment is new to the printing industry, and is the result of months of planning and study in The Tribune press and production departments.

The huge new press, installed in 1938, is made to carry the large seven column comic supplement, and the smaller magazine size book at the same time, perforating the book and folding it into position about the main supplement, without a single additional operation.

Issues 36,000 an Hour.

Moreover, the speed of the press is not diminished, and both supplement and comic book pour out of the folders, ready for the readers, at a rate of 36,000 an hour.

This printing triumph is only one of a series that have given THE TRIBUNE leadership in newspaper printing. Twenty years ago, THE TRIBUNE revolutionized newspaper presses with a multiple unit press, composed of 30 printing units, to which later were added attachments to provide run-of-the-paper color.

THE TRIBUNE originated the principle of a horizontal, rather than a vertical press. It introduced rotogravure to the midwest, and it created coloroto now seen in the Sunday sections. THE TRIBUNE's development of run-of-the-paper color has been hailed as one of the most important accomplishments in the newspaper industry.

Speed Makes Task Hard.

All of the newspaper printing problems are difficult because of the high production speed that must be maintained. It was not feasible, for example, to print the comic book magazine separately and stuff it into the paper, since 1,300,000 copies are required every week. The production department was given the problem of printing a newspaper and a book, in color, on the same press at the same time, and then getting them from the press fully perforated and folded!

When the first 16 page comic book went to press in March, part of the problem had been solved. The arrangement of printing cylinders, the design of the book itself, and the method of stringing the ribbon of newsprint [paper] thru the press, did this. Two webs of paper whirled over the yellow, red, blue, and black printing cylinders. Together they flowed over the "formers," which are triangular metal shapes that guide the paper into the folders. Out they came, 36,000 an hour, the main supplement folded as always, the little comic book folded snugly about it.

Perforation Causes Trouble.

The production department turned to the problem of perforation, which was expected to be comparatively simple.

The popularity of the comic book demanded, however, that it be increased from 16 to 24 pages on Oct. 13. This enlargement changed the problem. A perforating wheel could be placed just beyond the final comic book printing cylinder, but with 24 pages there would be three strips of paper, eight pages each, feeding into the formers, rather than two as would be the case with 16 pages.

Two such strips would provide an even pull on each side of the perforator. The third strip, however, would pull out of line, traveling as it does at a rate of 1,100 feet a minute. If it sagged, tore, or twisted, it would upset the whole printing schedule.

Gearing Must Be Exact.

The Tribune production department selected a perforating wheel that could be placed immediately above the formers, catching the three strips just before they are guided into the folders. No chance of mishap then.

The little perforating wheel, carrying a series of tiny knives, had to be geared exactly to the speed of the presses. If it ran too fast, it would act as a single knife blade, cutting the paper entirely in two. If it ran too slow, it would tear the paper.

A test run of the perforating equipment was made last week. Today the comic book is complete, perforated, and ready for the reader, without extra handling of any kind. The 1,300,000 copies of supplement and book have been run off the same press in 65 hours of press work, including make-ready time, using 137 tons of paper and 6½ tons of colored and black ink.

HERMAN LEARNS PEOPLE CRY OVER SPILT CLORPICRIN

Herman Begeman, owner of a jewelry store at 4184 Archer avenue, became curious about the workings of the safe in the store and removed the plate behind the combination lock to see how it worked. When he found a small cotton packed bottle containing a yellowish fluid, he called the police bomb squad.

Yesterday Sergt. Marshall Pidgeon of the bomb squad brought the bottle back.

"You can put it back in the safe," he told Begeman. "It's not nitroglycerine. It's clorpicrin, a chemical substance put there by the manufacturers to protect the safe from burglars. If the bottle is broken, it will give off tear gas fumes."

Police to Tighten Parking Enforcement Wednesday

Preparations for the simplified enforcement of Chicago's automobile parking ordinances were speeded yesterday by Capt. David Flynn, chief of the police traffic division. Booklets containing the new type of summonses will be given to traffic policemen before Wednesday, when the enforcement will begin.

The tickets will be made out in triplicate, one being attached to the offending car, the second to be kept by the police, and the third to be sent to court. If summonses are ignored, warrants will be issued and served by police.

The accompanying map shows the patroled intersections. Policemen on duty at each one are responsible for parking within a one black radius. There are also 85 other traffic posts in the downtown district, bounded by Chicago avenue, Roosevelt road, Halsted street, and the lake.

In all, 615 men will be assigned to the drive, including accident prevention squads and motorcycle men.

BAD BLOOD NO EMPTY PHRASE! IT CAUSES WARS

At Least That's Belief of U. of I. Doctor.

How "bad blood" contributed to the revolutions and wars which have convulsed Europe for the last quarter century is told in a survey soon to be published by Dr. Carroll L. Birch of the University of Illinois college of medicine. Dr. Birch is an authority on hemophilia, the rare disease sometimes called the "curse of kings," which results in excessive bleeding and the failure of the blood to clot.

It is an hereditary disease which attacks only males and is transmitted by females. Commoners as well as princes are subject to it, but it is only when it attacks a ruling family that it has political consequences, Dr. Birch says.

Traced to Queen Victoria.

How far these consequences may reach is illustrated by Dr. Birch in discussing the families that once ruled Russia and Spain. It is a story that begins with the English Queen Victoria, first recognized carrier of hemophilia, and continues down thru the travail Europe has suffered since Hitler, Stalin, and Franco began their rise to power.

Among Victoria's five daughters were at least two who inherited the hemophilia taint. One of these, Princess Alice, married a Prussian prince, and among their children was a daughter, Princess Alix, who married Czar Nicholas II. of Russia. This granddaughter of Queen Victoria was the mother of Czarevitch Alexis, last heir to the Russian throne and a hemophiliac.

It was this youth who exposed the Russian royal family to the influence of the monk, Rasputin. He gained ascendancy over them by instilling in them the belief that only he could stop the hemorrhages to which Czarevitch Alexis was subject. The fantastic lengths to which the parents went to protect their son and Rasputin contributed to the weakening of the throne and helped pave the way for the Bolshevik revolution, Dr. Birch declares.

Effect Still Being Felt.

A sequence of events thus begun has not ended yet, Dr. Birch asserts. The collapse of the Czar's authority and the death of all members of his family provided the opportunity for the rise of Kerensky, Stalin, and finally Lenin. Years later the threat of communism forced Germany into state socialism and gave Hitler his chance for power, as Dr. Birch interprets history.

Similarly in Spain the presence of hemophilia in Victoria Eugenia, a granddaughter of Queen Victoria and the bride of Alfonso XIII., contributed to revolution and bloodshed. Her eldest son, heir to the Spanish throne, was afflicted with the disease. A weak, pathetic figure he lacked the qualities which might have won the hearts of the Spanish people when his father abdicated. As a result the royal family was driven out of Spain and a period of confusion, revolution, and civil war followed.

Such case histories lead Dr. Birch to the conclusion that "no disease has been responsible for so many political changes, wars, and murders as hemophilia."

Value of Tom Mix Estate Is Estimated at $115,000

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 16 (AP).—The estate of Tom Mix will amount to about $115,000, Ralph W. Smith, attorney for the late movie and circus cowboy, said today. Preparing to file an application for appointment of an appraiser, Smith said only about $100,000 in real property and $15,000 in personal property has been found so far, instead of the million dollars Mix was believed to have possessed. Smith added that amount may be cut in half when obligations of the estate are discharged.

SIGHTS MAST OF SHIP LOST IN LAKE GALE OFF MICHIGAN SHORE

Ludington, Mich., Nov. 16 (AP).—A Pentwater fisherman's report that he had sighted the mast of the freighter William B. Davock spurred the search today for the wreckage of the vessel, lost in Monday's gale on Lake Michigan.

Gustave Fisher, member of a fishing crew headed by Clyde Cross, made his report a few hours after Cross told coast guardsmen he had discovered the submerged hulk of the freighter Anna C. Minch of Sarnia, Ont., a mile and a half south of the Pentwater pier.

Sixteen bodies washed ashore from the two ships after the storm. Coast guardsmen estimate the submerged hulks contain the bodies of forty-one other seamen.

NEW NATIONAL PAPER PLANNED BY METHODISTS

Christian Advocate to Be Expanded.

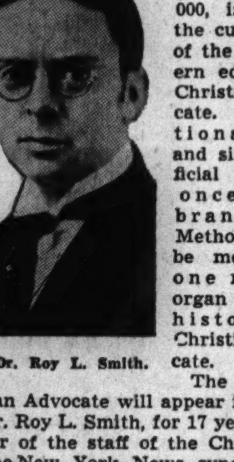
BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Announcement of a new official weekly publication of the Methodist church, with an initial circulation in excess of 200,000, is made in the current issue of the northwestern edition of the Christian Advocate. This sectional journal and six other official papers of once separate branches of Methodism will be merged into one national organ under the historic name Christian Advocate.



Dr. Roy L. Smith.

The new Christian Advocate will appear in January. Dr. Roy L. Smith, for 17 years a member of the staff of the Chicago Tribune-New York News syndicate, will be chief editor. The editorial and all business offices will be at 740 Rush street.

Plans Made Last May.

Plans for the merger of the seven sectional papers into a national weekly were made at the general conference of the United Methodist church last May at Atlantic City, N. J., with responsibility vested in a national board of publication.

Last July this board elected Dr. Smith editor of the new journal. He was formerly a pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church, Ashland avenue and Harrison street, and since 1932 has been pastor of the First church at Los Angeles, Cal.

Began Writing in Boyhood.

Dr. Smith began writing at the age of 11 years as a neighborhood reporter for a county newspaper in Kansas. His articles have appeared in more than 300 periodicals in the last 10 years, and he has published more than 20 books ranging from theology to fiction. His latest work, which required more than three years, is "A Voice in the Wilderness," a study of St. John the Baptist.

"It is the business of the church newspaper to print the news of the church," says Dr. Smith, commenting on the proposed editorial policy of the national Christian Advocate. "It is not called upon to provide news of the secular world."

In line with this policy the new publication will have 24 pages of editorials and features, and eight pages of regional news. Several regional editions will be published, but all will contain the same national news.

STRITCH FEARS STATE CONTROL OF ALL CHARITY

Welcomes Delegates to Conference.

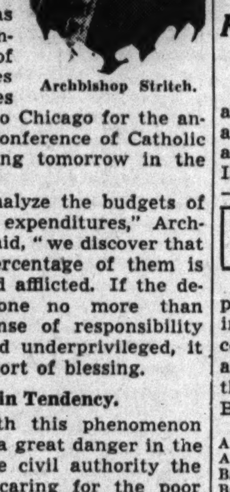
Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch of the Catholic archdiocese of Chicago, emphasizing that charity toward one's neighbor is the personal responsibility of every man, cautioned last night in a nationwide radio address against the tendency of permitting government to assume the full task of caring for the poor and afflicted.



Archbishop Stritch.

His address was made in welcoming directors of Catholic charities from all dioceses in the country to Chicago for the annual National Conference of Catholic Charities, opening tomorrow in the Stevens hotel.

"When we analyze the budgets of our public civil expenditures," Archbishop Stritch said, "we discover that a very large percentage of them is for the poor and afflicted. If the depression has done no more than sharpen the sense of responsibility for the poor and underprivileged, it has been some sort of blessing.

Danger in Tendency.

"And yet with this phenomenon there has come a great danger in the tendency to give civil authority the whole duty of caring for the poor and afflicted. If true coöperative Christian charity disappears, then, indeed, we shall have lost our free institutions and become the very thing which we dread.

"Pope Leo XIII once said that it is the function of the state to nourish and foster institutes and agencies supported by private alms and to supplement their work as far as necessary by public expenditures. We must keep this balance if we wish to give to our children our own heritage.

Fears State Monopoly.

"The civil authority welfare work must never supplant almsgiving, but only supplement it, so that all needs may be relieved. Never must we surrender to the state a monopoly in caring for the needy and give up the sweet word 'charity' for the word 'welfare'."

The national conference brings to Chicago more than 70 bishops and archbishops and scores of charity directors of religious communities. Preliminary meetings were held yesterday and the delegates today are to attend solemn pontifical mass in Holy Name cathedral, which will be offered by Archbishop Stritch.

The archbishop will preside over both tomorrow's meeting of the Catholic Charities and the 35th annual session of the Church Extension society, which is meeting in the London Guarantee building.

GLORIOUS MUSIC OF 'DESERT SONG' HEARD ON W-G-N

The glorious music of "The Desert Song," sometimes stirring, sometimes gay, was broadcast to the nation over the Mutual network last night from the audience studio of W-G-N. Four noted singers and an all-star speaking cast vied for honors in this latest presentation of the Chicago Tribune Theater of the Air.

Richard Bonelli, Metropolitan opera tenor, brought warmth and depth to the singing rôle of the Red Shadow. Miss Marion Claire, Chicago's own operatic soprano, was heard as Margot; Attilio Baggiore sang the part of Sid, and Bruce Foote that of Ali Ben Ali.

SUBURBAN HOME BUILDING HITS TEN YEAR HIGH

685 Permits Issued for $4,320,088.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Home building in Chicago suburbs during October reached the highest level in both number and value in any month in the last 10 years. A survey showed that in 82 communities permits were issued for 685 homes, costing $4,320,088. For the same month last year there were 386 permits for homes costing $2,578,099. This is a gain of 299 homes, and $1,741,989 increase in value.

Last month's figures also were much higher than the September totals, which were 514 homes, valued at $3,281,788.

Home building comprised nearly two thirds of the total buildings of all types in the suburban area last month which were valued at $6,838,948. This total was the second highest in the year, being surpassed only by July with $9,465,203. That total, however, was boosted by one unusually large suburban permit for the technological institute of Northwestern university to cost $4,500,000.

Grow Faster Than Chicago.

Chicago's suburbs continue to grow faster than the city itself. The October suburban total was $2,390,273 larger than the Chicago total of $4,448,675.

The October suburban total of all types of building was nearly twice as large as the same month last year, $3,508,898, and 52 per cent more than the preceding month of September, $4,492,615.

Evergreen Park led all suburbs in home building during October with 67 permits for homes costing $314,000. Skokie [formerly Niles Center] followed with 29 permits for homes with an estimated value of $290,475.

Gary was a close third with 70 permits for homes costing $288,745 and Hammond was fourth in home building with 43 permits amounting to $182,900. In addition, however, Hammond is taking care of its housing needs with a $1,300,000 federally financed housing project, a permit for which was issued last month.

Ten Month Total Rises.

For the 10 months of 1940 building of all types totaled $49,484,489 as compared with $32,681,783 for the same period last year.

Home building for the first 10 months this year was 5,030 permits, valued at $31,618,128. For the same period last year there were 3,277 permits for homes costing $21,268,028. This is a gain of 299 permits, and $10,350,102 in the cost of the homes.

"While a seasonal gain in home building was in order in October, the actual gain of over a million dollars in comparison with September, and the gain of 68 per cent over last year, show intense and widespread interest in home building," said Arthur G. Erdmann, president of Bell Savings and Loan association, which made the survey.

Du Page County Sanatorium

New Winfield sanatorium to be built at a cost of $400,000. It will replace present old buildings.

NEW ADDITIONS OF 3 HOSPITALS TO COST $670,000

Additions to three Chicago and suburban hospitals are contemplated at a total cost of approximately $670,000, it was learned yesterday.

A $400,000 two story building program was announced for the Winfield Tuberculosis sanatorium, at Winfield, Ill. Funds have been made available and contracts signed for three new units to replace the present old building erected in 1909. Alfred S. Alschuler, Inc., is architect. There will be facilities for 50 patients. Completion is set for June, 1941.

Bids are being taken for a $200,000 two story addition to the Lake Forest hospital, designed by Anderson & Ticknor. It will have beds for 40 with later expansion to 60. The new unit also will contain X-ray rooms, surgery, medical rooms, and offices.

Bids also are being taken for, a $70,000 five story addition to the South Chicago Community hospital, at 2323 92d place. Plans by Architect Elmer C. Carlson provide for a first floor 70 x 90 feet, with the four upper floors 45 x 75 feet. The new unit will contain 100 beds.

OPEN TAX SALE TOMORROW ON 435,000 PARCELS

County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki signed an order yesterday for the sale of taxes on 435,000 parcels of property in the county on which the 1939 real estate taxes are unpaid. The sale will start tomorrow under joint control of the county treasurer and the county clerk.

Another 80,000 parcels, which also are delinquent in taxes, were not included in the order because tax objections have been filed on them. The total delinquency on all the parcels—515,000—is $19,880,000.

The sale order means that a speculator can pay the bill due on any piece of property, thus placing a cloud on the title, which can be lifted by the owner within a two year period thru paying the speculator the full amount of taxes plus interest at the rate of 2 per cent a month.

The order, an annual procedure, is not to be confused with foreclosure proceedings in which the delinquent properties themselves are sold to satisfy the unpaid taxes.

Build Parking Deck at Wells and Madison

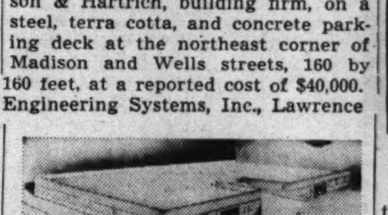
Work has been started by Patterson & Hartrich, building firm, on a steel, terra cotta, and concrete parking deck at the northeast corner of Madison and Wells streets, 160 by 160 feet, at a reported cost of $40,000. Engineering Systems, Inc., Lawrence



One story "parking deck" now under construction at Madison and Wells, adjoining the Hotel La Salle on the west.

The new one story structure will provide covered parking on the first floor and open air parking on the roof. It will increase the present capacity of the parking lot, under lease for 10 years to Loop Auto Parks, Inc., by 80 per cent, it was said. When completed, about Dec. 1, the capacity will be 250 cars.

NATION'S REALTY BOARDS DEMAND TAX REVISIONS

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 16 (AP).—The National Association of Real Estate Boards outlined today a nationwide campaign to eliminate the federal capital gains and loss tax on real estate and to revise the federal inheritance tax on real estate.

Philip Kniskern.

Ending its annual convention the organization approved last night a resolution on tax revision and invited state and local groups to coöperate in a "joint effort" to achieve "over-all limitation of taxes on real estate."

The association pledged its support to the national defense program and "strongly opposed" extension of the United States Housing authority.

Philip W. Kniskern of Philadelphia was elected president, succeeding Newton C. Farr of Chicago. John C. Bowers of Chicago was elected treasurer.

SURVEY REVEALS FEWER EVANSTON FLAT VACANCIES

Only 2.35 Per Cent Found to Be Unoccupied.

Evanston has the fewest vacant apartments since 1936 and the second smallest number in 12 years. A survey completed yesterday by the renting committee of the Evanston-North Shore Real Estate board disclosed that the percentage of vacancy is 2.35 per cent. The lowest vacancy was in October, 1936, when it was only 1.76 per cent. The largest was in 1932 when 19.85 per cent of Evanston's flats were empty.

A. M. Landaker.
[Toloff Photo.]

Edward M. Wallace, chairman of the renting committee, said that the survey sharply refutes the figures recently released by a federal bureau which reported Evanston as having a vacancy of 5 per cent as of April 1, 1940.

Only 147 Vacant Flats.

A. M. Landaker, president of the Evanston-North Shore board, pointed out that the survey covered only apartment buildings of six suites and more. If the tabulation had included smaller buildings and single family homes, as is the practice in some cities in estimating occupancy, the percentage of vacancies would be considerably less, he said.

The survey showed that Evanston has only 147 vacant apartments out of a total of 6,235 flats in that suburb. There are only 2 vacant one room suites out of 77 in Evanston. Three of the 157 seven and eight room apartments are unoccupied. The largest number of vacancies is in the 5 room suites—52 of the 1,610 apartments being without tenants.

Where Vacancies Are Fewest.

The fewest vacancies are in the area north of Church street and west of Ridge. The largest number is in the district south of Main street and east of Chicago avenue.

Evanston's present vacancy of 2.35 per cent compares with 3.61 per cent in December, 1939, and 4.87 per cent in June, 1939.

THANKSGIVING TO UNITE NORTH SIDE CHURCHES

'Y' Units to Have Annual Dinners.

In keeping with the universal spirit represented by the Thanksgiving holiday, many north side churches are holding union services. The Fourth Presbyterian and St. Chrysostom's Episcopal churches are joining in the 11 o'clock service Thursday in St. James Episcopal church, Wabash and Huron streets. The Rev. J. Harry Cotton of the Presbyterian Theological seminary will deliver the address.

Dr. Leo Sowerby, composer and organist, will play as a prelude Bach's "Canzona in D Minor" and St. James' choir will sing "Te Deum" by Sowerby, "Jubilate" by Strickland ,and the anthem "Antiphon" by Williams.

In Evanston the First Baptist, First Congregational, First Presbyterian and First Methodist churches will hold a joint service at 10:30 o'clock Thursday in the Baptist church, 607 Lake street. Dean Charles W. Gilkey from the University of Chicago chapel will be the guest speaker.

Four Pastors in Service.

The Baptist choir will sing, under the direction of Dr. William H. Barnes, who also is the organist. The four pastors, Dr. Charles H. Heimsath, Baptist; Dr. Hugh Elmer Brown, Congregational; Dr. Emory W. Luccock, Presbyterian, and Dr. Ernest F. Tittle, Methodist, will participate in the service.

Following an annual custom, three other Evanston churches, St. Matthew's Episcopal, Northminster Presbyterian, and Covenant Methodist will conduct union services at 10 o'clock Thursday in the Covenant church, Hartrey and Harrison streets. Music will be provided by Nobel Cain's choir and the Rev. Robert L. Logan, pastor of Northminster, will preach.

Dr. Gerald G. Moore of St. Luke's Episcopal church in Evanston will preach one of his last services at 10:30 o'clock Thanksgiving day, for his resignation becomes effective Nov. 30. An earlier service will be held at 7:30 o'clock.

The Edgewater Presbyterian church has invited the community to attend an 11 o'clock service on Thanksgiving morning. Dr. Adolph Bohn, pastor, will be in charge.

Services at St. Paul's.

St. Paul-by-the-Lake Episcopal church, Ashland and Estes avenues, will hold Thanksgiving day services at 7:30 and 10:30 o'clock in the morning. Albert J. Strohm will direct the choir in his own setting of the communion service. The anthem will be Watson's "O, Worship the Lord in the Beauty of Holiness," with John Colburn singing the baritone solo.

More than 1,400 young men and women unable to join their families for Thanksgiving have been invited to attend banquets in the neighborhood branches of the Chicago Y. M. C. A. This custom was started 52 years ago by the women's committee of the Central and Hyde Park Ys.

Unique at the Central Y banquet is the roll call of states and nations. Three hundred men are expected to attend the 12:30 o'clock dinner at 19 South La Salle street. Francis Peabody Butler of River Forest will be toastmaster and the Rev. Fred Harrison, pastor of the Elmhurst First Congregational church, will speak.

At Other Branches.

At the Lincoln-Belmont branch, 3333 North Marshfield avenue, Ted Frank, a resident, will be toastmaster for the eighth annual banquet at 1:30 o'clock. More than 100 men will take part in the ninth annual dinner at 1 o'clock at the North Avenue-Larrabee Y, 1508 Larrabee street. Woodrow Matthews will be toastmaster. Fifty men will assemble for the sixth annual dinner at 1:30 o'clock in the Wilson avenue branch, 1725 Wilson avenue. James Carroll will be in charge of the program.

A Union Thanksgiving service at 11 o'clock Thursday morning in the Wellington Avenue Congregational church, 615 Wellington avenue, will be held under auspices of the Lake View Council for Religious Action. Among the churches coöperating are Broadway Methodist, Diversey Parkway Evangelical, Lake View Presbyterian, Anshe Emet temple, Temple Emanuel, Temple Sholom, Unity and the host church. Rabbi Solomon Goldman of Anshe Emet will speak. The public is invited.

Festival at College.

Students at National College of Education in Evanston will attend the annual Thanksgiving festival Tuesday afternoon in Harrison hall. Miss Etta Mount is directing a play on the theme, "The conquering of self in a world of hate, war and selfishness."

After the play, students will form their traditional gift processional, bringing fruits and vegetables to be distributed to the families of the Mary Crane Nursery school at Hull House. During the processional, a group of 18 students will form a "harvest frieze" across the stage. Youngsters in the Children's school will have their Thanksgiving celebration at an assembly Tuesday morning.

Ascension Choir to Offer Bach Program on Tuesday

The choir of the Episcopal church of the Ascension, La Salle and Elm streets, will present a special Bach program at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening.

FUEL TAX SHARE TO PAY $407,757 COST OF LAMPS

Illuminate 57 Miles Thruout City.

Nearly 3,000 new street lights are being erected along 57 miles of city streets. The new lights, affecting almost every neighborhood in the city, will be completed by the end of the year if the weather permits, it was announced last week by Commissioner of Public Works Oscar E. Hewitt.

The total cost is $407,757 and will be paid out of the motor fuel tax fund. The lamps are of the incandescent type, except those to be placed along Archer avenue. These will be new style street fixtures with especially designed reflectors.

Most of the lights will be 6,000 and 10,000 lumen lamps. A lumen is an electrical light measurement and is equal to approximately one-tenth of one candlepower. There will be 1,904 of the 10,000 lumen lights, 983 of the 6,000 lumen and 24 of 400 candlepower.

The project on the north and northwest sides will stretch over 21 miles of streets. On the south, southwest and west sides it will cover more than 36 miles.

Smiling Young Danseuse

Smiling Marilyn Martin, daughter of the Spanish dancer Clarita Martin and Mellin Martin of Winnetka, is happy about the latest turn in her dancing career. She is a new member of the Ballet theater from New York, which is presenting a six week season in the Civic Opera house. As a trainee, Marilyn understudies a dancer in each ballet and has appeared in two of the opera ballets presented in conjunction with the Chicago Opera company's performances. ### Marilyn Finds Love of Dance in Her Blood

BY JUANITA DALY.

Marilyn Martin, daughter of the Mellin Martins of Winnetka, is the newest member of the Ballet theater which is here from New York to give a six weeks season at the Civic Opera house and to design the ballets for the Chicago Opera company. Marilyn, who is 20, has given up the familiar life of school, movies, and dances for the strenuous but fascinating world of the theater. For six weeks she has had a taste of the hard work which will come before she attains her ambition of becoming an outstanding character dancer.

"It's hard work, harder than I expected," she admits, "but it's wonderful, too, and I love it."

Began Dancing at 7.

Marilyn has been dancing since she was 7 years old. She studied here and in New York and received a good foundation in several styles of dancing, for which she says she is very thankful. Her mother, who is the Spanish dancer, Clarita Martin, probably influenced Marilyn's early love for the art. However, she in no way dominated her daughter's career.

"I've never wanted to do Spanish dancing," Marilyn said. "I like to watch it, but for myself I've always loved the classical, especially interpretive. I don't know quite how to explain it," she paused, searching for words—then gesturing to describe her thought, "but I mean dancing that tells a story—gypsy dancing, for instance. A perfect ballet dancer doesn't have time to interpret very much. Her technique must be perfect and demands all her attention."

When Marilyn joined the ballet, the corps was full, but she and another dancer are understudying so they can fill in when necessary. She is starting at the bottom of the ladder, for the ballet prefers to train each girl, whether she has had extensive ballet experience with other companies or is a beginner.

Watches The Dancers.

"I'm usually assigned to understudy one dancer in a number," Miss Martin explains. "I watch every movement she makes, try to get a picture of the whole ballet in my mind and practice the steps at home or off in a corner. We're left free to learn the dance in whatever way we think best.

"We have a class in the morning, taught by one of the choreographers with the ballet, then practice all afternoon, sometimes until 7 o'clock I'm usually so tired that I'm in bed by 9 o'clock. Life has become one round of dancing, eating and sleeping. Diversion? I've seen one movie in six weeks."

Marilyn is slender, so she doesn't worry about her weight, but she must be careful about her diet in order to maintain her energy. Dancers shun sweets.

"None of the dancers eat sweets," she says. Just lots of vegetables, fruit and milk. A vegetable plate for lunch and dinner, and we bring armloads of fruit to the theater and eat it all day."

The dancers are given a month's vacation each year. When there are no performances, the girls are expected to take dancing classes to keep in condition.

"If you stop practicing even a week, you notice it," said Marilyn. "Your bones just don't feel right."

Marilyn has appeared in two opera ballet performances, "Aida" and "Falstaff" and she also knows the ballet for "Rigoletto." However, she will have to work as a trainee for about two years before graduating into the regular corps. In addition to the hard work, she must have the patience to wait her turn, but the prospect is not daunting her.

"You're sure to be a better dancer if you do it the hard way," she says optimistically.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About People You May Know

EIGHT year old Robert Oberding is a veteran singer. Four years ago he made his first appearance in Vienna while touring Europe with his mother and sister. Last Tuesday evening he made his debut with the Chicago Opera company as captain of the children's chorus in "Carmen." Robert is a third grade pupil at St. Mary's of the Lake parish school, 4200 Sheridan road. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Antoine Oberding, 4223 Broadway, for many years costumers of opera stars. As captain of the children's chorus in "Carmen," Our Towner Robert sang several lines solo in addition to his singing with the chorus.

Another golden wedding anniversary was celebrated recently by Our Towners Mr. and Mrs. John G. Trebes, 3837 Greenview avenue. They have one son, Ray, and a daughter, Mrs. Phyllis A. Murphy of Detroit.

TWO out-of-towners recently became Our Towners when they received scholarships to the Presbyterian College of Christian Education, 1441 Cleveland avenue. The awards were sponsored by the Women's Association of the College. The scholarships have been presented to Miss Jean McDougall, Trinidad, Colo., who is doing her student field work at the Endeavor Presbyterian church, Cornelia avenue and Paulina street, and Miss Mary Elizabeth Thompson, Colfax, Wash., who is studying at the college.

LIEUT. RUSSELL D. PATTERSON, 1326 Chicago avenue, Evanston, has been ordered to active duty in the regular army for a period of one year with the recruit reception center at Fort Sheridan. He is first lieutenant in the infantry-reserve. The center has been set up to receive recruits and selective service men in the army.

VOTERS WAKEN TO REAL POWER BEHIND BALLOT

It's Surprise to Learn Own Strength.

BY GAIL COMPTON.

The election is over, and as news it is dead. However, one great political truth that has been overlooked for many years, was brought to light again during the campaign with such force that politicians everywhere are turning their attention to it once more. That truth is that the precinct is still the basic voting unit in the country, and the people within the precinct, if interested in an election, are the ones who ultimately control that election.

Curry J. Martin.

In the heat of the recent campaign more people became actively interested in politics than ever before. Many who never had voted, others who had previously adopted the "what's the use" attitude, people who had never troubled to register, all found themselves actually working in an election as poll watchers, judges, clerks, and canvassers.

Why the people reacted so violently to the election campaigning and why they, seemingly for the first time, wanted to work in the election, can be discovered by studying the workings of any precinct in the city.

Typical Case Cited.

The 78th precinct of the 4th ward is typical of many in the country. It was predominantly Republican in 1936, and remained that way in this election. The story of its organization and the work it did is not important as an isolated incident, but it is important in that it indicates the trend thruout the country of the new interest in politics taken by the layman.

In the early days of September, nine business men met to discuss what they could do to forward what they felt were the best interests of the country. Leading the group was Curry J. Martin of 1365 East 48th street, a young lawyer.

Together they drafted a letter addressed to their neighbors asking them if they wanted to help in the election, and circulated 100 of the letters thru the precinct. In it they said, "Our purpose is to bring together like-minded men and women who wish to work together for a common cause." They promised there would be no brass bands or political spellbinders, and stressed the fact that theirs was a work group.

Surprise for Uninitiated.

At the first meeting on Sept. 17, 50 people turned out. At a second meeting in October, 100 people came. There were no political speakers, but instead an earnest discussion of politics, instruction in voting, and talks on the organization of the precinct, the ward, and other voting units.

"We found," Mr. Martin said, "that we were talking to people who never before had taken an active part in politics, and who had no idea how an election was run or what a ward and precinct were. They were not illiterate, but well educated people who had the common misunderstanding that one had to be a professional politician to have any part in the election of city, state, or national officers."

30 Discover Their Part.

As a result of this beginning, more than 30 people took up election work who previously had been completely inactive. For the first time, politics became a neighborhood affair, and not a distant national campaign. They discovered that one could be in politics without being a mayor. They canvassed the precinct, checked voters' lists, watched at the polls, and acted as judges and clerks.

At first Martin had trouble in finding any one who was willing to act as a judge in the polling place, and he was forced virtually to "draft" one woman. After the election she called him and asked to be allowed to work in the next election. "I never before realized the tremendous amount of work back of an election," she told Martin, "and I had no idea it was so complicated. Now I feel as if I have really done my part for the government, and have actually had a hand in helping to determine national policies. It was a wonderful experience."

SUGGESTION TO ALDERMEN.

Your paper deserves congratulations on its articles about the slowness and high price of bus transportation in Chicago. I was delighted with Ald. Frank Keenan's comments after riding on a bus to the loop during rush hour. It was probably a new experience for the alderman to be crushed in the press of bus patrons for 45 minutes while the "express" coach "made time." The alderman should try a local bus for real delay.

Now that the aldermen are discovering that bus riding is the poorest of Chicago's poor transportation system, what are they going to do about it? I would suggest that they make the bus company cut fares, employ two men instead of one on each bus and pay the city for the use of the streets as the street car company does. 49TH WARD RESIDENT.

SUNDAY EVENING CLUB TO JOIN IN MISSION RALLY

Sounding first call for the National Christian mission, which begins this week in Chicago, Dr. E. Stanley Jones will address the Sunday Evening club tonight in Orchestra hall. This evangelistic campaign revivifies what the National Preaching mission began a few years ago, and with a corps of preachers will cover every major city in the country. Dr. Jones' topic will be "Pagans Waste Their Pains." Clifford W. Barnes will preside, and Dr. Ralph Wakefield, president of the Chicago Church federation, will also participate in the program.

Dr. E. Stanley Jones.

Dr. Jones in 1928 was elected a bishop in the Methodist church, but this office he resigned under the conviction that his life's duty lay in India. Here he founded an ashram, a spiritual center for meditation and interchange of thought based on the idea of religious fellowship, which idea has been translated in various degrees to America.

Luncheon.

The Chicago City Manager committee will hold a luncheon meeting for women members only at 12:15 o'clock Tuesday in Mandel Brothers tearoom. Mrs. Eric W. Stubbs, chairman, will preside.

FUTURE CITIZENS TO RALLY AGAIN IN W-G-N STUDIO

600 from Marshall High Are First Guests.

The second series of half hour weekly radio programs entitled Citizens of Tomorrow afternoon will open at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon over station W-G-N. The series of half hour shows in the W-G-N main audience studio is sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and dedicated to the youth of America.

George A. Beers.

Citizens of Tomorrow proved a popular feature when it was initiated last spring with broadcasts over a period of 11 weeks.

Marshall High school of Chicago, one of the larger west side schools, will be featured in the first of the fall programs. In the audience will be 600 cheering Marshall students.

Cheerleaders in Show.

The school cheerleaders and chorus will participate in the program. Principal George Beers and Miss Edith Wines, choral director, will lead the delegation.

Dorothy Gregory, 17 year old hit of last spring's series, again will play the part of "Jerry," typical high school girl, and a typical high school boy also will be in the cast. The program will be produced by Blair Walliser.

Heading the cast of Citizens of Tomorrow will be Philip Maxwell, a member of The Tribune's editorial staff, who will take the rôle of "The Principal." Mr. Maxwell will conduct a newspaper quiz, with the students from the audience taking part and the winners each week will receive $5 bills as prizes.

Each week the real principal of the featured school, in this case Mr. Beers, will give a brief talk. The school songs and school history will be worked into the program.

Maine High Next.

After the Marshall High school night, the following schools will be presented in order: Maine Township High, Carl Schurz, and Farragut.

Coöperating with THE TRIBUNE in the presentation of the new series will be the Chicago board of education, the county superintendent of schools, the school board of the Archdiocese of Chicago, and other educators thruout Chicagoland.

One of the many features of the show will be the Citizens of Tomorrow honor roll. Outstanding students in Chicago and Chicagoland will be admitted to this roster and their accomplishments outlined each week by Mr. Maxwell. Before the studio program 100 pupils from the high school honored will be taken on a tour of Tribune Tower.

OPERA PROVING A MAGNET FOR NO. AREA WOMEN

Club Members Attend, Often in Groups.

Clubwomen of the north side and north suburbs are enthusiastically supporting the Chicago opera this season. Reports from music leaders in the Federated Music club and the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs show that members are attending the opera individually and in club groups.

More than 50 women representing various music clubs went in a body yesterday afternoon to hear Kathryn Witwer make her debut in "Don Giovanni." Mrs. Edith Heffner Dobson, opera chairman, explained that Miss Witwer was the first winner of the annual $1,000 award made by the National Federation of Music clubs.

Opera Party Planned.

Both Mrs. B. J. Buckingham, ninth district music chairman, and Mrs. Charles H. Elliott, tenth district music chairman, Illinois Federation of Women's clubs, are coöperating with Mrs. D. H. Wamsley, state chairman, on plans for a clubwomen's opera party on Dec. 3.

"Everyone is talking about the opera, but most clubwomen are attending individually," said Mrs. Elliott of Glencoe, who also is state composer chairman for the Federation of Music clubs. "We discussed the opera and the woman's symphony at the district department meeting this fall and agreed to support both civic projects wholeheartedly."

Club Promotes Opera.

The Music Study Club of Chicago, of which Mrs. James Allen Young is president, will have an opera party within the next two weeks. This club promotes opera by presenting streamlined versions to familiarize their members with the scores and by encouraging young artists.

A similar program is carried out by the Chicago Musical Arts club, under the leadership of Mrs. Charles Pardee. The third musical club is the Columbia Damen group of which Mrs. Emil Eitel is president.

"We support both musical and literary projects," said Mrs. Henry Klass, corresponding secretary of the Columbia Damen club. "We are definitely opera minded and many of our members have season tickets."

COMPETES WITH BEER AND DOPE TO SAVE SOULS

Pacific Mission Haven to the Despairing.

BY DAVID ANDERSON.

Competition is tough on South State street, but the 63 year old Pacific Garden mission still does a thriving business in men's souls.

Night and day thousands of homeless men—bums, hoboes in from the wheat fields, ragged panhandlers, crippled up, mumbling, shuffling men—limp down South State street from Van Buren to 11th street and then plod back again. It's a parade of perpetual motion second only to West Madison street. Where they go, whence they come, is nobody's business and nobody cares much.

Lured by Menu.

Or they read the bill of fare on the fly-specked glass of a steaming beanery and peer into the dim saloons where schooners of beer are a nickel. Now and then they stop in front of the second-hand clothing stores to look at the suits and overcoats that dangle on rods from the doorways and listen to the canned music blaring out of the loudspeakers in the transom.

Here, in this jumble and welter of pawnshops, poolrooms, honky-tonks and cage hotels where a night's lodging is a dime or 15 cents—40 cents for a private room, including breakfast—the Pacific Garden mission holds its own.

It's tough competing with nickel beer, 15 cent burlesque and 10 cent whisky, but the mission does it with "bait" that nobody would expect to work on South State street.

"Bait" Is a Fountain.

The "bait" is an old fashioned drinking fountain and it stands just outside the mission door. Once in a while a thirsty man moves out of the shambling throngs and takes a drink. As he bends over his eyes are on a level with the neatly printed Biblical quotations in the window. Other signs bid him enter. Everybody, say the signs, is welcome.

Inside it is warm and clean. Row after row of plain kitchen chairs have been painted tan to match the tan store front. Since the mission was started 63 years ago the doors have not been closed a single day or night.

Originally started on Van Buren street, the mission moved to Clark street, and in 1923 it followed the shuffling throngs of homeless men to 650 South State street.

Founders Are Dead.

It was founded by Col. and Mrs. George R. Clarke, who have since died. Its first location was formerly occupied by the Pacific Beer garden, then one of the most notorious saloons in the nation. Col. Clarke asked D. L. Moody, founder of the Moody Bible institute, to suggest a name. Moody told Col. Clarke to rub out the word "beer" and add "mission." The name has stuck.

Each night the mission houses 73 men on iron cots upstairs after the services on the main floor are over. The men bring bundles of newspapers for bedding. Some evenings as many as 400 persons crowd into the hall to hear the singing and preaching. Harry G. Saulnier, superintendent, estimates that in a single month the mission has managed to find jobs for 20 to 30 men. "But we don't keep records of such things," he adds.

"Our first work," he says, "is the saving of souls. Giving men a place to sleep and finding jobs is incidental. Bringing men to God is our primary business. All else is secondary."

Has Converted 30,000.

The mission thru its years has converted more than 30,000 men, Supt. Saulnier believes. Among its converts was Billy Sunday, the famous whisky-fighting evangelist.

Booze, women and dope are the three main causes of South State street's down-and-outers, Supt. Saulnier says. "They start drinking or taking dope and cut themselves adrift from their homes and families. Soon they are forced to panhandle to get a shot of booze and before long they are fishing cigarette butts out of the gutter. It's an old story.

"But we also work with great numbers of men I call 'up-and-outers.' These are men with jobs, families, homes, men who come to us sore in heart, full of despair. We have set many of these men free again and rehabilitated their spirit. Why, just the other day we saved a man who has been on a drunk for 50 years."

Hostess

Miss Mary Coffey of the Joyce Kilmer league will be among the members who serve as hostesses at the reception for new members this afternoon in the home of her sister, Mrs. James L. Burke, 611 Laurel avenue, Wilmette.

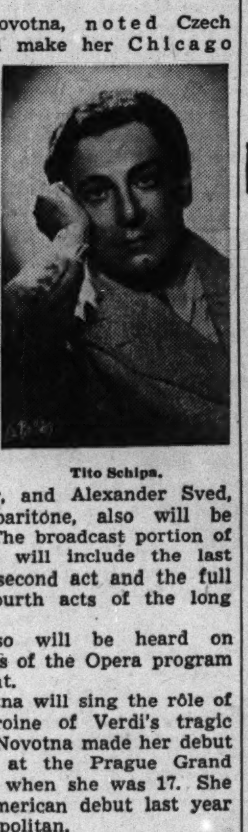
NOVOTNA, SCHIPA IN 'TRAVIATA' ON W-G-N-MUTUAL

Alexander Sved Also to Be Heard Tomorrow.

Jarmila Novotna, noted Czech soprano, will make her Chicago operatic debut in "La Traviata," tomorrow. The opera performance will be broadcast from 9:30 to 11 p. m. over W-G-N and the Mutual network from the Chicago Civic Opera house.



Tito Schipa.

Tito Schipa, noted Italian tenor, and Alexander Sved, Hungarian baritone, also will be headliners. The broadcast portion of the program will include the last part of the second act and the full third and fourth acts of the long opera.

Schipa also will be heard on W-G-N's Stars of the Opera program at 8:23 tonight.

Miss Novotna will sing the rôle of Violetta, heroine of Verdi's tragic story. Miss Novotna made her debut in the rôle at the Prague Grand Opera house when she was 17. She made her American debut last year at the Metropolitan.

Alexander Sved will be heard in the rôle of Giorgio Germont, rich uncle of Alfredo Germont, Violetta's lover. Tito Schipa, whose lyric tenor voice has brought him international fame, will sing the rôle of Alfredo.

Other principals include Dorothy Kirsten as Flora, Giuseppe Cavadore as Gaston, John Daggett Howell as the Baron Douphol, Edward Stack as Marquis D'Obigny, and Mack Harrell as Dr. Grenvil.

Maurice Abravanel, noted Metropolitan conductor, will conduct the Chicago Opera orchestra for the performance. Lou Jackobson, W-G-N producer, will supervise the broadcast of the opera.

The story of "Traviata" concerns the love of Alfredo, a young nobleman, for Violetta, a Paris demimonde. After pledging their love in the opening act, the pair flee to a villa outside Paris and plan their marriage.

In the second act, Giorgio visits Violetta and begs her to give up his nephew for the sake of the young man's career. Violetta reluctantly agrees and resumes her life in Paris.

Alfredo, deeply in love, follows her and asks her to return. In the final act the old uncle finally realizes that Violetta's love for Alfredo is sincere and consents to the marriage, but meanwhile Violetta has fallen ill and she dies in her lover's arms when he comes to tell her that they may be married.

"La Traviata" will be the second broadcast in W-G-N's series of five. The popular "Rigoletto" will be heard on Monday, Nov. 25.

WAYNE TO STAR IN DRAMA OF SEA ON CHICAGO HOUR

Walter Wanger's surging drama of the sea, "The Long Voyage Home," will be brought to W-G-N and Mutual network listeners on the In Chicago Tonight program from 7:30 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening.

The motion picture is based on four one-act plays by Eugene O'Neil and was directed by John Ford. It will be the second Wanger success to be presented this season on In Chicago Tonight. The first was "Foreign Correspondent" in which Wanger and his wife, Joan Bennett, appeared on W-G-N Sept. 26.

John Wayne, one of Hollywood's foremost actors, and the star of "The Long Voyage Home," wil come to Chicago to play the same rôle in the broadcast.

John Qualen, a former Chicagoan, character actor and linguist who portrays Axel, a Norwegian sailor, in the picture, will take the same rôle in Thursday's show. Arthur Shields, well known here for his work with the Abbey Players, will be a third Hollywood guest on the W-G-N program.

"The Long Voyage Home" opened yesterday at the Apollo theater. William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N will produce the radio version.

Driscoll on Sports Hour.

John L. [Paddy] Driscoll, one of the all-time football greats and current coach at Marquette university, will be guest expert on next Wednesday's Hall of Sport quiz program, to be heard from 9:30 to 10 p. m. over W-G-N.

Off the Trail

William Bachman, 5623 North Menard avenue, injured in an automobile accident a few weeks ago, has notified fellow riders at the Homestead stables in Morton Grove that he will soon be back riding his range horse, Blaze, regularly.

Carleton Prouty of Winnetka, until recently assistant manager of the Embassy hotel, is one of the many Chicagoans who have tasted the sport of horseback riding and found it to their liking. He has stored his sailboat for the winter and is ready to transfer his attentions to his new hobby.

Mrs. Ann Hollander, 4801 North Fairfield avenue, followed the lead of her husband, Norman, a few days ago, by buying her own horse, Ming Toy. Her mount and Sandy, purchased by Mr. Hollander a month earlier, are stabled at the Idle Hour barns on Lincoln avenue.

Miss Charlotte Steiger, 2343 Irving Park road, who finished both the 1939 and the 1940 100 mile rides abroad Idle Hour's Wimpy, is one of the most devoted of the stable's Friday evening riders.

Stable owners are preparing for a sharp increase in the price of saddle horses next spring, because of the drain on the field being made by army remount men. Practically all of the Chicago area livery stables are being combed by the army buyers for stock suitable for the United States cavalry, which is being greatly expanded.

Many north side members of the Schurz Saddle and Spurs club, one of the most enthusiastic riding groups in the Chicago area, have joined the trek to the club's third annual birthday party which opened for two days at Turkey Run State park in Indiana yesterday. Vito Valducci, president, announced that this year's party will set a new high record for attendance. The club rides out of the Christensen Riding academy at 1508 North Clark street, winter and summer.

William Moeng, 1954 Winnemac avenue, inveterate rider of the Harms woods trails, showed his hardihood recently by reserving a horse from the Holdorf stables in Morton Grove for the entire month of November and vowing that he intends to ride without interruption, come cold or high water. His sister, Dorothea, is Bill's most frequent bridle path companion.

HOW COMEDIANS GET READY FOR RADIO SESSIONS

Tom, Dick, Harry Ad Lib Before W-G-N Mike.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

While Tom, Dick and Harry "ad lib" a lot before the W-G-N microphone, they are exceptions to the rule that most radio wit—even most of it that appears spontaneous—is set down on the script. During one of the Fred Allen-Jack Benny sessions before the microphone Jack exclaimed to Fred, "You wouldn't dare to talk to me that way if my writers were here."

That summarizes the radio comedy situation today. Even Fred Allen and Edgar Bergen, who got along for years without much outside help, have finally acknowledged the fact that they rely on outsiders in a measure for their comedy.

But Tom, Dick and Harry—Bud and Gordon Vandover and Marlin Hurt—rely mainly on whatever resources they can command when they get on the air to carry them thru. Of course they have their comedy songs more or less prepared. Their pianist, Robert Trendler, recently retaliated against them for their daily ragging—they refer to him as Orville Pink—by starting them off in a number and then just suddenly quitting them. The boys floundered thru as best they could.

They Heckle Ed Allen.

Gordon writes the characterizations of Hercules and the Old Timer which Bud delivers. Hurt writes his own Gypsy Rose Levey sketches but he does have the help of Fred Kress for his Beulah sketches which are currently brightening the Show Boat sessions. Bud and Gordon are also featured in sketches in Uncle Walter's Doghouse. Bud sings on Plantation Party.

The trio regularly gets into the hair of Ed Allen, their announcer on W-G-N. They interrupt and heckle while the sponsor's copy is read. And it probably has the effect of causing listeners to follow it more closely.

The procedure of most radio comedians is in decided contrast to their procedure.

Benny sits down early in the week with Ed Beloin and Bill Morrow. Their "writing sessions" sound more like revelry than work, Jack is, of course, a collaborator of this very successful writing team.

How Quinn Does It.

Don Quinn has been writing the Fibber McGee and Molly show since the beginning. Quinn locks himself in a room and spends from 24 to 48 hours there, taking time only to walk the dog, eat and perhaps nap. When he emerges he has a script which only requires polishing and finishing touches.

George Burns has developed a scheme of having two writers working on the same subject. George and his brother Willie then take the best lines of each and work them into a routine. Bob Hope has expanded this technique. He may have from eight to a dozen writers at work on the same material. Bob himself takes a hand in putting the script together.

Fred Allen is said to have four writers this season, working in pairs, each responsible for his own sections of the script. Fred usually pencils marginal notes and then starts scrawling between lines. When he finishes the alterations there may be whole new pages in Allen's minute writing.

Radio Canaries

JESS KIRKPATRICK.

At 11 a. m. today W-G-N listeners will have the opportunity of hearing a solo by one of the world's smallest artists—Dicky Crooks, feathered leader of the Master Radio Canaries. When these veteran radio entertainers hop before a set of W-G-N microphones this morning Dicky's clear, flutelike tenor voice promises to give a gay melodious accent to the singing of the supporting Canary Chorus. Today's broadcast will mark their 2,000th appearance for Chicago and network audiences.

The 12 canaries of the chorus have taken quite a liking to their master of ceremonies, Jess Kirkpatrick, and will chirp soft "hellos" when he enters the studios. Jess has his own nickname for each bird.

THEATER OF AIR OFFERS 'EILEEN' NEXT SATURDAY

The Chicago Theater of the Air will present Victor Herbert's "Eileen" from 9 to 10 p. m. next Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual network. This favorite vehicle is the first of Victor Herbert's tuneful operettas to be aired this season by the Theater of the Air.

William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N, has announced that six additional operettas have been scheduled, running into the middle of January. They are "New Moon" with John Brownlee, Dec. 7; "Rio Rita," with José Mojica, Dec. 14; "Hansel and Gretel" on Dec. 21; "The Fortune Teller," with Jan Peerce, Dec. 28; "Naughty Marietta," with Michael Bartlett, Jan. 11, and "Cyrano de Bergerac," with Richard Bonelli, Jan. 18.

In Saturday's operetta, Marion Claire, Theater of the Air prima donna, will sing the soprano lead of Eileen Mulvaney, the charming Irish heroine. James Melton, who was heard last month with Miss Claire in "The Chocolate Soldier," will sing the lead of the dashing Irish patriot, Barry O'Day.

NEGRO HOSPITAL HAD START IN DOCTORS' HOME

Cares for Colored Folks of Evanston.

The only medical center for Negroes on the north shore was started in 1914 by two progressive members of the race, Dr. Arthur D. Butler and his wife, Dr. Isabella M. Garnett. The Butlers opened Evanston sanitarium on the upper floor of their home at 1918 Asbury avenue. Sixteen years later, this much needed institution became the Community hospital of Evanston.

Dr. Isabella Garnett.

After Dr. Butler died in 1924, Dr. Garnett carried on the work at the sanitarium alone. Meanwhile, the idea for a Negro hospital grew out of a discussion in the Evanston Inter-Racial council where it was pointed out that the city had a hospital for cats and dogs, but none for its Negro population. As a result, the Booker T. Washington association of Evanston was formed in 1926 with Clyde D. Foster as president.

Raise Fund of $20,000.

During the next four years, $20,000 was raised and Dr. Garnett was asked to allow her overtaxed and inadequately equipped sanitarium to be enlarged into a hospital with herself as superintendent. About $15,000 was used to remodel the Dr. A. Rudolph Penn residence at 2026 Brown avenue into a hospital building and $1,500 went to Dr. Garnett for her sanitarium equipment.

Dr. Garnett moved in with four patients from the sanitarium, two more entered that day, and since then the 28 beds have been full almost continuously. During the last 12 months, the hospital took care of 4,181 patients from a Negro population of about 6,000.

However, the problem of funds is always present. Of the 4,181 patients, only 700 made full payments, 2,500 managed to pay part of the expenses and 1,000 were unable to pay anything. In addition, the capital fund has been eaten into recently to meet several bills.

On Community Chest List.

As a charter member of the Community chest, the hospital has been receiving $7,000 yearly for several years and will be allowed $8,000 in the 1941 budget to prevent further loss of capital. This fund was part of a $50,000 bequest from the will of Mrs. Anna Shuman Elliot in 1936.

"I think there will be other endowments," said Dr. Garnett as she explained that there was a need for even a larger hospital. "Surely there will be some reward for all the work we've done here."

She could have said "I" instead of "we," because she has given more than 35 years to this work. Born and reared in Evanston, she was graduated from Evanston High school at 18, went to Rucker Business college in Minneapolis, Minn., and came back to Chicago to enter training at Provident hospital when she was 21. She was graduated from the Illinois Medical school in 1905.

Wanted Own Hospital.

"I took up nursing to work my way thru school," she said, "but I knew I wanted to be a physician and have my own hospital some day. My brother was a dentist and when he was studying, I decided I'd find out why he wanted to study so long and so hard.

"I'm an anesthetist, but I was forced into it. When my husband and I started, he would operate and there was no one else to administer the anesthetic. If I could do it over again, I'd be a surgeon."

And now within a few years, she would like to retire to private practice, so she could have a little time to travel.

Proud of Work Done.

Dr. Garnett is proud of her friendly, red brick hospital and the work that has been done there by Dr. John C. Washington, resident physician, the medical staff including Dr. Charles E. Galloway, Dr. James P. Grier, Dr. Robert M. Cook, Dr. J. D. Croft, Dr. Gail R. Soper, Dr. Elizabeth W. Hill, Dr. Penn, and Dr. J. Edmond Bryant, and the seven nurses who reside in a home at 1919 Grey avenue.

Wisconsin Honeymoon

Mrs. Jerome Edward Glick, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Herman H. Lasker, 1428 Jonquil terrace, was married recently in the Orrington hotel in Evanston to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman I. Glick of Shorewood, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Glick are graduates of Northwestern university. After a honeymoon in Wisconsin, they will reside at 7645 Sheridan road.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Nov. 18.

As long as the weather is favorable outdoor work should continue. Repair fences, cut fallen wood in the forest area, and leave everything in good condition for the winter.

Tuesday, Nov. 19.

It is good practice to take apart the spraying outfit and give it a thoro cleaning so it will be ready for use next season. It is easy to clean it with a brush and soapsuds; soaking in washing soda or allowing to stand in a weak vinegar solution will soon clean it. Keep the spraying materials where they will not freeze.

Wednesday, Nov. 20.

Watch the terrarium or glass garden to see that there is not an excess of moisture on the underside of the glass or fungus may destroy the plants. If fungus is noticed it is best to make over the planting and start anew. Give a slight crack of air by sliding the cover to one side.

Thursday, Nov. 21.

The natural time for sowing hardy annuals is in autumn. The seed ripens, falls to the ground, and remains there, dormant, all winter to germinate early in spring. The action of frost softens the hard seedcoat of some seeds enabling them to develop rapidly into flowering plants.

Friday, Nov. 22.

House plants will present a much different appearance if a study is made of the individual's habit of growth and a container chosen to harmonize with it. Odd or curiously shaped plants, like some of the succulents, look well in odd containers.

Saturday, Nov. 23.

There is yet time to cut material for propagating shrubs. Take the wood of the current season, cut into lengths of from 8 to 12 inches, according to kind, tie in bundles, butts up, label securely, and bury in sand in a cool cellar, or in the garden out of doors. During winter the ends will heal over and when the warm spring days arrive the cuttings may be lined out in rows close together.

This is a very easy way by which the material can be rapidly increased. When lining out, tamp the soil around each cutting. Grapes can be readily increased in this manner or the vines can be layered.

SECOND LIVING ROOM FOUND IN BASEMENT AREA

$300 Pays for Materials in Gay Quarters.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Some two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Axel O. Nielsen moved into their modern new brick house at 1741 North Natoma avenue. The basement was unfinished at the time. Then last winter the Nielsens decided to convert their under the main floor spaces into pleasant living quarters. They did so, entered their work in the Chicago Coal Merchants association's modernized basement contest, and won second prize.

Their achievement was a handsome piece of work which now rates high among the rooms in their two story home.

It is not a rumpus room nor a game room nor a den.

Perhaps it is the type of room you have been thinking you could use in your own home.

Room Full of Memories.

Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen did just what they wanted to when it came to the improvement of their basement area. They planned a room which would play the part of an informal, hospitable second living room. A large room where groups from the church could gather and where small, sociable meetings of friends and neighbors and church workers could be held. An inviting, pine paneled room, decorated with mementos from various trips and hence full of memories of nice vacation jaunts.

This basement living area is quite sizable—24 feet by 12 feet. The rest of the basement is given over to storage spaces, and to a spic and span boiler room which houses the stoker heating unit. The living section is apart from the utilitarian portion so it can be entirely closed off on occasions and as aloof as it wants to be.

Ceiling Painted Yellow.

The walls of this room have been paneled in wormy cypress, and there's a sun yellow painted ceiling. The floor is painted a mahogany shade and covered with a large Navajo rug. Other Mexican touches are seen in the sombrero over the fireplace, in small pictures and pottery and vases; all reminders of trips to Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen feel the cost was reasonable and that they have precisely what they coveted—an inviting, informal living room in their basement. Mr. Nielsen and a brother-in-law did the work, and the expense of the materials did not run over $300.

Play's the Thing

Sports fans who follow the more obscure athletes at the neighborhood Y. M. C. A.'s are still talking about the career of Eddie Ryan, who used to play basketball back in 1923 at the North Avenue-Larrabee Y.

Eddie dropped in at the Y in 1923 and signed up as a member. As he tells it, he "wanted to play basketball and do a little boxing." A few years later he became a coach of the two sports and in 1931 he was made assistant physical director. In 1937 and 1939 both heavyweight and lightweight teams won the city Y basketball championship under Ryan's coaching. Today Ryan is head of the physical and membership department.

But that's not the whole story. In addition to his gym activities he found time to attend several Y dances where he met Martha Kanok, one of the active women in the organization. In 1936 they were married and now live at 737 Belden avenue. Looking back, Ryan says that he is glad he dropped in at the Y back in 1932 for basketball and boxing.

BIG SIGN IDENTIFIES LIBRARY IN HIGHLAND PARK FOR STRANGERS

Newcomers to Highland Park have had no trouble finding the public library since the attractive new sign was put up recently at the corner of St. Johns and Laurel avenues. The sign is the work of Rudolph Ingerle, resident artist, who decided to identify the beautiful library building which so many people noticed, but few knew what it was.

Sign for readers.

"We'll have a sign large enough so that motorists may read it and attractive enough so that they may connect beauty with the community," he said, and went to work. The sign, showing an open book beside a quill pen in an inkpot, is mounted in an elaborate wrought iron frame and hangs from a 12 foot pole.

A naitve of Vienna, Mr. Ingerle came to Chicago with his parents and studied at the Art institute. Among his most familiar works are his studies of the Smoky mountains. He has a studio in the Fine Arts building and is a member of the Palette and Chisel club and the Cliff Dwellers.

What a Ballet Dancer Does at Home

When Rozsika Szabova, dancer with the Ballet theater, gets an afternoon off from her work, it means her mother, Mrs. Rose Sabo, gets one off from hers, too, for hers is housekeeping. "She doesn't get much practice housekeeping at the theater," Mrs. Sabo said, "so she likes to make the best of her time at home." Rose has a green and white apron which she wears when maneuvering a cleaner or working in the kitchen.

After a while, when Miss Szabova wants real rest, she takes off the apron, puts some operatic or other classical recordings on the phonograph, and sits down to knit a sweater. "O, you mustn't let them see you knitting," protested Mrs. Sabo. "They'll make fun of you at the theater." "All ballet dancers knit," answered her daughter, laughing, as she finished another row.

Ballet Lures Tootsie from Teaching Role

The scene is the Chicago Civic Opera house. Seated in the vast auditorium among the throng a young couple four years out of high school is silent as spotlights focus on the wings and the ballet chorus flutters onto the great stage.

"There she is, on the left," comes the whispered exclamation from one of the young couple. "It's Tootsie."

"Yes, it's Rose," is the answer. "And she was going to be a school teacher."

Nearby patrons who might have heard this conversation of the Lake View High school alumni would find no answer to the enigma in their printed programs. They might scan the ballet cast in vain for Tootsie or Rose, and their eyes might travel casually over the name of Rozsika Szabova. But Tootsie, Rose, or Rozsika, the names all identify the same person.

Where's That Teacher?

And to the tall, slim young person on the stage, even taller in her graceful posturing, even slimmer in her costume of the ballet, there might have come an echo as she gazed over the throng out front—"And I wanted to be a teacher."

What it was that changed her mind, Rozsika cannot explain, even to herself. For Rozsika is Rose Sabo, one of Chicago's three members of the Ballet Theater. Perhaps it was her ancestry, the Hungarian strain that called to her to express herself in dancing, in the wild gestures of the ballet, in the rigorous routine of practice and self-denial, all aimed at perfection in the profession she had chosen.

For it is work every day for Rose, and that is why a caller at the Sabo home at 3245 Diversey avenue might find her relaxing in the less arduous duties of housekeeping. There she can forget her adopted Russian name, her tarlatan and ballet slippers in the bantering of her brother, Alexander, 19 years old and a student of pattern making, or Olga, her sister, who at 17 is certain only that her career will not be dancing.

She's Still Tootsie.

It is not difficult, with a glimpse into this home, to understand why her diminutive nickname, Tootsie, memento of her baby days, still is a common appellation among her family and intimate friends. In her changing moods, her vivacity at times, and the contagious smile in her dark eyes, she is still the small gamin who was Tootsie.

Since the death of her father last spring, she has helped to maintain the small family apartment for her mother, brother, and sister.

"Tootsie rarely has any time at home," her mother, Mrs. Rose Sabo, explained. "She has a class every

Young Citizens Rally Tuesday in W-G-N Show

The second series of half hour weekly radio programs entitled Citizens of Tomorrow afternoon will open at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon over station W-G-N. The series of half hour shows in the W-G-N main audience studio is sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and dedicated to the youth of America.

George A. Beers.

Citizens of Tomorrow proved a popular feature when it was initiated last spring with broadcasts over a period of 11 weeks.

Marshall High school of Chicago, one of the larger west side schools, will be featured in the first of the fall programs. In the audience will be 600 cheering Marshall students.

Cheerleaders in Show.

The school cheerleaders and chorus will participate in the program. Principal George Beers and Miss Edith Wines, choral director, will lead the delegation.

Dorothy Gregory, 17 year old hit of last spring's series, again will play the part of "Jerry," typical high school girl, and a typical high school boy also will be in the cast. The program will be produced by Blair Walliser.

Heading the cast of Citizens of Tomorrow will be Philip Maxwell, a member of The Tribune's editorial staff, who will take the rôle of "The Principal." Mr. Maxwell will conduct a newspaper quiz, with the students from the audience taking part and the winners each week will receive $5 bills as prizes.

Each week the real principal of the featured school, in this case Mr. Beers, will give a brief talk. The school songs and school history will be worked into the program.

Maine High Next.

After the Marshall High school night, the following schools will be presented in order: Maine Township High, Carl Schurz, and Farragut. Others will be added for subsequent appearances.

Coöperating with THE TRIBUNE in the presentation of the new series will be the Chicago board of education, the county superintendent of schools, the school board of the Archdiocese of Chicago, and other educators thruout Chicagoland.

One of the many features of the show will be the Citizens of Tomorrow honor roll. Outstanding students in Chicago and Chicagoland will be admitted to this roster and their accomplishments outlined each week by Mr. Maxwell. Before the studio program 100 pupils from the high school honored will be taken on a tour of Tribune Tower.

VOTERS WAKEN TO REAL POWER BEHIND BALLOT

It's Surprise to Learn Own Strength.

BY GAIL COMPTON.

The election is over, and as news it is dead. However, one great political truth that has been overlooked for many years, was brought to light again during the campaign with such force that politicians everywhere are turning their attention to it once more. That truth is that the precinct is still the basic voting unit in the country, and the people within the precinct, if interested in an election, are the ones who ultimately control that election.

Curry J. Martin.

In the heat of the recent campaign more people became actively interested in politics than ever before. Many who never had voted, others who had previously adopted the "what's the use" attitude, people who had never troubled to register, all found themselves actually working in an election as poll watchers, judges, clerks, and canvassers.

Why the people reacted so violently to the election campaigning and why they, seemingly for the first time, wanted to work in the election, can be discovered by studying the workings of any precinct in the city.

Typical Case Cited.

The 78th precinct of the 4th ward is typical of many in the country. It was predominantly Republican in 1936, and remained that way in this election. The story of its organization and the work it did is not important as an isolated incident, but it is important in that it indicates the trend thruout the country of the new interest in politics taken by the layman.

In the early days of September, nine business men met to discuss what they could do to forward what they felt were the best interests of the country. Leading the group was Curry J. Martin of 1365 East 48th street, a young lawyer.

Together they drafted a letter addressed to their neighbors asking them if they wanted to help in the election, and circulated 100 of the letters thru the precinct. In it they said, "Our purpose is to bring together like-minded men and women who wish to work together for a common cause." They promised there would be no brass bands or political spellbinders, and stressed the fact that theirs was a work group.

Surprise for Uninitiated.

At the first meeting on Sept. 17, 50 people turned out. At a second meeting in October, 100 people came. There were no political speakers, but instead an earnest discussion of politics, instruction in voting, and talks on the organization of the precinct, the ward, and other voting units.

"We found," Mr. Martin said, "that we were talking to people who never before had taken an active part in politics, and who had no idea how an election was run or what a ward and precinct were. They were not illiterate, but well educated people who had the common misunderstanding that one had to be a professional politician to have any part in the election of city, state, or national officers."

"The people in the precinct were interested, and they wanted to help but had no idea how to go about it. All we did was offer them the chance to take an active part in their own government, and they accepted it eagerly."

30 Discover Their Part.

As a result of this beginning, more than 30 people took up election work who previously had been completely inactive. For the first time, politics became a neighborhood affair, and not a distant national campaign. They discovered that one could be in politics without being a mayor. They canvassed the precinct, checked voters' lists, watched at the polls, and acted as judges and clerks.

At first Martin had trouble in finding any one who was willing to act as a judge in the polling place, and he was forced virtually to "draft" one woman. After the election she called him and asked to be allowed to work in the next election. "I never before realized the tremendous amount of work back of an election," she told Martin, "and I had no idea it was so complicated. Now I feel as if I have really done my part for the government, and have actually had a hand in helping to determine national policies. It was a wonderful experience."

Vote Permanent Club.

Thus in one precinct more than 30 people gained a consciousness of politics they had lacked before.

"The work in my precinct," said Martin, "is important only in that it shows what has happened thruout the country. And the interest has not died with the end of the election, for the people in the neighborhood have unanimously decided to make our club of Republican voters a permanent one. This is true everywhere. The last campaign has given impetus to the deep seated interest of the people in their government."

DEMAND TRAFFIC LIGHTS.

Traffic conditions at Foster and Tripp avenues have confronted residents of North Mayfair with a problem. Gompers park fieldhouse is at the junction on the north side of Foster avenue. Patrons of the fieldhouse all come from the south side of Foster avenue, and are compelled to cross it. The crossing at this point is hazardous for the pedestrian.

The North Mayfair Improvement association has advocated traffic lights at this point, but owing to the fact that Tripp avenue does not extend north of Foster and there is therefore no cross traffic, regulations forbid the instalment of signals.

A near fatal accident occurred here within the last two weeks, and once more we call on city officials to cut the red tape which is holding up the installation of lights which are admittedly needed at Foster and Tripp avenues.

E. L. BARR,
North Mayfair Improvement Ass'n.

AMATEUR ICE CARNIVALS.

More attention should be given to ice skating shows. These ice performances are catching on wonderfully. The northwest side is the home of innumerable skating lovers and this section should have many amateur skating carnivals this winter.

STUDENTS CALL NEW SCHOOL O.K.; WANT TO REMAIN

Court Act Finds Them Satisfied at Leyden.

Of the 55 River Grove students who were transferred to Leyden Community High school in September when the eastern part of the village was annexed to that high school district, only two have asked to be returned to the school they previously attended, now that the annexation has been annulled.

This was announced by H. L. Ylvisaker, principal of Leyden, last week. Circuit Judge Harry Fisher's decision that the annexation, which went into effect Sept. 5, did not conform to county school board regulations recently was handed down. Mr. Ylvisaker's figures were used by proponents of the annexation to illustrate popular approval of the action.

May Try Again.

No plans to reattempt the annexation have been made, but it was said by some of those backing the move that another petition would be circulated next spring affecting the following school year. To make any further change this year, they said, would confuse tax rates, since the rate is higher for regions belonging to a high school district.

The annexation was desired primarily by the Leyden Community High school board in order to obtain a larger income and greater bonding power and by school district 85½, the area in question comprising the part of River Grove east of the Des Plaines river, of which Earl B. Johnson is president, so as to free itself from domination by the more populous village of Elmwood Park, which is its partner in the existing nonhigh school district.

Favored by P.-T. A.

It also was favored by the River Grove P.-T. A., represented by Mrs. H. L. Mortenson, partly in order to obtain the free bus transportation which the high school had offered. The petition was circulated during the summer and signed with more than 1,000 names, and was approved by the county school board, resulting in the action of Sept. 5.

The annexation was opposed by Elmwood Park interests, by many taxpayers, and by parents who wanted to be free to send their children to whatever school they wished.

About half the children from district 85½ had gone to Leyden, but others went to Proviso Township High school, Austin High school, and to schools in Oak Park.

Charges in Complaint.

Court action to annul the annexation was brought by Matt Hess of River Grove, and Myron Wisch, village attorney of Elmwood Park. It was based on the charge that many signatures to the petition were not genuine, that some were recorded more than once, and that due notice of the annexation had not been posted in accordance with board regulations.

Earlier in the summer the proposal to build a new high school in Elmwood Park especially for district 85½ was voted down overwhelmingly, due primarily to the lack of funds.

The 55 students who were transferred to Leyden do not include seniors, who were permitted to remain in the schools they attended.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Nov. 18.

As long as the weather is favorable outdoor work should continue. Repair fences, cut fallen wood in the forest area, and leave everything in good condition for the winter. Gardeners living where animal manures can be obtained should apply a good amount to the surface of all flower beds and vegetable gardens. It is one of the finest materials to supply humus to the soil.

Practically all early flowering shrubs can be successfully transplanted in fall and often they do much better than spring planted stock. Planting can continue up to the time the ground freezes.

Tuesday, Nov. 19.

It is good practice to take apart the spraying outfit and give it a thoro cleaning so it will be ready for use next season. It is easy to clean it with a brush and soapsuds; soaking in washing soda or allowing to stand in a weak vinegar solution will soon clean it. Keep the spraying materials where they will not freeze.

Wednesday, Nov. 20.

Watch the terrarium or glass garden to see that there is not an excess of moisture on the underside of the glass or fungus may destroy the plants. If fungus is noticed it is best to make over the planting and start anew. Give a slight crack of air by sliding the cover to one side. Syringe or water when the plants need water.

Thursday, Nov. 21.

The natural time for sowing hardy annuals is in autumn. The seed ripens, falls to the ground, and remains there, dormant, all winter to germinate early in spring. The action of frost softens the hard seedcoat of some seeds enabling them to develop rapidly into flowering plants.

In the restricted area of the city garden it is best to procure plants and place them at proper distances rather than to sow seed, unless care is taken to thin out the seedlings to give each plant an opportunity to develop properly.

Friday, Nov. 22.

House plants will present a much different appearance if a study is made of the individual's habit of growth and a container chosen to harmonize with it. Odd or curiously shaped plants, like some of the succulents, look well in odd containers.

Saturday, Nov. 23.

There is yet time to cut material for propagating shrubs. Take the wood of the current season, cut into lengths of from 8 to 12 inches, according to kind, tie in bundles, butts up, label securely, and bury in sand in a cool cellar or in the garden out of doors. During winter the ends will heal over and when the warm spring days arrive the cuttings may be lined out in rows close together.

This is a very easy way by which the material can be rapidly increased. When lining out, tamp the soil around each cutting. Grapes can be readily increased in this manner or the vines can be layered.

SECOND LIVING ROOM FOUND IN BASEMENT AREA

$300 Pays for Materials in Gay Quarters.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Some two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Axel O. Nielsen moved into their modern new brick house at 1741 North Natoma avenue. The basement was unfinished at the time. Then last winter the Nielsens decided to convert their under the main floor spaces into pleasant living quarters. They did so, entered their work in the Chicago Coal Merchants association's modernized basement contest, and won second prize.

Their achievement was a handsome piece of work which now rates high among the rooms in their two story home.

It is not a rumpus room nor a game room nor a den.

Perhaps it is the type of room you have been thinking you could use in your own home.

Room Full of Memories.

Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen did just what they wanted to when it came to the improvement of their basement area. They planned a room which would play the part of an informal, hospitable second living room. A large room where groups from the church could gather and where small, sociable meetings of friends and neighbors and church workers could be held. An inviting, pine paneled room, decorated with mementos from various trips and hence full of memories of nice vacation jaunts.

This basement living area is quite sizable—24 feet by 12 feet. The rest of the basement is given over to storage spaces, and to a spic and span boiler room which houses the stoker heating unit. The living section is apart from the utilitarian portion so it can be entirely closed off on occasions and as aloof as it wants to be.

Ceiling Painted Yellow.

The walls of this room have been paneled in wormy cypress, and there's a sun yellow painted ceiling. The floor is painted a mahogany shade and covered with a large Navajo rug. Other Mexican touches are seen in the sombrero over the fireplace, in small pictures and pottery and vases; all reminders of trips to Mexico.

One of the first problems which confronted the Nielsens in their planning of this room was what to do with the hot water pipes which ran along the sides of the ceiling. The problem was solved by a scalloped cornice of the same cypress as the wall. Now the cornice is a decorative part of the whole.

Nooks Are Recessed.

An artificial fireplace was installed to break the sweep of the long south wall, with real logs laid as if ready for lighting. Then, too, there are recessed nooks in the walls, filled with colorful bric-a-brac, and hardware in keeping with the informal cypress walls. The windows have been nicely placed and the room has light and air—and charm.

Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen feel the cost was reasonable and that they have precisely what they coveted—an inviting, informal living room in their basement. Mr. Nielsen and a brother-in-law did the work, and the expense of the materials did not run over $300.

BALLET LURES TOOTSIE FROM TEACHING ROLE

morning at 9 o'clock and doesn't get home until after the evening show. Last week was the first she had been home since January, except for two hours in April."

Helps with Housework.

When she does have an afternoon off, she gets home soon after lunch. There she helps with the housework, reads or plays her favorite operatic or symphony records on the phonograph.

"If you want to study to be a good ballet dancer," she says, "you have to give all your time to it. Ever since I made up my mind, when I was 15, that I wanted to be a dancer, there just hasn't been time for hobbies." An intense young person, she prefers heavy reading to the escape found in the light fiction of detective stories.

"I don't know what made me want to dance," she laughed, in answer to a question, "I guess I liked it. No one in my family has danced."

As a Lake View High school girl she began taking extra parts under John Petri, with whom she studied ballet dancing for several years. In 1938 Petri obtained for his promising pupil a place in the San Carlo Opera company, where she remained for two years.

Heard About Auditions.

"Last spring I heard that the Ballet Theater was going to hold auditions for summer performances in New York and Philadelphia," she said, "and I was finally granted one. But when it came I was so nervous and shivering that I felt I could hardly dance. I was so anxious to be with the ballet. But I guess my nervousness seemed worse to me than it did to them."

The type of ballet she enjoys best is that in which the complete emphasis is on the technique of the dance itself rather than a number of the more modern productions in which the dancer must divide her attention between the dancing and the portrayal of a character.

She is one of three Chicago girls in the cast of the Ballet Theater, which is playing here for six weeks, ending the middle of December.

OPERA THRILLS MUSIC LOVERS AT MAINE HIGH

Students, Parents Are Ardent Attendants.

The Chicago Opera company is developing some ardent opera goers at Maine Township High school and none more ardent than himself, A. M. Harley, head of the school's music department, has disclosed.

Mr. Harley attended the performance of "Madame Butterfly" and tho he has heard the Metropolitan Opera company sing it in New York City, a performance of it at Ravinia, and another by the Chicago Civic Opera company here, he remarked that the last performance here was the best of them all.

A fine indorsement comes from the parents and students of the school, who, when offered the opportunity to purchase season tickets for the Friday night performances, purchased three boxes in less than two hours and would have taken more if they had been available.

The Music Boosters association of the school, parents of the students, purchased one of the boxes and they sell or give their seats to the pupils when they are unable to attend. The music students of the school have one box and the third is for all students in the high school and junior college.

The Opera Guild made it possible for the students to purchase box seats for the usual gallery ticket prices by contributing some money to the opera fund. Mr. Harley said: "I can't say too much for the Opera Guild, for it is creating a great number of future opera goers.

"The night we heard 'Madame Butterfly,' 10 of the students were attending their first opera and they are now clamoring to go again."

Pastor's Wife Attends.

Mrs. George H. Parkinson, wife of the pastor of the Norwood Park Methodist church, is another enthusiastic opera goer who feels that every one who has the opportunity to attend the opera cannot ignore it, as it is "so very beautiful and worth while."

"Especially when their own city is trying to promote a cultural effort of this sort, it is important that all who can, support it," Mrs. Parkinson said.

William A. Reinke, a member of the board of directors of the Park-Plaines Civic orchestra, is mainly interested in the opera orchestra and says that he marvels at its performance and tremendous size.

"I saw 'Falstaff' the other night, and it seems to me that the Chicago company is staging the operas on a grander scale than ever before," he declared.

Betrothed

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Christ, 2836 North Mango avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Bernice, to Warren Bless, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bless, 1550 North Kedzie avenue. They are both graduates of Steinmetz High school.

Off the Trail

State Representative Emmett McGrath celebrated his recent reëlection in part at least by a ride at the Fairview ranch on Lawrence avenue, where he keeps his three saddle horses, Pepper, Windsor Rose, and Windy.

Armistice day stirred uncomfortable memories in Frank Sikes, owner of Fairview. Frank was one of the lads who manned the flotilla of Uncle Sam's torpedo boat destroyers based in Queenstown, Ireland. Twenty-two years ago last Monday morning his boat, the Destroyer Balch, was being tossed by a North Atlantic gale when it intercepted the radio message that the war was over.

Members of the Shurz Saddle and Spurs club, one of the largest and most active of the city's riding groups, began a two day party at Turkey Run state park in Indiana yesterday in celebration of the club's third birthday anniversary. The club was formed by several young men and women attending evening classes at Schurz High, and its activities have widened each year. Vito Valducci, president, boasts that his club has some of the best amateur riders in the Chicago area.

A benefit dance for the Des Plaines Valley Horsemen's Protective association trail police will be held at the River road stables near Irving Park boulevard Nov. 29, it was announced by John Keippel, chief. Proceeds will help the rangers in their task of holding wild riders in check.

Robert Lempke of Edison Park is the newest of the equestrians who ride the upper Des Plaines valley trails, among the most lovely in the entire Chicago area. Mr. Lempke rides out of Valley Green on East River road just north of Route 58.

The annual dance of the Girls' Riding club of Maine Township High school will be held in the school gymnasium next Saturday evening, it was announced by Miss Patricia Matteson, president. Jack Ketter and his band will provide the music. Assisting Miss Matteson are Vivian Houser, Florence Kolb, Mary Jean Lawe, Margaret Shales, Phyllis Wells, and Joy Maske.

Plans for an unabated winter program for the River Road Riding club, with headquarters at the River Road stables, have been completed, according to Glen Cook of Berwyn, president.

A new group with an unusual purpose has just been organized at the Heuer stables on River road at Bryn Mawr avenue. Ten riders, headed by Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Vogler of Chicago, plan to purchase their own horses and ride henceforth as a unit. They are now trying out various mounts.

Harvest Festival.

The annual harvest praise festival of the Peace Evangelical Lutheran church senior and junior choirs will take place this evening at 8 o'clock. The Rev. Otto Doering is pastor. The church is at Mason and Cullom avenues.

BIOLOGY CLASSES ACT AS SPIES ON RAT CAFETERIAS

Check Garbage Cans in Kelvyn School Area.

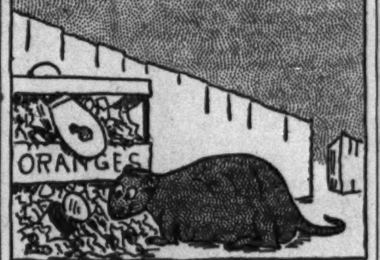
BY JOHN McCUTCHEON JR.

"Cheese it! The Kelvyn Park High biology class! Let's scram!"

This is the cry being spread up and down alleys in the neighborhood of this high school at 4343 Wrightwood avenue—by rats.

For under the direction of Miss Bernice Paul, biology teacher at Kelvyn Park, the region bounded by Fullerton and Diversey avenues and the two railroad tracks has been divided among the four biology classes in order to make a detailed survey of garbage can conditions.

Before.



After.

Sketches show what happens to rats when a neighborhood installs garbage cans.

The preliminary results show that of 737 residents in this area, 527 have adequate garbage cans and 51 are small apartment houses with incinerators. Fifty-seven have no garbage cans at all, and 102 have inadequate ones.

Only 78 Per Cent.

This represents a percentage of 78, as compared with the 100 per cent which was announced for the 35th ward in September by Oscar E. Hewitt, commissioner of public works, based on reports of the ward superintendents. Walter Bialczak, superintendent for the ward, explained that rat baiting had taken most of the officials' time lately.

The four chairmen of the class committees, Ray Belsky, George Guth, Dan Mielke, and William Hoffman, reported to the student council that rats "held conventions" in some of the 25 alleys in the district.

A form letter signed by the rat drive committee of the high school will be given to such householders as have inadequate garbage disposal facilities. It asks them to aid city authorities by keeping all garbage in heavy, metal covered containers.

In addition, Miss Paul said, students would write letters to city authorities this week urging that more money be appropriated in the new budget for the extremination of rats.

Drive Will Continue.

"Our drive is going to continue until every home has a satisfactory garbage can," the chairmen told the student council.

Each of these boys is in charge of a certain alley or a part of one, and records on a master map in the classroom the condition of garbage disposal on that alley. A white thumb tack means an incinerator, a silver one means a good receptacle, a green one means a bad one, and a red one means no receptacle.

NOVOTNA, SCHIPA IN 'TRAVIATA' ON W-G-N-MUTUAL

Alexander Sved Also to Be Heard Tomorrow.

Jarmila Novotna, noted Czech soprano, will make her Chicago operatic debut in "La Traviata," tomorrow. The opera performance will be broadcast from 9:30 to 11 p. m. over W-G-N and the Mutual network from the Chicago Civic Opera house.

Tito Schipa.

Tito Schipa, noted Italian tenor, and Alexander Sved, Hungarian baritone, also will be headliners. The broadcast portion of the program will include the last part of the second act and the full third and fourth acts of the long opera.

Schipa also will be heard on W-G-N's Stars of the Opera program at 8:23 tonight.

Miss Novotna will sing the rôle of Violetta, heroine of Verdi's tragic story. Miss Novotna made her debut in the rôle at the Prague Grand Opera house when she was 17. She made her American debut last year at the Metropolitan.

Alexander Sved will be heard in the rôle of Giorgio Germont, rich uncle of Alfredo Germont, Violetta's lover. Tito Schipa, whose lyric tenor voice has brought him international fame, will sing the rôle of Alfredo.

Other principals include Dorothy Kirsten as Flora, Giuseppe Cavadore as Gaston, John Daggett Howell as the Baron Douphol, Edward Stack as Marquis D'Obigny, and Mack Harrell as Dr. Grenvil.

Maurice Abravanel, noted Metropolitan conductor, will conduct the Chicago Opera orchestra for the performance. Lou Jackobson, W-G-N producer, will supervise the broadcast of the opera. John Gause will be broadcast technician.

The story of "Traviata" concerns the love of Alfredo, a young nobleman, for Violetta, a Paris demimonde. After pledging their love in the opening act, the pair flee to a villa outside Paris and plan their marriage.

In the second act, Giorgio visits Violetta and begs her to give up his nephew for the sake of the young man's career. Violetta reluctantly agrees and resumes her life in Paris. Alfredo, deeply in love, follows her and asks her to return. In the final act the old uncle finally realizes that Violetta's love for Alfredo is sincere and consents to the marriage, but meanwhile Violetta has fallen ill and she dies in her lover's arms when he comes to tell her that they may be married.

"La Traviata" will be the second broadcast in W-G-N's series of five. The popular "Rigoletto" will be heard on Monday, Nov. 25.

WHAT DO YOU SAY? PROGRAM TURNS SOCIAL

The popular women's public opinion program "What Do You Say," heard over W-G-N from 12:15 to 12:30 p. m. each day except Saturday and Sunday, has gone social! The program, primarily for women, recently has been given over two days a week to women's clubs. Members of the audience are asked to comment on questions sent in by listeners and cash prizes are awarded for answers.

The "club day" idea has been so popular that the program is booked up until March 1. Numerous parent-teacher organizations, mothers' clubs, and denominational women's groups have already participated in the broadcast. One Grandmothers' club had such a good time that the members are bringing the Great-Grandmothers' club next time.

MOVIE, RADIO STARS TO OFFER ANOTHER RED CROSS PROGRAM

A host of movie and radio stars will be heard in the second Red Cross Roll Call show, to be presented over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and other major networks from 12:30 to 1:30 p. m. today.

Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Amos and Andy, and Bob Hope will be heard on the star-studded show. Bette Davis will appear in an Arch Oboler play. Lionel Barrymore, Donald Dickson, Martha Tilton, Benay Venuta, and the Betty Brewer quartet also will be heard.

David Broekman, noted Hollywood composer and conductor, will introduce his new orchestra to the air on the program.

Speaker for the program will be Frank Freeman, president of the Motion Picture Producers association.

THEATER OF AIR OFFERS 'EILEEN' NEXT SATURDAY

The Chicago Theater of the Air will present Victor Herbert's "Eileen" from 9 to 10 p. m. next Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual network. This favorite vehicle is the first of Victor Herbert's tuneful operettas to be aired this season by the Theater of the Air.

William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N, has announced that six additional operettas have been scheduled, running into the middle of January. They are "New Moon" with John Brownlee, Dec. 7; "Rio Rita," with José Mojica, Dec. 14; "Hansel and Gretel" on Dec. 21; "The Fortune Teller," with Jan Peerce, Dec. 28; "Naughty Marietta," with Michael Bartlett, Jan. 11, and "Cyrano de Bergerac," with Richard Bonelli, Jan. 18.

In Saturday's operetta, Marion Claire, Theater of the Air prima donna, will sing the soprano lead of Eileen Mulvaney, the charming Irish heroine. James Melton, who was heard last month with Miss Claire in "The Chocolate Soldier," will sing the lead of the dashing Irish patriot, Barry O'Day.

Nathaniel Shilkret will lead the W-G-N concert orchestra and chorus. Next Saturday will mark Shilkret's third appearance on the Chicago Theater of the Air.

Dog Trainer to Be Guest of Bob Becker on W-G-N

Michael von Motzeck, dog trainer, will be guest on Bob Becker's "Chats About Dogs" program for a discussion of practical methods for teaching a dog the fundamentals of obedience. The program will be heard from 1:45 to 2 p. m. over W-G-N.

Von Motzeck is known as the man who knows how to make good dogs out of bad dogs and better dogs out of good dogs. Among the practical training problems he and Becker will discuss are: How to keep your dog from chasing automobiles; how to keep him from chasing other dogs; how to teach him general obedience.

2 More Opera Aspirants.

Gertrude Berggren, New Britain, Conn., contralto, and Gordon Dilworth, Brooklyn, N. Y., baritone, will be the two aspirants in the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air, at 4:00 p. m. today over WMAQ. Miss Berggren will sing "O Don Fatale" from Verdi's "Don Carlos" and Dilworth's solo will be "Largo Al Factotum."

ATOM SMASHING IS SUBJECT TODAY OF PETER QUILL SHOW

How a weird scientific wizard achieves "Flight Without Wings" will be the story unfolded on the Peter Quill drama to be heard from 3 to 3:30 p. m. today over W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Quill, the strange scientist who has devoted his genius to the defense of America, utilizes his "atom smasher" to develop a gas four times more buoyant than hydrogen.

In addition to using the gas to thwart a Red Circle sabotage plot, Quill finds practical uses for the gas. Small tanks of the gas placed in the pontoons of a plane would be capable of saving the plane from crashing. An ocean liner equipped with gas tanks would be virtually unsinkable.

Conceived and produced by Blair Walliser, the Quill series is noted for the bizarre, yet not impossible inventions which it depicts.

DEACON'S MAIL RICH IN HUMAN INTEREST TALES

No lonely man is the Deacon, W-G-N's one man radio show, who weaves homespun tales of an imaginary village each morning. For the Deacon's radio mailbag is a storehouse of encouraging and warm reactions from plain folks to the common sence philosophy expressed on the program.

Frequently the Deacon receives letters from down and outers and transcients who thank him for the solace and encouragement his program gives. Or a mother will write for a copy of the Deacon's own poem entitled "Your Son." Another man will write and tell him a tale of hard luck—a story which the Deacon may dramatize and use for some future program.

The Deacon's real name is Howard Hoffman. He is heard Monday thru Friday from 9:20 to 9:30 p. m. [central standard time] over W-G-N.

Driscoll on Sports Hour.

John L. [Paddy] Driscoll, one of the all-time football greats and current coach at Marquette university, will be guest expert on next Wednesday's Hall of Sport quiz program, to be heard from 9:30 to 10 p. m. over W-G-N.

HOW COMEDIANS GET READY FOR RADIO SESSIONS

Tom, Dick, Harry Ad Lib Before W-G-N Mike.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

While Tom, Dick and Harry "ad lib" a lot before the W-G-N microphone, they are exceptions to the rule that most radio wit—even most of it that appears spontaneous—is set down on the script. During one of the Fred Allen-Jack Benny sessions before the microphone Jack exclaimed to Fred, "You wouldn't dare to talk to me that way if my writers were here."

That summarizes the radio comedy situation today. Even Fred Allen and Edgar Bergen, who got along for years without much outside help, have finally acknowledged the fact that they rely on outsiders to prepare for their comedy.

But Tom, Dick and Harry—Bud and Gordon Vandover and Marlin Hurt—rely mainly on whatever resources they can command when they get on the air to carry them thru. Of course they have their comedy songs more or less prepared. Their pianist, Robert Trendler, recently retaliated against them for their daily ragging—they refer to him as Orville Pink—by starting them off in a number and then just suddenly quitting them. The boys floundered thru as best they could.

They Heckle Ed Allen.

Gordon writes the characterizations of Hercules and the Old Timer which Bud delivers. Hurt writes his own Gypsy Rose Levey sketches but he does have the help of Fred Kress for his Beulah sketches which are currently brightening the Show Boat sessions. Bud and Gordon are also featured in sketches in Uncle Walter's Doghouse. Bud sings on Plantation Party.

The trio regularly gets into the hair of Ed Allen, their announcer on W-G-N. They interrupt and heckle while the sponsor's copy is read. And it probably has the effect of causing listeners to follow it more closely.

The procedure of most radio comedians is in decided contrast to their procedure.

Benny sits down early in the week with Ed Beloin and Bill Morrow. Their "writing sessions" sound more like revelry than work. Jack is, of course, a collaborator of this very successful writing team.

How Quinn Does It.

Don Quinn has been writing the Fibber McGee and Molly show since the beginning. Quinn locks himself in a room and spends from 24 to 48 hours there, taking time only to walk the dog, eat and perhaps nap. When he emerges he has a script which only requires polishing and finishing touches.

George Burns has developed a scheme of having two writers working on the same subject. George and his brother Willie then take the best lines of each and work them into a routine. Bob Hope has expanded this technique. He may have from eight to a dozen writers at work on the same material. Bob himself takes a hand in putting the script together.

Fred Allen is said to have four writers this season, working in pairs, each responsible for his own sections of the script. Fred usually pencils marginal notes and then starts scrawling between lines. When he finishes the alterations there may be whole new pages in Allen's minute writing.

One of his writers once said: "You want to celebrate if you get one of your original ideas into the air intact."

WAYNE TO STAR IN DRAMA OF SEA ON CHICAGO HOUR

Walter Wanger's surging drama of the sea, "The Long Voyage Home," will be brought to W-G-N and Mutual network listeners on the In Chicago Tonight program from 7:30 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening.

The motion picture is based on four one-act plays by Eugene O'Neill and was directed by John Ford. It will be the second Wanger success to be presented this season on In Chicago Tonight. The first was "Foreign Correspondent" in which Wanger and his wife, Joan Bennett, appeared on W-G-N Sept. 26.

John Wayne, one of Hollywood's foremost actors, and the star of "The Long Voyage Home," will come to Chicago to play the same rôle in the broadcast.

John Qualen, a former Chicagoan, character actor and linguist who portrays Axel, a Norwegian sailor, in the picture, will take the same rôle in Thursday's show. Arthur Shields, well known here for his years with the Abbey Players, will be a third Hollywood guest on the W-G-N program.

"The Long Voyage Home" opened yesterday at the Apollo theater. William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N, will produce the radio version.

JESS KIRKPATRICK.

At 11 a. m. today W-G-N listeners will have the opportunity of hearing a solo by one of the world's smallest artists—Dicky Crooks, feathered leader of the Master Radio Canaries. When these veteran radio entertainers hop before a set of W-G-N microphones this morning Dicky's clear, flutelike tenor voice promises to give a gay melodious accent to the singing of the supporting Canary Chorus. Today's broadcast will mark their 2,000th appearance for Chicago and network audiences.

The 12 canaries of the chorus have taken quite a liking to their master of ceremonies, Jess Kirkpatrick, and will chirp soft "hellos" when he enters the studios. Jess has his own nickname for each bird.

10,000 WOMEN HELP DRIVE FOR COMMUNITY FUND

Workers Represent 54 Club Organizations.

More than 10,000 members of 54 women's clubs are taking active part in the drive of the Community fund towards its goal of $3,604,000. The clubs are affiliated with the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs and are under the leadership of the federation president, Mrs. Park Q. Wray. These women are working under the women's division of the Community fund of which Mrs. King Mitchell is the chairman.

"Altho individual clubs have often supported the Community fund," Mrs. Mitchell said, "this is the first time the Federation has had active representation in the women's division. I feel that this is an important step toward reaching our goal of 100 per cent coöperation from all Chicago women's clubs."

Ask Aid of P.-T. A.

Mrs. Paul Hahn, student aid chairman of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, sent a note to the presidents of 300 Parent-Teachers' associations asking their active support.

"The student aid committee of every P.-T. A. unit knows how important it is to help up the 185 welfare agencies represented by the fund," Mrs. Hahn said.

Clubs which sent checks to help the fund include the Croation Woman's club, Fellowship House Woman's club, Fernwood Woman's club, League of Mothers' clubs, National Society of Colonial Dames of America, Neighborhood Woman's club, Portage Park Woman's club, Seward Park Woman's club, Marquette Manor Woman's club, Mayfair Woman's club, Delta Theta Tau sorority, Shaare Zedek Sisterhood, Deborah Woman's club, United Order of True Sisters, Lincoln No. 22, and the South Side Catholic Woman's club.

MEET CHARLIE, THE MAN BEHIND SMOOTH OPERAS

Backstage Maestro Likes His Job.

BY MILDRED WILDS.

Charlie Drumheller, who lives at 355 West Madison street, never sees his name in lights. Nobody calls him maestro and his name is hidden way down in the pink program book. Yet night after night on the stage of the Civic Opera house chapters are written in Chicago's history of music because Charlie plays his part.

Nobody in the boxes see him. The opera lovers who peer ecstatically from the top flight in the top gallery don't know he's there and they don't care. But because Charlie worked last night and the night before, the orchestra was in its place, the stars swung onto the stage to mount golden thrones, enter convents or leave their prisons. And if they didn't it would be too bad for Charlie.

Takes Tantrums In Stride.

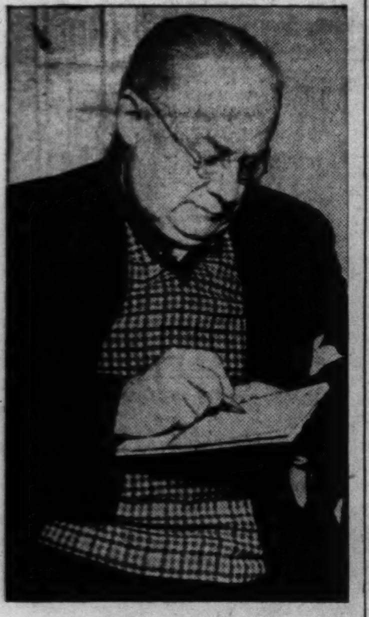
Neither time, tide nor artistic temperament thwarts Charlie in his job of getting opera singers on the stage. There was Mary Garden, the one who was latest the most. There have been sopranos and contraltos and some had tempers, but they all laughed at Charlie. He knows them and all the songs they sing. He knows when and what guard should wear what hat or omit his cape. "I go with the lease," says Charlie, "and I came with the first load of sand."

In 1910 Charlie didn't have a waistline. He wasn't round like Santa Claus and his voice, too, was in good form. Charlie had a degree from Dickinson college in Pennsylvania and some good training from Madame Cappiani of New York. He was beginning in Aida in Boston with the Aborn Opera company. It was the year of Haley's comet.

"Yea, I used to sing way back befor the dead sea got sick," says



Charlie on the job.

Charlie, who doesn't believe in being exact about information. "Sure, I can speak a number of languages, two of them, profane and political," he answers.

Sang For Ten Years.

He did sing for ten years. He was the lamplighter in "Madame Butterfly." He was a messenger in "Il Trovatore." He was with the San Carol Opera company, sang in Ravinia park, was with Max Fish Handler and with the Century Opera company in New York. He forgets the others on the list.

Charlie can do everything in opera and that is what he does. Some say his title is musical secretary and some call him assistant stage manager. In 1920 he lost his voice and moved backstage.

And this is what he did ten nights ago for Verdi's "Il Trovatore." A little room off stage at the left of the theater is Charlie's domain, bounded on the front by a switchboard with 105 keys. A lift of each key permits him to speak into each of the 105 rooms. But the occupants can't talk back, much to Charlie's regret. He likes to hear them have tantrums.

Doesn't Trust Gadgets.

Charlie sits before his keys waiting. Outside with ropes, clamps, and hard work a crew of some 100 is recreating a formal garden in the provinces of Aragon of the 15th century. Charlie begins to push buttons. "Miss Chase, Miss Chase. Time for the first act. Come out now." A little later he calls, "Orchestra in the pit. Gentlemen, take your places please. Time for curtain."

Then Charlie, the old-timer, leaves his fancy switchboard and yells at the gentlemen from the door leading to their rooms. "I don't always trust that gadget," he complains.

His colleagues standing by explain: "He likes to hear them give him the razzberries back when he calls."

The orchestra is in its place. In answer to Charlie's call the singers are ready at their entrances. The velvet curtain parts and "Il Trovatore" begins to unfold in its tragic sequence. Charlie is everywhere.

Leads Off Stage Hymn.

Four times the scenery has been

Dolls Will Wear Their Party Clothes at Fairyland Show in La Grange

Dressed as well known story book characters and given appropriate settings, more than 100 dolls will be on display at the show sponsored by young women of Emmanuel Episcopal church, La Grange, to be held Nov. 23 to 30 at the Norrland hotel in the suburb. Mrs. Harry Blakley has included a Chinese doll from her collection for the Fairyland show, while Mrs. Chester Leatham Jr. has made sure that Mother Goose is not forgotten—nor a frosted house.

That Little Red Riding Hood, Hansel and Gretel, Humpty Dumpty, and all the rest may have a part in the Mother Goose Doll show, Mrs. Donald Jones and Mrs. Sidney F. Keoughan also are devoting long hours along with other members of Circle Three. Grownups as well as children of La Grange are said to be looking forward with enthusiasm to the exhibit that will be given in a preview a la Hollywood on the eve before the public is admitted.

Bridge Game Mellows Soul, Expert Claims

West side women who won't get home in time to cook dinner tomorrow because they've been out playing bridge, had better read this to their husbands.

Bridge playing builds character. Further, a good bridge game sweetens the disposition and mellows the soul. Bidding correctly with your partner is a lesson in coöperation. This communion of minds is a very beautiful thing. Harry McGill says so.

Long ago before 1929 and the end of orders from contractors, Harry McGill was a salesman. He sold in-a-door beds, kitchen tables, and bathroom cabinets. He and his wife played bridge when their friends came to call. The friends got out the bridge table when the McGills went to call on them. Mr. McGill decided to study and improve his game. When he lost his job, he sold eggs, then he sold furniture, but he kept on studying bridge.

Regarded as Authority.

Today the bridge players, good, bad, and in-between, a total of some 200 in Austin and Garfield park, look to Harry McGill as their bridge authority. As a service of the Chicago park district he teaches the game free from 1 to 5 o'clock every afternoon in Garfield park, from 1 to 5 Wednesday afternoons and from 7 to 11 Thursday evenings in Austin Town hall. The park district sponsors the instruction as part of its recreation program. The Work Project administration pays his salary.

Bridge is the thing in Austin. In addition to the classes, the Austin Town Hall Bridge club plays every Friday evening. The auxiliary group of the club plays Monday and Wednesday afternoons.

Every other Saturday night is the meeting of the Central Bridge club.

Local Emily Post.

Mr. McGill is also the Emily Post of Garfield and Austin bridge etiquette. No, no, he says firmly to the player who grumbles and mumbles, "Gosh, who dealt this mess?" Picture cards or not in your hand, Mr. McGill says smile, be nonchalant.

It is acceptable to ask a new partner before the game starts, "What system do you play?" You may also ask him, "Do you play it with any variations?" to which wives sitting near by are definitely not to respond, "Yeah! Sometimes he forgets to use his head."

Ninety per cent of Mr. McGill's pupils are women. But he protects his minority from being bawled out in public. The age range is from 20 years to 75. Mr McGill says bridge is not just a card game. It unravels taut nerves and does to a disposition what a facial does to the complexion.

Divided Into Classes.

There are different classes of bridge players, says Mr. McGill. There are the serious students and the hopeless cases. Class three is composed of the independents. These regard a partner as a necessary adjunct to the game, like the table or score pad. Independents don't consider the partner's bid nor brains. The bridge mouses are in class four. They can't get up enough nerve to bid, almost do, hesitate, giggle, and then don't.

The bridge lions are the stout hearted who bid with or without face cards. "Overbidding the hand," says Mr. McGill, "is the commonest and gravest error."

Men are the best players, he says, "for, after all, it's a game of numbers and men can figure better"—and this last is for the husband who got bawled out last night for overbidding, to read to his wife.

MARSHALL HIGH YOUTHS REOPEN SERIES TUESDAY

600 Will Be Guests in Main Studio.

The second series of half hour weekly radio programs entitled Citizens of Tomorrow afternoon will open at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon over station W-G-N. The series of half hour shows in the W-G-N main audience studio is sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and dedicated to the youth of America.

George A. Beers.

Citizens of Tomorrow proved a popular feature when it was initiated last spring with broadcasts over a period of 11 weeks.

Marshall High school of Chicago, one of the larger west side schools, will be featured in the first of the fall programs. In the audience will be 600 cheering Marshall students.

Cheerleaders in Show.

The school cheerleaders and chorus will participate in the program. Principal George Beers and Miss Edith Wines, choral director, will lead the delegation.

Dorothy Gregory, 17 year old hit of last spring's series, again will play the part of "Jerry," typical high school girl, and a typical high school boy also will be in the cast. The program will be produced by Blair Walliser.

Heading the cast of Citizens of Tomorrow will be Philip Maxwell, a member of The Tribune's editorial staff, who will take the rôle of "The Principal." Mr. Maxwell will conduct a newspaper quiz, with the students from the audience taking part and the winners each week will receive $5 bills as prizes.

Each week the real principal of the featured school, in this case Mr. Beers, will give a brief talk. The school songs and school history will be worked into the program.

Maine High Next.

After the Marshall High school night, the following schools will be presented in order: Maine Township High, Carl Schurz, and Farragut. Others will be added for subsequent appearances.

Coöperating with THE TRIBUNE in the presentation of the new series will be the Chicago board of education, the county superintendent of schools, the school board of the Archdiocese of Chicago, and other educators thruout Chicagoland.

One of the many features of the show will be the Citizens of Tomorrow honor roll. Outstanding students in Chicago and Chicagoland will be admitted to this roster and their accomplishments outlined each week by Mr. Maxwell. Before the studio program 100 pupils from the high school honored will be taken on a tour of Tribune Tower.

Voice of the West Side.

Readers of the Metropolitan Section are invited to contribute to this column on matters of neighborhood interest. Readers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Full names and addresses must be given. No manuscripts will be returned. Address Voice of the West Side, The Tribune.

BEAUTY SPOTS ON WEST SIDE.

Many have the impression that the west side has no beauty spots. There are many—the bend of the lagoon in Columbus park, the stillness of the waters in the Garfield park pond, the Humboldt park bullrushes at Division street, and the rose garden at Douglas park.

Without great open spaces or a lake shore, the west side has achieved much with its limited possibilities. E. B.

DANGERS ON MADISON.

Motorists who use Madison street on the west side know how treacherous it is to drive. There are two reasons for this. First, Madison street is not a stop street and motorists driving on it are menaced by cross traffic; second, pedestrians are extremely careless about crossing streets midblock, against traffic lights and diagonally at intersections.

VOTERS WAKEN TO REAL POWER BEHIND BALLOT

It's Surprise to Discover Own Strength.

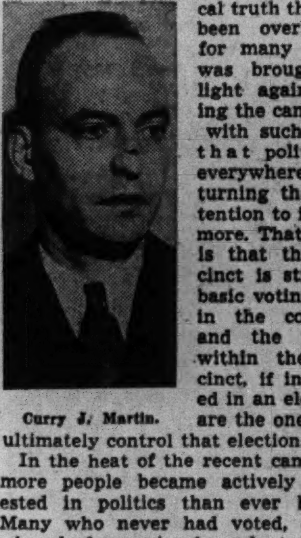
BY GAIL COMPTON.

The election is over, and as news it is dead. However, one great political truth that has been overlooked for many years, was brought to light again during the campaign with such force that politicians everywhere are turning their attention to it once more. That truth is that the precinct is still the basic voting unit in the country, and the people within the precinct, if interested in an election, are the ones who ultimately control that election.



Curry J. Martin.

In the heat of the recent campaign more people became actively interested in politics than ever before. Many who never had voted, others who had previously adopted the "what's the use" attitude, people who had never troubled to register, all found themselves actually working in an election as poll watchers, judges, clerks, and canvassers.

Why the people reacted so violently to the election campaigning and why they, seemingly for the first time, wanted to work in the election, can be discovered by studying the workings of any precinct in the city.

Typical Case Cited.

The 78th precinct of the 4th ward is typical of many in the country. It was predominantly Republican in 1936, and remained that way in this election. The story of its organization and the work it did is not important as an isolated incident, but it is important in that it indicates the trend thruout the country of the new interest in politics taken by the layman.

In the early days of September, nine business men met to discuss what they could do to forward what they felt were the best interests of the country. Leading the group was Curry J. Martin of 1365 East 48th street, a young lawyer.

Together they drafted a letter addressed to their neighbors asking them if they wanted to help in the election, and circulated 100 of the letters thru the precinct. In it they said, "Our purpose is to bring together like-minded men and women who wish to work together for a common cause." They promised there would be no brass bands or political spellbinders, and stressed the fact that theirs was a work group.

Surprise for Uninitiated.

At the first meeting on Sept. 17, 50 people turned out. At a second meeting in October, 100 people came. There were no political speakers, but instead an earnest discussion of politics, instruction in voting, and talks on the organization of the precinct, the ward, and other voting units.

"We found," Mr. Martin said, "that we were talking to people who never before had taken an active part in politics, and who had no idea how an election was run or what a ward and precinct were. They were not illiterate, but well educated people who had the common misunderstanding that one had to be a professional politician to have any part in the election of city, state, or national officers."

30 Discover Their Part.

As a result of this beginning, more than 30 people took up election work who previously had been completely inactive. For the first time, politics became a neighborhood affair, and not a distant national campaign. They discovered that one could be in politics without being a mayor. They canvassed the precinct, checked voters' lists, watched at the polls, and acted as judges and clerks.

At first Martin had trouble in finding any one who was willing to act as a judge in the polling place, and he was forced virtually to "draft" one woman. After the election she called him and asked to be allowed to work in the next election. "I never before realized the tremendous amount of work back of an election," she told Martin, "and I had no idea it was so complicated. Now I feel as if I have really done my part for the government, and have actually had a hand in helping to determine national policies. It was a wonderful experience."

They'll Be at Haggis Feast

Three Scotch lassies who never saw the Highlands because Chicago is built on a prairie will wear their kilts and balmorals Saturday night in the Stevens hotel. The dinner, known as the Feast of the Haggis, will benefit the Scottish Old People's home in Riverside.

Off the Trail

Philip Saporito, Oak Park automobile dealer who placed fifth in his class in this year's 100-mile ride at Onwentsia, has just resumed his equestrian activities at the Holdorf stables in Morton Grove. His wife, Eleanor, is also a rider.

Undaunted by the frigid blasts last week, the Oakbrook Saddle and Suds club, headed by William B. Bradley of Chicago, made plans for a long trail ride today and many another Sunday thruout the winter. The club has been active for more than two years at the Oakbrook stables at 31st street and Spring road, north of Hinsdale.

E. J. Quinn of River Forest, Chicago accounting company official, recently imported from Kentucky a beautiful gaited 3 year old sorrel gelding, Toastmaster, which he keeps at West Suburban stables on the River road near North avenue.

Toastmaster is now the stable mate of Princetta and Rippling Rhythm, owned by Joseph P. Bergl, Cicero automobile man. Rippling Rhythm is also a newcomer.

Good news for Du Page county riders came last week from Ted Hammerschmidt, president of the Du Page county forest preserve district. He said work was nearly finished on the ford across Salt creek near the York road bridge that makes it unnecessary for those on horseback to use the hazardous bridge deck.

West side stable owners are advising those who contemplate buying horses to act before the army's current cavalry expansion program sends prices too high. Few stables have escaped the eagle eyes of remount buyers in search of horseflesh suitable for army purposes, and a mild shortage of saddle mounts would be a logical development of this situation, the stablemen warn.

His reëlection campaign successfully concluded, State Representative Emmett McGrath of Brookfield has turned his attention again to his hobby, riding. The 7th district representative owns three horses, Pepper, Windy, and Windsor Rose, which he stables at Fairview ranch on Irving Park road just west of the Des Plaines river.

LATIN-AMERICAN ART DISPLAYED IN HULL HOUSE

Many Paintings Are by Humble Workers.

As an act of friendship and appreciation toward South America and Mexico, Hull House has opened its art studio to the excellence in art of neighbor Americans. The showing of paintings, lithographs, and sculptor by Latin-Americans will close Saturday.

Some of the painters represented are neighbors of Hull House but at one time lived in Latin-American countries. One is a steel mill worker, one is a printer, and one was a waiter a few years ago in the Hull House coffee shop.

Some unusual lithographs and wood cuts are by members of the Taller "Graphica Popular" in Mexico City. This colony of artists is made up of Mexico's youngest painters and sculptors who are gaining recognition thruout the new world.

Hold Tea Today.

This afternoon the Pan-American council will hold a tea for the exhibit-artists at Hull House. The Spanish society, "Sociedad Espanola," the oldest Spanish speaking society in Chicago, will have a reception in its club rooms, 36 West Randolph street.

Luis Blanquet, 1133 South Newberry avenue, is a Hull House neighbor represented in the show. He earns his living during the day as a commercial artist and comes to Hull House every evening for his painting. José De Luna, 729 De Koven street, was born in Mexico, and is a printer. He has exhibited a ceramic, a green horse with distended nostrils and curly hair.

The linoleum cuts are by Guillermo Ortiz, 634 East 35th street, who resided in Hull House for several years, was a waiter in the coffee house, and is now designing Christmas cards. Two of his most vigorous cuts are entitled "Villa de Guadalupe" and "El Cargador."

Native of Venezuela.

Manuel Solorzano was a native of Venezuela before he came to Chicago. His home is at 3544 North Halsted street. With excellence as a technician he has portrayed "Don Quijote y Sancho Panza," an illustration for the Cervantes story, a satire on the knight errant who went forth and fought with the windmills.

The most satirical work in a war wearied world is by Julio de Diego, 509 Grant place. He doesn't give his pictures a name but one features a man laden down with guns and shells and his head is very tiny. His wife, who is leading him to the battle, has a tiny head, too. Another is a still life of a violin over which a rifle has been placed. There is a stormy background of gray.

Packing House Worker.

Another Mexican, Rosario Flores, 4511 South Ashland avenue, works in a meat packing house during the day. He is in his early 20s and paints with vitality and strength. He has three samples of sensitive portraiture in the show. The work of Roberto Melendez, who works in South Chicago steel mills, resembles the old masters. He used dark rich colors as they did a generation ago in Spain.

Costa Rica is represented by the work of Elida Piza, 50 East Chicago avenue. Miss Piza came to Chicago when she was very young. She is exhibiting a portrait of herself in Costa Rican costume, a picture of her aunt and of her father.

Pedro Teran, 153 West North avenue, was born in Mexico and has lived in New Orleans, San Antonio, and on Chicago's near north side. He is a former Hull House instructor and started a number of adult art classes three years ago.

Berwyn Wedding

Mrs. George Voita was Alice Louise Rohde before her recent wedding in the Presbyterian church in Berwyn. She is the daughter of Mrs. Harry Rohde, 2301 South Gunderson avenue, and Mr. Voita is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Voita, 1447 South Cuyler avenue, Berwyn. After the ceremony a reception was held in the Oak Park Arms hotel. The bride's grandfather, John A. Cervenka, city purchasing agent, gave her in marriage.

INSTALL 3,000 STREET LIGHTS THRUOUT CITY

Nearly 3,000 new street lights are being erected along 57 miles of city streets. The new lights, affecting almost every neighborhood in the city, will be completed by the end of the year if the weather permits, it was announced last week by Commissioner of Public Works Oscar E. Hewitt.

MEET CHARLIE, THE MAN BEHIND SMOOTH OPERAS

Is Undercover Maestro of Backstage.

changed from the palaces of the noblemen to a gypsy camp in the Biscay mountains and for the fourth parting of the curtain there are the cloisters of a convent. The audience sees the stained glass of the church beneath a deep blue sky. The church bells ring and from off in the distance comes the dulcet tones of the hymn, "Fly from the World of Sorrow." Behind the backdrop, which is the stone church, sits Charlie playing the organ. He has on unpressed pants and a plaid jacket under his coat because he has a cold.

Around him is the chorus singing. Some wear their costumes from the gypsy camp scene. Some have on ordinary suits and some are clad in armour. Charlie doesn't need to look at his music. He knows it by heart. Then—"Light your candles," shouts Charlie and the nuns as tho from some sacred quiet enter the stage.

There's one scene where Charlie helps beat time to perfect the "Anvil Chorus." For this he stands midstage behind the backdrop of rocks and tents, beating time. "Lift your feet," he calls to the chorus of gypsies. "Mix your feet and your brains now and then."

He's Always on Run.

And during the "Miserere," most poignant of Verdi's tragic music, Charlie plays the organ for the chorus of men's voices led by Giovanni Martinelli. Charlie's specs are on the end of his nose, but his thoughts are far away, carried off by the song. The audience out front sees only clouds drifting across an azure sky.

When the curtain finally closes on the tragic finale in the prison cell, Charlie dashes over to an office and gets busy at the telephone, for early next morning there is to be a rehearsal.

Charlie has not only the "Il Trovatore" to think about. Between busy minutes he sees to it that everybody was on the little stage next door rehearsing for "Falstaff." His black book and his memory keep not only the operas going but the general or dress rehearsals, the rehearsals with props, the music rehearsals, the ensemble rehearsals and appointments for individual coachings.

He keeps Mr. Cavadore running from a rôle in "Falstaff" on the little stage back to "Il Trovatore" where he is Ruiz, soldier to the troubador. He has a bad minute when the curtain goes up in one scene and he doesn't see the old gypsy. When he is located Charlie heaves a sigh that seemed to tickle his toes. "Gosh," he says, "that old gypsy has to give an important cue."

Limousines draw up to the curb outside. Fans, thrilled with the performance, clamor at the stage door for Mr. Martinelli, for Miss Bampton and Miss Branzell, the stars. Charlie in his plaid jacket, complaining about his cold into his handkerchief, is busy at the telephone. "Mr. Hawkins, please," he is calling, "is Mr. Hawkins there. Mr. Hawk-ins ———"

W. SIDERS SHOW ENTHUSIASM FOR CHICAGO OPERA

Fine Arts Group Will Attend in Body.

Added applause in the Chicago Civic Opera house these evenings at performances of the Chicago Opera company comes from west side civic leaders. On Wednesday, Dec. 4, the Greater West Side Fine Arts association will give its official stamp of approval by attending in a body. More than 50 seats have been reserved by Miss Bessie Ryan, secretary.

Miss Ryan is especially interested in opera this year because one of her pupils at the Austin College of Music, Jean Merrell of Oak Park, is a member of the Junior chorus. Yesterday Miss Ryan attended the opera as a delegate of the Illinois Federation of Music Clubs because of the federation's interest in the success of Kathryn Witwer.

Sings Over W-G-N.

Miss Witwer sang yesterday afternoon. She is known as a featured soloist with W-G-N and she is known to the Illinois federation because she won its first $1,000 national award in voice a few years ago. Every other year the organization offers the award to the best student in piano and vocal work.

Another opera enthusiast this year is Miss Constance Everhart, who sang on the Chicago Opera stage about five years ago. She exclaimed over this year's season describing it as a "magnificent treat!"

In the audience of "Tristan and Isolde" and "La Traviata" were two of the most thrilled opera fans of the west area. One was Mrs. Harold L. Carr, music chairman of the Maywood 20th Century club, who long ago aspired to be an opera star.

She Changed Her Mind.

But Mrs. Carr, instead, is a lovely matron of Maywood, active in music appreciation work in the village. For when she was a student at the Cincinnati conservatory she met Mr. Carr. She changed her mind about an opera career and sang instead in church choirs.

And in the audience of those two operas was a miss named Nancy Carr who was graduated not so long ago from Proviso High school. All the ambitions of her mother stored up from long ago are moving the heart of Miss Nancy. She is studying for the grand opera in the American Conservatory of Music and so far no one has changed her mind.

Rapturously, Miss Nancy says: "This opera season is wonderful. The settings are so splendid and the chorus and orchestra are better than ever before"—and Mrs. and Miss Carr know, for they never miss an opera season in Chicago.

Appreciated in School.

Advantage of attending opera performances is deeply appreciated by band, choral, and orchestra groups at Proviso Township High school, according to R. Lee Osburn, head of the school's music department and director of the choral group.

"Enthusiasm at the school is particularly high because Miss Roberta Holmer and Miss Helen Steffenhagen are members of the chorus this season," said Mr. Osburn. "Both are graduates of Proviso and members of our alumni chorus. Maywood has been excited too, over the debut of Naomi Cullen Cook, a resident of the village."

Mr. Osburn said that never before had there been such interest in studying the books on music in the library, where there is a crowding about the volumes devoted to operas included in the series of the present season. Plans are being made for group attendance at some of the operas.

"I attended 'Manon'," said Mr. Osburn. "It was beautifully done."

Roosevelt Road Business Men to Hold an Election

Chapter President

Miss Jane Cline of Glen Ellyn is president of Gamma chapter of Alpha Chi Omega. Tomorrow the girls who are students at Northwestern university will celebrate the golden anniversary of the founding of their sorority.

'PLUSH HORSE' BALL WILL BE GIVEN ON FEB. 1

The 32d annual Plush Horse ball of the Town and Country Equestrian association will be held in the Grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman next Feb. 1, it was decided at a meeting of the association directors last week.

Herbert J. Lorber, president of the association, was named chairman of the committee in charge. Others on the committee are James C. Thompson, John Bowers, James Hannah, and Adolph H. Sus.

New officers for the association will be chosen at the annual meeting to be held in the Sherman on Jan. 6, the directors announced. T. L. J. Klapp Jr. was named chairman of the nominating committee, to serve with Fred L. Workman, Elmer J. Holdorf, J. A. Hannah, and Harry McNair.

James H. Cartwright, chairman of the association's horse show committee, reported that this year's show was the most successful in the history of the group. The proceeds were given to the Sunbeam league for work among crippled children.

SCOUTS ASSIST IN NATION'S NEW PREPAREDNESS

Two thousand and seven hundred Boy Scouts and Cubs, members of the West Suburban council, Boy Scouts of America, have pledged to do their best to preserve the traditions of America and inculcate in others a respect for the ideals of democracy. In so doing, they have joined hands in carrying out the program of action originated by the national council.

The move is in response to a question: "What part will Boy Scouts play in the preparedness program contemplated by our government?"

The present program emphasizes adequate training in troop operation for adult leaders, hikes, and camping trips, extending scouting to unorganized areas, development of emergency units for local service, and instilling thoro respect for good government.

Acting under authoritiy of the executive board of the West Suburban council, President G. K. Mehagan and Scout Executive E. G. Stowell of the local council, recently met to develop preparedness plans with a committee composed of E. L. Swangren, Scout commissioner; J. D. # PATIENTS FIND AIR OF HOME IN NEW HOSPITAL

'Uplift Spirits,' Is Aim at Delnor, St. Charles.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

It was the idea of creating an atmosphere that would give a lift to the spirits of those who entered its doors that Delnor hospital in St. Charles was planned. That this aim has been achieved is the verdict of visitors to the building on north Fifth avenue since its recent opening.

The style of the new hospital is of the Williamsburg, Virginia, type. The long, low brick structure, set well back in a two acre tract, has a white pillared veranda and green slate roof. Its interior is reminiscent of a Southern home, traditional for hospitality.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester J. Norris, donors of the hospital, decided some fifteen years ago that such an institution was needed to complete a group of building projects that have aided the community. The word "institution" was dropped soon after research was begun. What was determined upon was a "house of hope and cheer."

Interior Like a Home.

As plans progressed, one point became uppermost. Everything about the hospital must be on the positive rather than the negative side. Edward Fairbank was engaged as the architect, and Dorothy Draper was called upon to give a home atmosphere to the interior. It was Dorothy Draper's first hospital assignment. Her first thought was to suggest health rather than illness.

Special emphasis has been placed upon lamps, pictures and chintzes. The blues and greens of out-of-doors have been utilized in the wall paper designs. Instead of a baby ward, there is a nursery. The psychological effect is not only one of comfort but charm.

Physicians and surgeons who have visited the new hospital are impressed by the operating rooms, the obstetrical department, the diet kitchen, the laboratory, and the fracture room. Of the $250,000 that has gone into the project, half has been for equipment.

Think of Auto Victims.

With the realization that a large number of emergency cases nowadays are due to automobile accidents, equipment in the fracture room, including the X-ray, insures the handling of a patient with as few moves as possible. Equipment in the room also reduces necessary movements on the part of the surgeon to a minimum.

Lights in the operating room are so flexible, with mirrors, that surgeons and nurses need never be in a shadow. Air conditioning, stainless steel equipment, cellophane oxygen tent, sound proof walls, and easily adjustable tables are among the facilities that give indication of progress made since the days of the horse and buggy doctor. Only the surgeon himself appreciates, with sort of a gasp, the Swedish steel surgical instruments among those in the cabinet.

Variety in Decorations.

As for the private and semi-private rooms, each varies in its decorative scheme, as do each of the rooms for the fifteen registered nurses under the superintendency of Mrs. Cora Radke. Special attention has been given to making the food trays attractive, and overbed tables have a compartment to meet the shaving needs of men and the cosmetic whims of women.

Furnishings in the waiting room lend the atmosphere of a modern high class apartment. Visitors agree that, thruout, Delnor hospital gives the impression of a place where one may not only gain strength but be refreshed in mind.

Admittedly, what has been accomplished at Delnor is revolutionary but may, it is said, provide the forerunner of hospitals of the future.

SECOND LIVING ROOM FOUND IN BASEMENT AREA

$300 Pays Expense for Materials Needed.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Some two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Axel O. Nielsen moved into their modern new brick house at 1741 North Natoma avenue. The basement was unfinished at the time. Then last winter the Nielsens decided to convert their under the main floor spaces into pleasant living quarters. They did so, entered their work in the Chicago Coal Merchants association's modernized basement contest, and won second prize.

Room Full of Memories.

Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen did just what they wanted to when it came to the improvement of their basement area. They planned a room which would play the part of an informal, hospitable second living room. A large room where groups from the church could gather and where small, sociable meetings of friends and neighbors and church workers could be held. An inviting, pine paneled room, decorated with mementos from various trips and hence full of memories of nice vacation jaunts.

This basement living area is quite sizable—24 feet by 12 feet. The rest of the basement is given over to storage spaces, and to a spic and span boiler room which houses the stoker heating unit. The living section is apart from the utilitarian portion so it can be entirely closed off on occasions and as aloof as it wants to be.

Ceiling Painted Yellow.

The walls of this room have been paneled in wormy cypress, and there's a sun yellow painted ceiling. The floor is painted a mahogany shade and covered with a large Navajo rug.

Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen feel the cost was reasonable and that they have precisely what they coveted—an inviting, informal living room in their basement. Mr. Nielsen and a brother-in-law did the work, and the expense of the materials did not run over $300.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Nov. 18.

As long as the weather is favorable outdoor work should continue. Repair fences, cut fallen wood in the forest area, and leave everything in good condition for the winter.

Tuesday, Nov. 19.

It is good practice to take apart the spraying outfit and give it a thoro cleaning so it will be ready for use next season. It is easy to clean it with a brush and soapsuds; soaking in washing soda or allowing to stand in a weak vinegar solution will soon clean it. Keep the spraying materials where they will not freeze.

Wednesday, Nov. 20.

Watch the terrarium or glass garden to see that there is not an excess of moisture on the underside of the glass or fungus may destroy the plants. If fungus is noticed it is best to make over the planting and start anew. Give a slight crack of air by sliding the cover to one side.

Thursday, Nov. 21.

The natural time for sowing hardy annuals is in autumn. The seed ripens, falls to the ground, and remains there, dormant, all winter to germinate early in spring. The action of frost softens the hard seedcoat of some seeds enabling them to develop rapidly into flowering plants.

Friday, Nov. 22.

House plants will present a much different appearance if a study is made of the individual's habit of growth and a container chosen to harmonize with it. Odd or curiously shaped plants, like some of the succulents, look well in odd containers.

Saturday, Nov. 23.

There is yet time to cut material for propagating shrubs. Take the wood of the current season, cut into lengths of from 8 to 12 inches, according to kind, tie in bundles, butts up, label securely, and bury in sand in a cool cellar, or in the garden out of doors. During winter the ends will heal over and when the warm spring days arrive the cuttings may be lined out in rows close together.

NOVOTNA, SCHIPA IN 'TRAVIATA' ON W-G-N-MUTUAL

Alexander Sved Also to Be Heard Tomorrow.

Jarmila Novotna, noted Czech soprano, will make her Chicago operatic debut in "La Traviata," tomorrow. The opera performance will be broadcast from 9:30 to 11 p. m. over W-G-N and the Mutual network from the Chicago Civic Opera house.

Tito Schipa.

Tito Schipa, noted Italian tenor, and Alexander Sved, Hungarian baritone, also will be headliners. The broadcast portion of the program will include the last part of the second act and the full third and fourth acts of the long opera.

Schipa also will be heard on W-G-N's Stars of the Opera program at 8:23 tonight.

Miss Novotna will sing the rôle of Violetta, heroine of Verdi's tragic story. Miss Novotna made her debut in the rôle at the Prague Grand Opera house when she was 17. She made her American debut last year at the Metropolitan.

Alexander Sved will be heard in the rôle of Giorgio Germont, rich uncle of Alfredo Germont, Violetta's lover. Tito Schipa, whose lyric tenor voice has brought him international fame, will sing the rôle of Alfredo.

Other principals include Dorothy Kirsten as Flora, Giuseppe Cavadore as Gaston, John Daggett Howell as the Baron Douphol, Edward Stack as Marquis D'Obigny, and Mack Harrell as Dr. Grenvil.

Maurice Abravanel, noted Metropolitan conductor, will conduct the Chicago Opera orchestra for the performance. Lou Jackobson, W-G-N producer, will supervise the broadcast of the opera. John Gause will be broadcast technician.

The story of "Traviata" concerns the love of Alfredo, a young nobleman, for Violetta, a Paris demimonde. After pledging their love in the opening act, the pair flee to a villa outside Paris and plan their marriage.

In the second act, Giorgio visits Violetta and begs her to give up his nephew for the sake of the young man's career. Violetta reluctantly agrees and resumes her life in Paris.

Alfredo, deeply in love, follows her and asks her to return. In the final act the old uncle finally realizes that Violetta's love for Alfredo is sincere and consents to the marriage, but meanwhile Violetta has fallen ill and she dies in her lover's arms when he comes to tell her that they may be married.

"La Traviata" will be the second broadcast in W-G-N's series of five. The popular "Rigoletto" will be heard on Monday, Nov. 25.

WAYNE TO STAR IN DRAMA OF SEA ON CHICAGO HOUR

Walter Wanger's surging drama of the sea, "The Long Voyage Home," will be brought to W-G-N and Mutual network listeners on the In Chicago Tonight program from 7:30 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening.

The motion picture is based on four one-act plays by Eugene O'Neil and was directed by John Ford. It will be the second Wanger success to be presented this season on In Chicago Tonight. The first was "Foreign Correspondent" in which Wanger and his wife, Joan Bennett, appeared on W-G-N Sept. 26.

John Wayne, one of Hollywood's foremost actors, and the star of "The Long Voyage Home," wil come to Chicago to play the same rôle in the broadcast.

John Qualen, a former Chicagoan, character actor and linguist who portrays Axel, a Norwegian sailor, in the picture, will take the same rôle in Thursday's show. Arthur Shields, well known here for his work with the Abbey Players, will be a third Hollywood guest on the W-G-N program.

"The Long Voyage Home" opened yesterday at the Apollo theater. William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N will produce the radio version.

Chicago Orchestra on W-G-N from the East

A special broadcast from Philadelphia will bring Chicago music lovers next Thursday's performance of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, which is on its first extended eastern tour in many years. The broadcast will be heard from 8:30 to 9 p. m. over W-G-N and the Mutual network. New York, Boston, and Pittsburgh also will be visited by the orchestra on its 50th anniversary tour. ## THEATER OF AIR OFFERS 'EILEEN' NEXT SATURDAY

The Chicago Theater of the Air will present Victor Herbert's "Eileen" from 9 to 10 p. m. next Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual network. This favorite vehicle is the first of Victor Herbert's tuneful operettas to be aired this season by the Theater of the Air.

William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N, has announced that six additional operettas have been scheduled, running into the middle of January. They are "New Moon" with John Brownlee, Dec. 7; "Rio Rita," with José Mojica, Dec. 14; "Hansel and Gretel" on Dec. 21; "The Fortune Teller," with Jan Peerce, Dec. 28; "Naughty Marietta," with Michael Bartlett, Jan. 11, and "Cyrano de Bergerac," with Richard Bonelli, Jan. 18.

In Saturday's operetta, Marion Claire, Theater of the Air prima donna, will sing the soprano lead of Eileen Mulvaney, the charming Irish heroine. James Melton, who was heard last month with Miss Claire in "The Chocolate Soldier," will sing the lead of the dashing Irish patriot, Barry O'Day.

Nathaniel Shilkret will lead the W-G-N concert orchestra and chorus. Next Saturday will mark Shilkret's third appearance on the Chicago Theater of the Air.

KATHRYN WITWER IS ENGAGED BY CHICAGO OPERA

Kathryn Witwer, lyric soprano, is the latest W-G-N star to be engaged by the Chicago Opera company for performances during the current season. Henry Weber, musical director of W-G-N, is general director of the opera company. Last week Attilio Baggiore, tenor, was signed by the company.

Miss Witwer made her operatic debut in Chicago a few years ago singing Micaela to Mary Garden's titular rôle in Carmen. She and Mr. Baggiore are heard regularly on the Pageant of Melody program broadcast over W-G-N from 8:30 to 9 o'clock Wednesday evenings.

2 More Opera Aspirants.

Gertrude Berggren, New Britain, Conn., contralto, and Gordon Dilworth, Brooklyn, N. Y., baritone, will be the two aspirants in the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air, at 4:00 p. m. today over WMAQ. Miss Berggren will sing "O Don Fatale" from Verdi's "Don Carlos" and Dilworth's solo will be "Largo Al Factotum."

ATOM SMASHING IS SUBJECT TODAY OF PETER QUILL SHOW

How a weird scientific wizard achieves "Flight Without Wings" will be the story unfolded on the Peter Quill drama to be heard from 3 to 3:30 p. m. today over W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Quill, the strange scientist who has devoted his genius to the defense of America, utilizes his "atom smasher" to develop a gas four times more buoyant than hydrogen.

In addition to using the gas to thwart a Red Circle sabotage plot, Quill finds practical uses for the gas. Small tanks of the gas placed in the pontoons of a plane would be capable of saving the plane from crashing. An ocean liner equipped with gas tanks would be virtually unsinkable.

Conceived and produced by Blair Walliser, the Quill series is noted for the bizarre, yet not impossible inventions which it depicts.

WHAT DO YOU SAY? PROGRAM TURNS SOCIAL

The popular women's public opinion program "What Do You Say," heard over W-G-N from 12:15 to 12:30 p. m. each day except Saturday and Sunday, has gone social! The program, primarily for women, recently has been given over two days a week to women's clubs. Members of the audience are asked to comment on questions sent in by listeners and cash prizes are awarded for answers.

The "club day" idea has been so popular that the program is booked up until March 1. Numerous parent-teacher organizations, mothers' clubs, and denominational women's groups have already participated in the broadcast. One Grandmothers' club had such a good time that the members are bringing the Great-Grandmothers' club next time.

HOW COMEDIANS GET READY FOR RADIO SESSIONS

Tom, Dick, Harry Ad Lib Before W-G-N Mike.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

While Tom, Dick and Harry "ad lib" a lot before the W-G-N microphone, they are exceptions to the rule that most radio wit—even most of it that appears spontaneous—is set down on the script. During one of the Fred Allen-Jack Benny sessions before the microphone Jack exclaimed to Fred, "You wouldn't dare to talk to me that way if my writers were here."

That summarizes the radio comedy situation today. Even Fred Allen and Edgar Bergen, who got along for years without much outside help, have finally acknowledged the fact that they rely on outsiders in a measure for their comedy.

But Tom, Dick and Harry—Bud and Gordon Vandover and Marlin Hurt—rely mainly on whatever resources they can command when they get on the air to carry them thru. Of course they have their comedy songs more or less prepared. Their pianist, Robert Trendler, recently retaliated against them for their daily ragging—they refer to him as Orville Pink—by starting them off in a number and then just suddenly quitting them. The boys floundered thru as best they could.

They Heckle Ed Allen.

Gordon writes the characterizations of Hercules and the Old Timer which Bud delivers. Hurt writes his own Gypsy Rose Levey sketches but he does have the help of Fred Kress for his Beulah sketches which are currently brightening the Show Boat sessions. Bud and Gordon are also featured in sketches in Uncle Walter's Doghouse. Bud sings on Plantation Party.

The trio regularly gets into the hair of Ed Allen, their announcer on W-G-N. They interrupt and heckle while the sponsor's copy is read. And it probably has the effect of causing listeners to follow it more closely.

The procedure of most radio comedians is in decided contrast to their procedure.

Benny sits down early in the week with Ed Beloin and Bill Morrow. Their "writing sessions" sound more like revelry than work, Jack is, of course, a collaborator of this very successful writing team.

How Quinn Does It.

Don Quinn has been writing the Fibber McGee and Molly show since the beginning. Quinn locks himself in a room and spends from 24 to 48 hours there, taking time only to walk the dog, eat and perhaps nap. When he emerges he has a script which only requires polishing and finishing touches.

George Burns has developed a scheme of having two writers working on the same subject. George and his brother Willie then take the best lines of each and work them into a routine. Bob Hope has expanded this technique. He may have from eight to a dozen writers at work on the same material. Bob himself takes a hand in putting the script together.

Fred Allen is said to have four writers this season, working in pairs, each responsible for his own sections of the script. Fred usually pencils marginal notes and then starts scrawling between lines. When he finishes the alterations there may be whole new pages in Allen's minute writing.

MOVIE, RADIO STARS TO OFFER ANOTHER RED CROSS PROGRAM

A host of movie and radio stars will be heard in the second Red Cross Roll Call show, to be presented over W-G-N, the Mutual network, and other major networks from 12:30 to 1:30 p. m. today.

Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Amos and Andy, and Bob Hope will be heard on the star-studded show. Bette Davis will appear in an Arch Oboler play. Lionel Barrymore, Donald Dickson, Martha Tilton, Benay Venuta, and the Betty Brewer quartet also will be heard.

David Broekman, noted Hollywood composer and conductor, will introduce his new orchestra to the air on the program.

Speaker for the program will be Frank Freeman, president of the Motion Picture Producers association.

JESS KIRKPATRICK.

At 11 a. m. today W-G-N listeners will have the opportunity of hearing a solo by one of the world's smallest artists—Dicky Crooks, feathered leader of the Master Radio Canaries. When these veteran radio entertainers hop before a set of W-G-N microphones this morning Dicky's clear, flutelike tenor voice promises to give a gay melodious accent to the singing of the supporting Canary Chorus. Today's broadcast will mark their 2,000th appearance for Chicago and network audiences.

The 12 canaries of the chorus have taken quite a liking to their master of ceremonies, Jess Kirkpatrick, and will chirp soft "hellos" when he enters the studios. Jess has his own nickname for each bird.

DEACON'S MAIL RICH IN HUMAN INTEREST TALES

No lonely man is the Deacon, W-G-N's one man radio show, who weaves homespun tales of an imaginary village each morning. For the Deacon's radio mailbag is a storehouse of encouraging and warm reactions from plain folks to the common sence philosophy expressed on the program.

Frequently the Deacon receives letters from down and outers and transcients who thank him for the solace and encouragement his program gives. Or a mother will write for a copy of the Deacon's own poem entitled "Your Son." Another man will write and tell him a tale of hard luck—a story which the Deacon may dramatize and use for some future program.

The Deacon's real name is Howard Hoffman. He is heard Monday thru Friday from 9:20 to 9:30 p. m. [central standard time] over W-G-N.

HUGE SALE ON! PRICES CUT FOR QUICK CLEARANCE

Delano Trinkets to Go at Bargain Rates.

There's going to be a sale on Tuesday in the big brick building at 3700 Wilcox street. It will be an eight hour business boom for the west side and an example of salesmanship at its best. The customers will buy dishes with cracks in them and like it. Wagons will be sold with a wheel or two missing while the buyer exclaims over his bargain.

The brick building is a school house and the customers will be the children of Delano school. The pennies and nickles they spend for priceless treasures, such as lead soldiers, dolls with scraped noses and marbles that some one else played with, will go to the Children's Aid fund. This fund buys clothing during the school term for needy pupils. Without the shoes, dresses and coats this money buys, thousands of Chicago children would have to stay away from school.

Earn for Fund.

The trinket sale at Delano school is the method these students have adopted for earning their contribution to the Chicago Children's aid. Every grammar school and high school on the west side is planning some type of show, tag day or drive to raise the money for the Thanksgiving week donation. Mrs. Nancy Curlin, supervisor of Delano's sale, says the day is the most popular in the school term. Irvin A. Wilson, principal, says its a good first hand lesson in selling.

Each Delano room will have a table put up in the gymnasium to display its wares. Each room will have a salesman or two. The kindergarten and first grade children can hire an older student to sell and make change but they do their own table decorating and arranging. Some salesmen believe in advertising, have placards up for weeks in advance. Some bark their wares with noisy enthusiasm. Both can sell.

Airplanes Most Popular.

The most popular items on the tables for all ages are the airplanes. Broken wings or mangled propellors do not spoil a plane's usefulness if it had an original appeal. Lead soldiers are second in popularity and are reduced if the head is missing. The children decide on the price. If its too high and nobody buys it, they quickly bring it in line. Prices slide to rock bottom near the end of the school day.

The School Children's Aid society was established in 1887 by the Chicago Woman's club. Last year 28,647 children from all the public schools received clothing. The Thanksgiving collection paid for the entire service. Shoes are most in demand and last year the society gave 27,126 pairs to boys and girls.

There were 83,543 garments distributed, all warm, practical and necessary. Requests come to the society thru the principal, who has made a personal investigation as to the need. All the clothing is new and all cases are cleared thru the Social Service exchange. The amounts received from the schools at Thanksgiving last year ranged from $5 to $1,800.

Young Citizens Rally Tuesday in W-G-N Show

The second series of half hour weekly radio programs entitled Citizens of Tomorrow will open at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon over station W-G-N. The series of half hour shows in the W-G-N main audience studio is sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and dedicated to the youth of America.

Citizens of Tomorrow proved a popular feature when it was initiated last spring with broadcasts over a period of 11 weeks.

Marshall High school of Chicago, one of the larger west side schools, will be featured in the first of the fall programs. In the audience will be 600 cheering Marshall students.

Cheerleaders in Show.

The school cheerleaders and chorus will participate in the program. Principal George Beers and Miss Edith Wines, choral director, will lead the delegation.

Dorothy Gregory, 17 year old hit of last spring's series, again will play the part of "Jerry," typical high school girl, and a typical high school boy also will be in the cast. The program will be produced by Blair Walliser.

Heading the cast of Citizens of Tomorrow will be Philip Maxwell, a member of The Tribune's editorial staff, who will take the rôle of "The Principal." Mr. Maxwell will conduct a newspaper quiz, with the students from the audience taking part and the winners each week will receive $5 bills as prizes.

Each week the real principal of the featured school, in this case Mr. Beers, will give a brief talk. The school songs and school history will be worked into the program.

Maine High Next.

After the Marshall High school night, the following schools will be presented in order: Maine Township High, Farragut, and Carl Schurz. Others will be added for subsequent appearances.

Coöperating with THE TRIBUNE in the presentation of the new series will be the Chicago board of education, the county superintendent of schools, the school board of the Archdiocese of Chicago, and other educators thruout Chicagoland.

One of the many features of the show will be the Citizens of Tomorrow honor roll. Outstanding students in Chicago and Chicagoland will be admitted to this roster and their accomplishments outlined each week by Mr. Maxwell. Before the studio program 100 pupils from the high school honored will be taken on a tour of Tribune Tower. After the radio program, the film, "Trees to Tribunes" will be shown the 600 guests in the W-G-N studio.

Meet Charlie, Unseen Opera Impresario

BY MILDRED WILDS.

Charlie Drumheller, who lives at 355 West Madison street, never sees his name in lights. Nobody calls him maestro and his name is hidden way down in the pink program book. Yet night after night on the stage of the Civic Opera house chapters are written in Chicago's history of music because Charlie plays his part.

Nobody in the boxes see him. The opera lovers who peer ecstatically from the top flight in the top gallery don't know he's there and they don't care. But because Charlie worked last night and the night before, the orchestra was in its place, the stars swung onto the stage to mount golden thrones, enter convents or leave their prisons. And if they didn't it would be too bad for Charlie.

Takes Tantrums In Stride.

Neither time, tide nor artistic temperament thwarts Charlie in his job of getting opera singers on the stage. There was Mary Garden, the one who was latest the most. There have been sopranos and contraltos and some had tempers, but they all laughed at Charlie. He knows them and all the songs they sing. He knows when and what guard should wear what hat or omit his cape. "I go with the lease," says Charlie, "and I came with the first load of sand."

In 1910 Charlie didn't have a waistline. He wasn't round like Santa Claus and his voice, too, was in good form. Charlie had a degree from Dickinson college in Pennsylvania and some good training from Madame Cappiani of New York. He was beginning in Aida in Boston with the Aborn Opera company. It was the year of Haley's comet.

"Yea, I used to sing way back befor the dead sea got sick," says Charlie, who doesn't believe in being exact about information. "Sure, I can speak a number of languages, two of them, profane and political," he answers.

Sang For Ten Years.

He did sing for ten years. He was the lamplighter in "Madame Butterfly." He was a messenger in "Il Trovatore." He was with the San Carol Opera company, sang in Ravinia park, was with Max Fish Handler and with the Century Opera company in New York. He forgets the others on the list.

Charlie can do everything in opera and that is what he does. Some say his title is musical secretary and some call him assistant stage manager. In 1920 he lost his voice and moved backstage.

And this is what he did ten nights ago for Verdi's "Il Trovatore." A little room off stage at the left of the theater is Charlie's domain, bounded on the front by a switchboard with 105 keys. A lift of each key permits him to speak into each of the 105 rooms. But the occupants can't talk back, much to Charlie's regret. He likes to hear them have tantrums.

Doesn't Trust Gadgets.

Charlie sits before his keys waiting. Outside with ropes, clamps, and hard work a crew of some 100 is recreating a formal garden in the provinces of Aragon of the 15th century. Charlie begins to push buttons. "Miss Chase, Miss Chase. Time for the first act. Come out now." A little later he calls, "Orchestra in the pit. Gentlemen, take your places please. Time for curtain."

Then Charlie, the old-timer, leaves his fancy switchboard and yells at the gentlemen from the door leading

VOTERS WAKEN TO REAL POWER BEHIND BALLOT

It's Surprise to Learn Own Strength.

BY GAIL COMPTON.

The election is over, and as news it is dead. However, one great political truth that has been overlooked for many years, was brought to light again during the campaign with such force that politicians everywhere are turning their attention to it once more. That truth is that the precinct is still the basic voting unit in the country, and the people within the precinct, if interested in an election, are the ones who ultimately control that election.

In the heat of the recent campaign more people became actively interested in politics than ever before. Many who never had voted, others who had previously adopted the "what's the use" attitude, people who had never troubled to register, all found themselves actually working in an election as poll watchers, judges, clerks, and canvassers.

Why the people reacted so violently to the election campaigning and why they, seemingly for the first time, wanted to work in the election, can be discovered by studying the workings of any precinct in the city.

Typical Case Cited.

The 78th precinct of the 4th ward is typical of many in the country. It was predominantly Republican in 1936, and remained that way in this election. The story of its organization and the work it did is not important as an isolated incident, but it is important in that it indicates the trend thruout the country of the new interest in politics taken by the layman.

In the early days of September, nine business men met to discuss what they could do to forward what they felt were the best interests of the country. Leading the group was Curry J. Martin of 1365 East 48th street, a young lawyer.

Together they drafted a letter addressed to their neighbors asking them if they wanted to help in the election, and circulated 100 of the letters thru the precinct. In it they said, "Our purpose is to bring together like-minded men and women who wish to work together for a common cause." They promised there would be no brass bands or political spellbinders, and stressed the fact that theirs was a work group.

Surprise for Uninitiated.

At the first meeting on Sept. 17, 50 people turned out. At a second meeting in October, 100 people came. There were no political speakers, but instead an earnest discussion of politics, instruction in voting, and talks on the organization of the precinct, the ward, and other voting units.

"We found," Mr. Martin said, "that we were talking to people who never before had taken an active part in politics, and who had no idea how an election was run or what a ward and precinct were. They were not illiterate, but well educated people who had the common misunderstanding that one had to be a professional politician to have any part in the election of city, state, or national officers."

"The people in the precinct were interested, and they wanted to help but had no idea how to go about it. All we did was offer them the chance to take an active part in their own government, and they accepted it eagerly."

30 Discover Their Part.

As a result of this beginning, more than 30 people took up election work who previously had been completely inactive. For the first time, politics became a neighborhood affair, and not a distant national campaign. They discovered that one could be in politics without being a mayor. They canvassed the precinct, checked voters' lists, watched at the polls, and acted as judges and clerks.

At first Martin had trouble in finding any one who was willing to act as a judge in the polling place, and he was forced virtually to "draft" one woman. After the election she called him and asked to be allowed to work in the next election. "I never before realized the tremendous amount of work back of an election," she told Martin, "and I had no idea it was so complicated. Now I feel as if I have really done my part for the government, and have actually had a hand in helping to determine national policies. It was a wonderful experience."

Vote Permanent Club.

Thus in one precinct more than 30 people gained a consciousness of politics they had lacked before. These 30 multiplied thruout the precincts of the nation mean thousands of people becoming alert and active in the forces of the government.

"The work in my precinct," said Martin, "is important only in that it shows what has happened thruout the country. And the interest has not died with the end of the election, for the people in the neighborhood have unanimously decided to make our club of Republican voters a permanent one. This is true everywhere. The last campaign has given impetus to the deep seated interest of the people in their government."

THANKS FOR PARKS.

I notice that nearly all of your correspondents are complainers. It is a human tendency to make a stir when things go wrong but to take the good things for granted. Well, it's the Thanksgiving season, and I find there are quite a few things I can be thankful for. One is the park handicraft and recreation program. I have a family, a band of six youngsters that I have been engaged in rearing for the last 14 years and in about every park community in Chicago, I think. Now we're living on the southwest side, and my boys and girls find both pleasure and instruction at Ridge park. When I think of how these park programs have helped me keep my children off the streets, have helped me in instructing them, in guiding them—well, I just think it's all pretty fine. And I'm thankful. MRS. L. B. H.

ANOTHER DRIVER COMPLAINS.

Here's a hearty second to last week's complaint about Paulina street in the 4500 and 4600 blocks. The deep ruts in the unpaved parts result in the game of every driver for himself. I've heard that something is going to be done, but now that winter is coming on, I suppose it'll be too cold. And next spring it'll probably be too hot! D. K.

to their rooms. "I don't always trust that gadget," he complains.

The orchestra is in its place. In answer to Charlie's call the singers are ready at their entrances. The velvet curtain parts and "Il Trovatore" begins to unfold in its tragic sequence. Charlie is everywhere.

Leads Off Stage Hymn.

Four times the scenery has been changed from the palaces of the noblemen to a gypsy camp in the Biscay mountains and for the fourth parting of the curtain there are the cloisters of a convent. The audience sees the stained glass of the church beneath a deep blue sky. The church bells ring and from off in the distance comes the dulcet tones of the hymn, "Fly from the World of Sorrow." Behind the backdrop, which is the stone church, sits Charlie playing the organ. He has on unpressed pants and a plaid jacket under his coat because he has a cold.

He's Always on Run.

And during the "Miserere," most poignant of Verdi's tragic music, Charlie plays the organ for the chorus of men's voices led by Giovanni Martinelli. Charlie's specs are on the end of his nose, but his thoughts are far away, carried off by the song. The audience out front sees only clouds drifting across an azure sky.

When the curtain finally closes on the tragic finale in the prison cell, Charlie dashes over to an office and gets busy at the telephone, for early next morning there is to be a rehearsal.

Limousines draw up to the curb outside. Fans, thrilled with the performance, clamor at the stage door for Mr. Martinelli, for Miss Bampton and Miss Branzell, the stars. Charlie in his plaid jacket, complaining about his cold into his handkerchief, is busy at the telephone. "Mr. Hawkins, please," he is calling, "is Mr. Hawkins there. Mr. Hawk-ins ———"

BIG OR LITTLE SAUSAGE, THAT'S JOE'S LIFE WORK

Veteran Ends 55 Years at Packing Plant.

BY GLADYS PRIDDY.

Life is just a lot of sausage—miles and miles of it—to Joe Chaloupka, who retired recently after 55 years at Armour & Co., 50 of them attending a sausage machine. But even a sausage machine provides variety in life, Joe explains. Sometimes the job is to make small sausage, sometimes the large, and a fellow has to feed his machine and take care that 100 pounds of pressure doesn't go wild.

Joe Chaloupka went to work at Armour's when he was 14 years old. He began as a cash boy in the retail butcher shop where his father, Frank, was a clerk. Frank Chaloupka, who came with his bride to this country from Prague, began the story of the Chaloupkas at Armour's. Four generations of the family have worked at Armour's and in the stockyards since.

One of Eight Children.

Frank Chaloupka's son Joseph was born in Cleveland. He began the business of growing up on Chicago's west side, but he was still a youngster when his family moved into the stockyards neighborhood, and there he still lives at 5308 South Wood street. Frank Chaloupka was the father of four sons and four daughters. All of his sons and one of his daughters worked for a time in the yards. His son Tony is still a policeman there, and his son Frank is still in the packing business.

Joe Chaloupka recalls the yards in the early days when working hours there, as everywhere else, were long. He made $4.50 a week as errand boy, and after a year at that job he went to work in the wholesale market. He didn't get more money there, but he did get more experience. His new job took him all thru the plant. His next job was in the general superintendent's office, where he ran messages and took mail downtown and to the various departments. He landed in the sausage department one day, and, he says, "It smelled so good that I thought I'd like a job there. I asked the foreman, and I was hired. I started at $1 a day for a 10 hour day.

He's No Vegetarian.

He began with a 35 pound machine that was hand operated, something like a clothes wringer, he says. When he left the job, he was using a 500 pound power machine.

Joe's routine thru all of these years has consisted of three good meals a day and plenty of sleep. Those three good meals meant plenty of sausage, bread, and gravy. Joe doesn't hold with modern dieticians' recommendations for vegetables. Bedtime is 7:30 o'clock in the evening—or was while Joe was still working—and his rising hour is 4:30 o'clock in the morning. Getting up early gives a fellow plenty of time to read his paper, eat a good breakfast and take his leisure getting to work.

The Chaloupka family record amounts to more than 125 years at Armour's alone. The total may be more than twice that many years of family service in the packing business.

Grandson in Plant.

Joe's sons began with Armour's, too. One of them, Harvey, is still there. A grandson is also in the plant. Joe's wife worked at the yards before they were married. Joe's daughter worked there before she was married.

Life to oJe has been a matter of keeping his sausage machine clean, of passing the scrutiny of the government inspector, of working on the premises of the home he's bought. It's been hard work and frugality, and Joe has liked every minute of it.

MODERN SCENE CHANGES FAST WHEN YOU'RE 91

Mrs. Mary Parker Looks Back Thru Years.

When a lifetime becomes 91 years long its thread, winding thru nine decades, becomes a history lesson. Wars and inventions, political trends, and industrial progress live again in the record of many birthdays. Mrs. Mary Alice Parker of 7018 Stewart avenue turned 91 recently, and as her friends came paying anniversary calls and bearing remembrances, Mrs. Parker indulged in looking backward.

As a child on her father's farm in Michigan, Mrs. Parker used to listen to her grandfather, Lewis Benham, tell of his experiences as a soldier in the war of 1812. As a young girl, she heard the stories of the civil war from neighbors whose sons had marched off with the Union forces. She was a middle aged seamstress, mother of a boy, and living on Chicago's south side when Teddy Roosevelt and the Rough Riders went to Cuba in the Spanish-American war in 1898.

Sees Own Son in War.

And when the United States entered the world war in 1917, Mrs. Parker watched her own son march away.

"Yes, times have changed," Mrs. Parker says, "but I suppose every old person says that. My goodness, things happen so rapidly, a body could say that every week. I guess it'd be all right to say it every day from the way the papers look lately."

Newspapers are Mrs. Parker's major interest now. She reads three a day, without glasses. She did household mending and worked on rugs until five years ago, but now, she says, "I just sit and hold my hands."

Mrs. Parker lived thru the time when a great deal of commercial clothing was made by women working in their homes. Mrs. Parker made corset covers and dressing sacks, items of feminine apparel that flourished in the days before glamor invaded the lingerie industry.

Recalls Farm Days.

Altho a Chicagoan for half a century, Mrs. Parker recalls the days on a Michigan farm as the happiest ones. Her parents had five sons younger than their only daughter.

"We didn't have to ask any favors from anybody," Mrs. Parker recalls.

Mrs. Parker's son, Frank, a widower, lives with his mother. He has been a conductor for the Chicago Surface Lines for 37 years. He served on the horse cars and on the cable cars. He was conductor on the last cable car to roll into the barns at 39th street and Cottage Grove avenue.

JUBILEE WEEK OPENS TODAY IN BETHANY CHURCH

Roseland Unit Founded by 22 Members.

This Thanksgiving week is golden anniversary week at Bethany Reformed church of Roseland, 3 West 111th place. Jubilee services will begin with ceremonies at 10 o'clock this morning, vesper communion at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and another service at 7:30 o'clock this evening. Programs will continue thru the week and next Sunday. Dr. Harry J. Hager is pastor.

Dr. Harry J. Hager.

It was on Nov. 19, 1890, that 22 men and women assembled in Vandersyde's hall on Michigan avenue in Roseland to organize a church. Those 22 founders represented several denominational backgrounds, so Bethany Reformed church was, from the first, cosmopolitan in character.

Within the first year the congregation has built a church home costing $3,485 and with a seating capacity of 350. This was put up without outside financial aid. The church began a history of steady growth, and after the first decade the rolls included 107 families with 241 communicant members and 233 baptized noncommunicants.

By 1925 a new building was needed, and the cornerstone for the present $225,000 structure was laid. This is a Gothic style edifice with two towers rising 88 feet. The auditorium seats 1,150, and the Sunday school annex 1,200.

The extra room was needed, for by 1930 the church group included 436 families and 918 communicants, and that number has increased now to 823 families and 1,524 communicant members.

Memorial Communion.

This morning's jubilee service will be a memorial communion. A young people's rally will take place at 7:45 o'clock tomorrow evening. A missionary rally at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday evening, the exact anniversary date of the church, will bring the Rev. and Mrs. Henry Poppen, Reformed church missionaries to China, as speakers. Dr. Harry Ironside, pastor of Moody Memorial church, will be the speaker at a prayer service at 7:45 o'clock Wednesday evening.

Thursday, Thanksgiving day, will be the occasion for an evening jubilee celebration with Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the Collegiate Reformed church of St. Nicholas, New York City, and a former member of Bathany, as speaker.

A home coming banquet is planned for 7 o'clock Friday evening. A personal workers' rally is scheduled for 7:45 o'clock Saturday evening with the Rev. William McCarrell of the Cicero Bible church as leader.

Services Close Sunday.

The week will close with services at 10 o'clock next Sunday morning and 7:30 o'clock next Sunday evening. A former Bethany pastor, Dr. John R. Mulder, who is now a professor at Western Theological seminary in Holland, Mich., will speak at both services next Sunday.

Bethany has been served by five ministers in its 50 years. The first pastor was the Rev. Gerrit J. Hekhuis who had wanted to be a missionary and who, for that reason, founded the strong missionary program which is a principal part of the church's work today.

The Rev. John Steunenberg followed the Rev. Mr. Hekhuis. The third pastor was the Rev. John Lamar, the fourth, the Rev. John R. Mulder, and the fifth and present pastor, the Rev. Mr. Hager.

SUNDAY EVENING CLUB TO JOIN IN MISSION RALLY

Sounding first call for the National Christian mission, which begins this week in Chicago, Dr. E. Stanley Jones will address the Sunday Evening club tonight in Orchestra hall. This evangelistic campaign revivifies what the National Preaching mission began a few years ago, and with a corps of preachers will cover every major city in the country. Dr. Jones' topic will be "Pagans Waste Their Pains." Clifford W. Barnes will preside, and Dr. Ralph Wakefield, president of the Chicago Church federation, will also participate in the program.

Dr. E. Stanley Jones.

Dr. Jones in 1928 was elected a bishop in the Methodist church, but this office he resigned under the conviction that his life's duty lay in India. Here he founded an ashram, a spiritual center for meditation and interchange of thought based on the idea of religious fellowship, which idea has been translated in various degrees to America. He came into literary prominence with the publication of his. "Christ of the Indian Road," and all his subsequent books have enjoyed wide popularity.

NOVOTNA, SCHIPA IN 'TRAVIATA' ON W-G-N-MUTUAL

Alexander Sved Also to Be Heard Tomorrow.

Jarmila Novotna, noted Czech soprano, will make her Chicago operatic debut in "La Traviata," tomorrow. The opera performance will be broadcast from 9:30 to 11 p. m. over W-G-N and the Mutual network from the Chicago Civic Opera house.

Tito Schipa.

Tito Schipa, noted Italian tenor, and Alexander Sved, Hungarian baritone, also will be headliners. The broadcast portion of the program will include the last part of the second act and the full third and fourth acts of the long opera.

Miss Novotna will sing the rôle of Violetta, heroine of Verdi's tragic story. Miss Novotna made her debut in the rôle at the Prague Grand Opera house when she was 17. She made her American debut last year at the Metropolitan.

Alexander Sved will be heard in the rôle of Giorgio Germont, rich uncle of Alfredo Germont, Violetta's lover. Tito Schipa, whose lyric tenor voice has brought him international fame, will sing the rôle of Alfredo.

Other principals include Dorothy Kirsten as Flora, Giuseppe Cavadore as Gaston, John Daggett Howell as the Baron Douphol, Edward Stack as Marquis D'Obigny, and Mack Harrell as Dr. Grenvil.

Maurice Abravanel, noted Metropolitan conductor, will conduct the Chicago Opera orchestra for the performance. Lou Jackobson, W-G-N producer, will supervise the broadcast of the opera. John Gause will be broadcast technician.

The story of "Traviata" concerns the love of Alfredo, a young nobleman, for Violetta, a Paris demimonde. After pledging their love in the opening act, the pair flee to a villa outside Paris and plan their marriage.

In the second act, Giorgio visits Violetta and begs her to give up his nephew for the sake of the young man's career. Violetta reluctantly agrees and resumes her life in Paris.

Alfredo, deeply in love, follows her and asks her to return. In the final act the old uncle finally realizes that Violetta's love for Alfredo is sincere and consents to the marriage, but meanwhile Violetta has fallen ill and she dies in her lover's arms when he comes to tell her that they may be married.

"La Traviata" will be the second broadcast in W-G-N's series of five. The popular "Rigoletto" will be heard on Monday, Nov. 25.

John Wayne, one of Hollywood's foremost actors, and the star of "The Long Voyage Home," wil come to Chicago to play the same rôle in the broadcast.

John Qualen, a former Chicagoan, character actor and linguist who portrays Axel, a Norwegian sailor, in the picture, will take the same rôle in Thursday's show. Arthur Shields, well known here for his work with the Abbey Players, will be a third Hollywood guest on the W-G-N program.

THEATER OF AIR OFFERS 'EILEEN' NEXT SATURDAY

The Chicago Theater of the Air will present Victor Herbert's "Eileen" from 9 to 10 p. m. next Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual network. This favorite vehicle is the first of Victor Herbert's tuneful operettas to be aired this season by the Theater of the Air.

William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N, has announced that six additional operettas have been scheduled, running into the middle of January. They are "Carmen," Dec. 7; "New Moon" with Conrad Thibault, Dec. 14; "Hansel and Gretel" on Dec. 21; "The Fortune Teller," with Jan Peerce, Dec. 28; "Naughty Marietta" with Michael Bartlett, Jan. 11; and "Cyrano de Bergerac" with Richard Bonelli, Jan. 18.

In Saturday's operetta, Marion Claire, Theater of the Air prima donna, will sing the soprano lead of Eileen Mulvaney, the charming Irish heroine. James Melton, who was heard last month with Miss Claire in "The Chocolate Soldier," will sing the lead of the dashing Irish patriot, Barry O'Day.

Nathaniel Shilkret will lead the W-G-N concert orchestra and chorus. Next Saturday will mark Shilkret's third appearance on the Chicago Theater of the Air.

HOW COMEDIANS GET READY FOR RADIO SESSIONS

Tom, Dick, Harry Ad Lib Before W-G-N Mike.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

While Tom, Dick and Harry "ad lib" a lot before the W-G-N microphone, they are exceptions to the rule that most radio wit—even most of it that appears spontaneous—is set down on the script. During one of the Fred Allen-Jack Benny sessions before the microphone Jack exclaimed to Fred, "You wouldn't dare to talk to me that way if my writers were here."

That summarizes the radio comedy situation today. Even Fred Allen and Edgar Bergen, who got along for years without much outside help, have finally acknowledged the fact that they rely on outsiders in a measure for their comedy.

But Tom, Dick and Harry—Bud and Gordon Vandover and Marlin Hurt—rely mainly on whatever resources they can command when they get on the air to carry them thru. Of course they have their comedy songs more or less prepared. Their pianist, Robert Trendler, recently retaliated against them for their daily ragging—they refer to him as Orville Pink—by starting them off in a number and then just suddenly quitting them. The boys floundered thru as best they could.

They Heckle Ed Allen.

Gordon writes the characterizations of Hercules and the Old Timer which Bud delivers. Hurt writes his own Gypsy Rose Levey sketches but he does have the help of Fred Kress for his Beulah sketches which are currently brightening the Show Boat sessions. Bud and Gordon are also featured in sketches in Uncle Walter's Doghouse. Bud sings on Plantation Party.

The trio regularly gets into the hair of Ed Allen, their announcer on W-G-N. They interrupt and heckle while the sponsor's copy is read. And it probably has the effect of causing listeners to follow it more closely.

The procedure of most radio comedians is in decided contrast to their procedure.

Benny sits down early in the week with Ed Beloin and Bill Morrow. Their "writing sessions" sound more like revelry than work, Jack is, of course, a collaborator of this very successful writing team.

How Quinn Does It.

Don Quinn has been writing the Fibber McGee and Molly show since the beginning. Quinn locks himself in a room and spends from 24 to 48 hours there, taking time only to walk the dog, eat and perhaps nap. When he emerges he has a script which only requires polishing and finishing touches.

George Burns has developed a scheme of having two writers working on the same subject. George and his brother Willie then take the best lines of each and work them into a routine. Bob Hope has expanded this technique. He may have from eight to a dozen writers at work on the same material. Bob himself takes a hand in putting the script together.

Fred Allen is said to have four writers this season, working in pairs, each responsible for his own sections of the script. Fred usually pencils marginal notes and then starts scrawling between lines. When he finishes the alterations there may be whole new pages in Allen's minute writing.

One of his writers once said: "You want to celebrate if you get one of your original lines onto the air intact."

How Cantor Works.

Eddie Cantor and his writers sit around a table as they work on the next week's show. Pretty soon Eddie gets up and acts out each portion to get the feel of it. Eddie also holds preliminary dress rehearsals before audiences to determine which lines get the best laughs.

Whitey Ford of the Plantation Party does his own stuff. He has a tremendous library of humor with thousands of catalogued jokes and stories on every conceivable subject.

Bob Burns speaks of going out to "dream up some jokes." Everyone laughs at his hesitance at admitting that he relies on comedy writers to bolster up those stories about his relatives. When Bob comes to tell the story he does it in his own way, with only a few notes on a stray scrap of paper.

Back on W-G-N

Dorothy Gregory, who will be back on W-G-N as Jerry, the co-ed in the Citizens of Tomorrow program this week. This program featuring high school students, with Philip Maxwell as master of ceremonies, will be heard over W-G-N at 4:30 p. m. Tuesdays. Miss Gregory also is featured in the Scattergood Baines serial as Geraldine on CBS.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Nov. 18.

As long as the weather is favorable outdoor work should continue. Repair fences, cut fallen wood in the forest area, and leave everything in good condition for the winter. Gardeners living where animal manures can be obtained should apply a good amount to the surface of all flower beds and vegetable gardens. It is one of the finest materials to supply humus to the soil.

Tuesday, Nov. 19.

It is good practice to take apart the spraying outfit and give it a thoro cleaning so it will be ready for use next season. It is easy to clean it with a brush and soapsuds; soaking in washing soda or allowing to stand in a weak vinegar solution will soon clean it. Keep the spraying materials where they will not freeze.

Wednesday, Nov. 20.

Watch the terrarium or glass garden to see that there is not an excess of moisture on the underside of the glass or fungus may destroy the plants. If fungus is noticed it is best to make over the planting and start anew. Give a slight crack of air by sliding the cover to one side. Syringe or water when the plants need water.

Thursday, Nov. 21.

The natural time for sowing hardy annuals is in autumn. The seed ripens, falls to the ground, and remains there, dormant, all winter to germinate early in spring. The action of frost softens the hard seedcoat of some seeds enabling them to develop rapidly into flowering plants.

In the restricted area of the city garden it is best to procure plants and place them at proper distances rather than to sow seed, unless care is taken to thin out the seedlings to give each plant an opportunity to develop properly.

Friday, Nov. 22.

House plants will present a much different appearance if a study is made of the individual's habit of growth and a container chosen to harmonize with it. Odd or curiously shaped plants, like some of the succulents, look well in odd containers.

Saturday, Nov. 23.

There is yet time to cut material for propagating shrubs. Take the wood of the current season, cut into lengths of from 8 to 12 inches, according to kind, tie in bundles, butts up, label securely, and bury in sand in a cool cellar, or in the garden out of doors. During winter the ends will heal over and when the warm spring days arrive the cuttings are ready to be put in rows close together.

SECOND LIVING ROOM FOUND IN BASEMENT AREA

$300 Pays for Materials in Gay Quarters.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Some two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Axel O. Nielsen moved into their modern new brick house at 1741 North Natoma avenue. The basement was unfinished at the time. Then last winter the Nielsens decided to convert their under the main floor spaces into pleasant living quarters. They did so, entered their work in the Chicago Coal Merchants association's modernized basement contest, and won second prize.

Their achievement was a handsome piece of work which now rates high among the rooms in their two story home.

It is not a rumpus room nor a game room nor a den.

Perhaps it is the type of room you have been thinking you could use in your own home.

Room Full of Memories.

Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen did just what they wanted to when it came to the improvement of their basement area. They planned a room which would play the part of an informal, hospitable second living room. A large room where groups from the church could gather and where small, sociable meetings of friends and neighbors and church workers could be held. An inviting, pine paneled room, decorated with mementos from various trips and hence full of memories of nice vacation jaunts.

This basement living area is quite sizable—24 feet by 12 feet. The rest of the basement is given over to storage spaces, and to a spic and span boiler room which houses the stoker heating unit. The living section is apart from the utilitarian portion so it can be entirely closed off on occasions and as aloof as it wants to be.

Ceiling Painted Yellow.

The walls of this room have been paneled in wormy cypress, and there's a sun yellow painted ceiling. The floor is painted a mahogany shade and covered with a large Navajo rug. Other Mexican touches are seen in the sombrero over the fireplace, in small pictures and pottery and vases; all reminders of trips to Mexico.

One of the first problems which confronted the Nielsens in their planning of this room was what to do with the hot water pipes which ran along the sides of the ceiling. The problem was solved by a scalloped cornice of the same cypress as the wall. Now the cornice is a decorative part of the whole.

Nooks Are Recessed.

An artificial fireplace was installed to break the sweep of the long south wall, with real logs laid as if ready for lighting. Then, too, there are recessed nooks in the walls, filled with colorful bric-a-brac, and hardware in keeping with the informal cypress walls. The windows have been nicely placed and the room has light and air—and charm.

Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen feel the cost was reasonable and that they have precisely what they coveted—an inviting, informal living room in their basement. Mr. Nielsen and a brother-in-law did the work, and the expense of the materials did not run over $300.

CHURCH RITES CENTER AROUND THANKSGIVING

'Y' Branches Are to Have Banquets.

This week's south side church services and social events are centered about the Thanksgiving holiday. The Southtown Ministers association, under the Y. M. C. A. coöperation program, has worked out a schedule of six united Thanksgiving services in which 37 churches will take part. Four of the programs planned by city "Y" branches will take place on the south side.

The Rev. C. Emil Bergquist. [Stafford Photo.]

The Rev. C. Emil Bergquist, president of the Southtown Ministers, association heads the union service plans for Wednesday evening and Thursday morning.

Rites in Englewood.

Music Lovers Thrill to New Opera Season

Many south siders last week voiced their heartiest approval of the 1940 performances of the Chicago Opera company. Part of the audiences which have been applauding the season's first performances, they were unanimous in their opinions that the company's productions are stirring, graphic, and colorful.

Mary Morrison.

Most enthusiastic of the opera fans in the south side community was Mrs. Albion Hedburg, 5007 Blackstone avenue, president of the Greater South Side Four Arts league, which each summer presents the Jackson Park Music festival.

"I went three times," she said. "I heard 'Aïda,' 'Falstaff,' and the combination program of 'Cavalleria Rusticana' and 'Pagliacci.' To me, the ballét was utterly magnificent, and I believe it adds a lot to the production.

Likes Stage Settings.

"The chorus also is fine. That was especially pleasing because there are so many Chicago boys and girls in the group. I was impressed, too, by the costumes, which were fresh, and the lovely and unusual stage settings."

Following are other south siders who recently found their enthusiasm for the opera renewed:

Mrs. Emily Skolnik, 1444 East 65th place: "I thought it was marvelous —much better than last year, because the singers acted their parts so well that persons like me, who didn't know the story, could understand the plot. I heard 'Pagliacci' and 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' and I want to go again."

New Spirit in "Carmen."

Miss Mona Casey, 7247 Paxton avenue: "Last week's performance of 'Carmen' was the best I have ever seen. I always did like the wonderful Spanish dances and the rousing singing, but this time it was as if I was seeing and hearing them for the first time. There was a new spirit about this 'Carmen' that I found intoxicating."

Miss Mary Morrison, 7259 Crandon avenue: "I went to 'Madame Butterfly' and thought it was very good. Enya Gonzalez, who sang the lead, has a remarkable voice and the orchestra was the best I've ever heard in Chicago. I thought it was significant that there were so many Filipinos in the audience, and I never saw so many children there in all my life. I hope to attend twice more."

VOTERS WAKEN TO REAL POWER BEHIND BALLOT

It's Surprise to Learn Own Strength.

BY GAIL COMPTON.

The election is over, and as news it is dead. However, one great political truth that has been overlooked for many years, was brought to light again during the campaign with such force that politicians everywhere are turning their attention to it once more. That truth is that the precinct is still the basic voting unit in the country, and the people within the precinct, if interested in an election, are the ones who ultimately control that election.

Curry J. Martin.

In the heat of the recent campaign more people became actively interested in politics than ever before. Many who never had voted, others who had previously adopted the "what's the use" attitude, people who had never troubled to register, all found themselves actually working in an election as poll watchers, judges, clerks, and canvassers.

Why the people reacted so violently to the election campaigning and why they, seemingly for the first time, wanted to work in the election, can be discovered by studying the workings of any precinct in the city.

Typical Case Cited.

The 78th precinct of the 4th ward is typical of many in the country. It was predominantly Republican in 1936, and remained that way in this election. The story of its organization and the work it did is not important as an isolated incident, but it is important in that it indicates the trend thruout the country of the new interest in politics taken by the layman.

In the early days of September, nine business men met to discuss what they could do to forward what they felt were the best interests of the country. Leading the group was Curry J. Martin of 1365 East 48th street, a young lawyer.

Together they drafted a letter addressed to their neighbors asking them if they wanted to help in the election, and circulated 100 of the letters thru the precinct. In it they said, "Our purpose is to bring together like-minded men and women who wish to work together for a common cause." They promised there would be no brass bands or political spellbinders, and stressed the fact that theirs was a work group.

Surprise for Uninitiated.

At the first meeting on Sept. 17, 50 people turned out. At a second meeting in October, 100 people came. There were no political speakers, but instead an earnest discussion of politics, instruction in voting, and talks on the organization of the precinct, the ward, and other voting units.

"We found," Mr. Martin said, "that we were talking to people who never before had taken an active part in politics, and who had no idea how an election was run or what a ward and precinct were. They were not illiterate, but well educated people who had the common misunderstanding that one had to be a professional politician to have any part in the election of city, state, or national officers."

"The people in the precinct were interested, and they wanted to help but had no idea how to go about it. All we did was offer them the chance to take an active part in their own government, and they accepted it eagerly."

30 Discover Their Part.

As a result of this beginning, more than 30 people took up election work who previously had been completely inactive. For the first time, politics became a neighborhood affair, and not a distant national campaign. They discovered that one could be in politics without being a mayor. They canvassed the precinct, checked voters' lists, watched at the polls, and acted as judges and clerks.

At first Martin had trouble in finding any one who was willing to act as a judge in the polling place, and he was forced virtually to "draft" one woman. After the election she called him and asked to be allowed to work in the next election. "I never before realized the tremendous amount of work back of an election," she told Martin, "and I had no idea it was so complicated. Now I feel as if I have really done my part for the government, and have actually had a hand in helping to determine national policies. It was a wonderful experience."

Vote Permanent Club.

Thus in one precinct more than 30 people gained a consciousness of politics they had lacked before.

"The work in my precinct," said Martin, "is important only in that it shows what has happened thruout the country. And the interest has not died with the end of the election, for the people in the neighborhood have unanimously decided to make our club of Republican voters a permanent one. This is true everywhere. The last campaign has given impetus to the deep seated interest of the people in their government."

Fame came to Mercy High school recently when the Mercian, 1940 yearbook, was chosen as one of the 10 school yearbooks for the Book-of-the-Year club by the National Scholastic Press association. The Mercian was the only yearbook in Illinois to receive that honor.

Three south siders have been selected for membership in the a cappella choir at Graceland college, Lamoni, Ia. They are Tom McKay, 6202 Hermitage avenue; Louis Magnus Jr., 1725 East 53d street, and Donald Swanson, 6323 Hoyne avenue. Students are invited to join the choir after being chosen from the Oratorio society. Thirty-three were selected this year. Louis also has been chosen to play the drums in the school orchestra.

LAMENTS CRIME OF YOUTHS.

It's time people in South Chicago were taking action to reduce adolescent vice and crime in the district, just as we hear they are doing so thoroly in the south central area. As far as I know there are no committees or special groups, or police details out here for the specific purpose of studying and curbing juvenile delinquency. Day after day we see the same things and read about the same troubles in the paper: Ruthless breaking of windows, small boy crap games, smoking and drinking by children, gang fights, and other conditions and acts too improper to mention. When will our adults in South Chicago wake up? Something, surely, can be done to reduce this barbarism.

MRS. E. P. C.

HOW ABOUT THE CURVE?

My thanks to the city council or whoever it was that is responsible for having stop signs erected on 87th street warning of that dangerous curve just east of Eggleston avenue. I don't know how long they've been up—just noticed them the other day—but I remembered that I hadn't been reading about any deaths at this fatal curve lately, so I guess they were badly needed. But why stop now? How about doing something about the curve itself?

10,000 WOMEN HELP DRIVE FOR COMMUNITY FUND

Workers Represent 54 Club Organizations.

More than 10,000 members of 54 women's clubs are taking active part in the drive of the Community fund towards its goal of $3,604,000. The clubs are affiliated with the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs and are under the leadership of the federation president, Mrs. Park Q. Wray. These women are working under the women's division of the Community fund of which Mrs. King Mitchell is the chairman.

"Altho individual clubs have often supported the Community fund," Mrs. Mitchell said, "this is the first time the Federation has had active representation in the women's division. I feel that this is an important step toward reaching our goal of 100 per cent coöperation from all Chicago women's clubs."

Ask Aid of P.-T.

Mrs. Paul Hahn, student aid chairman of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, sent a note to the presidents of 300 Parent-Teachers' associations asking their active support.

"The student aid committee of every P.-T. A. unit knows how important it is to keep up the 185 welfare agencies represented by the fund," Mrs. Hahn said. "Some of the agencies provide scholarships for children, others maintain recreation projects in the neighborhoods where they are most needed.

"Medical care, foster homes, clothing, and shelter are other necessaries given by the Community fund agencies to many of the children we know. Our P.-T. A. program is made more successful by the coöperation we receive the year around from the agencies."

Other Special Drives.

Other women's organizations which have organized special drives among their members are the National Council of Jewish Women, Johannah lodge No. 9, of the Illinois Club for Catholic Women, the Bertha Hirsch club, Fortnightly club, Chicago Woman's club, Big Sisters, American Legion auxiliary, Adolph Kraus Auxiliary B'nai B'rith, and the Catholic Women's league.

Clubs which sent checks to help the fund include the Croation Women's club, Fellowship House Woman's club, Fernwood Woman's club, League of Mothers' clubs, National Society of Colonial Dames of America, Neighborhood Woman's club, Portage Park Woman's club, Seward Park Woman's club, Marquette Manor Woman's club, Mayfair Woman's club, Delta Theta Tau sorority, Shaare Zedek Sisterhood, Deborah Woman's club, United Order of True Sisters, Lincoln No. 22, and the South Side Catholic Woman's club.

NATIONAL AREAS TO BE DEPICTED IN COUNTY FAIR

The South Chicago Y. M. C. A. will assume the appearance of a country fair illustrating national characteristics on Friday evening, Nov. 29. Miss Eugenia Kegowicz, lay staff supervisor, has announced that the carnival will be staged by the Bowen High school Tri-Hi-Y girls of the "Y." Booths representing the north, east, south, and west sections of the United States will be set up.

The plantation booths of the south will serve popcorn and orangeade. In charge of them will be Margaret O'Shaughnessy, Ruth Marriot, Frances Wilhelmy, and Marion Teeters. Homemade candy will be sold at the Big Red barn of the North by Alice Buza, Joyce Ward, and Mabel Osterberg.

"Fishing in the Atlantic Ocean" will be another privilege for fair customers. Fishing tackle and bait will be supplied by Margaret Parker, Vivian Andrews, Helen May, and Bonnie Grass. Jean Buhrmeister, Lois Carlson, and Miriam Buzzell are making arrangements for a pseudo Hollywood theater.

Other attractions will be a fortune telling booth conducted by Virginia Patton and Doris Bradovich, dressed as gypsies; a "Windy City" exhibit under the supervision of Jean Anderson and Virginia Hayes, and a dance arranged by Phyllis Muir, Jacqueline Barnett, Irene Napper, June Schmillen, and Ruth Moran.

Others assisting in arrangements for the fair are Marie McLean, Marie Plumb, Virginia Jaescke, Beverly Kupferschmidt, Lois O'Connor, Gloria Hausler, Hermina and Bernice Perasich, and Dorothy Dalton.

The Four Remarkable Flessors

WORK! WORK! NO PLAY IS MOTTO OF 4 FLESSORS

3 Boys, Sister Set Up Unusual Record.

All work and no play makes the four Flessors of Hyde Park High school an unusual family. The three Flessor brothers—Nick, Aristotle, and Elias—have been admitted to the Sigma Epsilon honor fraternity, and their sister, Bea, is not far behind in scholarship.

Three brothers in Sigma and four members of the same family in school simultaneously is history-making at Hyde Park. But the Flessors are remarkable in many ways.

Instead of going out to play after school the boys troop home to study. There they range themselves at three desks and begin preparations for the next day's classwork. Nick, a senior, is ready to help Elias, who is a junior, and Elias is available for consultation with Aristotle, in first year. But much of the time only the clock is heard as the boys bend over open books.

No Dates Until 21.

When the brothers have done their homework, Bea, Nick's twin, who has been at her piano lessons meanwhile, takes over the room for herself. Each of the four averages four or five hours of study a day outside of class.

This is not surprising, since none is permitted outside home after dark by the strict Flessor parents. Elias and Aristotle indulge in outdoor sports only occasionally and Nick ignores athletics entirely. Nor are any of them given permission to meet the opposite sex in the evening. Bea, in fact, will not be allowed to accept dates until she is 21 years old—an old Greek custom.

"This is right," thinks Nick. "We should work when we're young to prepare ourselves for making a living as soon as we're old enough. You go to school to learn something, so there's no use loafing around. After we have begun our careers, then we'll have playing to look forward to."

All Work, No Play.

Nick is constantly occupied when he isn't studying. He arrives at school at 8 o'clock each morning instead of 9:30 in order to fulfill his voluntary duties as manager and bookkeeper of the mimeograph department. Like his brothers, he also works on Saturday. Next year he plans to attend Chicago Teachers college or the University of Chicago in order to become an instructor in accounting.

Aristotle, who is called Pythagoras by his classmates, intends to be a chemist, while Elias is ambitious to become a big league outfielder. Bea's plans are purely negative—she just doesn't want to study any more.

SECOND LIVING ROOM FOUND IN BASEMENT AREA

$300 Pays for Materials in Gay Quarters.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Some two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Axel O. Nielsen moved into their modern new brick house at 1741 North Natoma avenue. The basement was unfinished at the time. Then last winter the Nielsens decided to convert their under the main floor spaces into pleasant living quarters. They did so, entered their work in the Chicago Coal Merchants association's modernized basement contest, and won second prize.

Their achievement was a handsome piece of work which now rates high among the rooms in their two story home.

It is not a rumpus room nor a game room nor a den.

Perhaps it is the type of room you have been thinking you could use in your own home.

Room Full of Memories.

Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen did just what they wanted to when it came to the improvement of their basement area. They planned a room which would play the part of an informal, hospitable second living room. A large room where groups from the church could gather and where small, sociable meetings of friends and neighbors and church workers could be held. An inviting, pine paneled room, decorated with mementos from various trips and hence full of memories of nice vacation jaunts.

This basement living area is quite sizable—24 feet by 12 feet. The rest of the basement is given over to storage spaces, and to a spic and span boiler room which houses the stoker heating unit. The living section is apart from the utilitarian portion so it can be entirely closed off on occasions and as aloof as it wants to be.

Ceiling Painted Yellow.

The walls of this room have been paneled in wormy cypress, and there's a sun yellow painted ceiling. The floor is painted a mahogany shade and covered with a large Navajo rug. Other Mexican touches are seen in the sombrero over the fireplace, in small pictures and pottery and vases; all reminders of trips to Mexico.

One of the first problems which confronted the Nielsens in their planning of this room was what to do with the hot water pipes which ran along the sides of the ceiling. The problem was solved by a scalloped cornice of the same cypress as the wall. Now the cornice is a decorative part of the whole.

Nooks Are Recessed.

An artificial fireplace was installed to break the sweep of the long south wall, with real logs laid as if ready for lighting. Then, too, there are recessed nooks in the walls, filled with colorful bric-a-brac, and hardware in keeping with the informal cypress walls. The windows have been nicely placed and the room has light and air—and charm.

Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen feel the cost was reasonable and that they have precisely what they coveted—an inviting, informal living room in their basement. Mr. Nielsen and a brother-in-law did the work, and the expense of the materials did not run over $300.

Plan Fall Festival.

St. Peter and Paul society No. 18 of the Polish Roman Catholic union will hold its annual fall festival Wednesday evening at the New National hall, 3310 South Morgan street.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, Nov. 18.

As long as the weather is favorable outdoor work should continue. Repair fences, cut fallen wood in the forest area, and leave everything in good condition for the winter. Gardeners living where animal manures can be obtained should apply a good amount to the surface of all flower beds and vegetable gardens. It is one of the finest materials to supply humus to the soil.

Practically all early flowering shrubs can be successfully transplanted in fall and often they do much better than spring planted stock. Planting can continue up to the time the ground freezes.

Tuesday, Nov. 19.

It is good practice to take apart the spraying outfit and give it a thoro cleaning so it will be ready for use next season. It is easy to clean it with a brush and soapsuds; soaking in washing soda or allowing to stand in a weak vinegar solution will soon clean it. Keep the spraying materials where they will not freeze.

Wednesday, Nov. 20.

Watch the terrarium or glass garden to see that there is not an excess of moisture on the underside of the glass or fungus may destroy the plants. If fungus is noticed it is best to make over the planting and start anew. Give a slight crack of air by sliding the cover to one side. Syringe or water when the plants need water.

Thursday, Nov. 21.

The natural time for sowing hardy annuals is in autumn. The seed ripens, falls to the ground, and remains there, dormant, all winter to germinate early in spring. The action of frost softens the hard seedcoat of some seeds enabling them to develop rapidly into flowering plants.

In the restricted area of the city garden it is best to procure plants and place them at proper distances rather than to sow seed, unless care is taken to thin out the seedlings to give each plant an opportunity to develop properly.

Friday, Nov. 22.

House plants will present a much different appearance if a study is made of the individual's habit of growth and a container chosen to harmonize with it. Odd or curiously shaped plants, like some of the succulents, look well in odd containers.

Saturday, Nov. 23.

There is yet time to cut material for propagating shrubs. Take the wood of the current season, cut into lengths of from 8 to 12 inches, according to kind, tie in bundles, butts up, label securely, and bury in sand in a cool cellar, or in the garden out of doors. During winter the ends will heal over and when the warm spring days arrive the cuttings may be lined out in rows close together.

This is a very easy way by which the material can be rapidly increased. When lining out, tamp the soil around each cutting. Grapes can be readily increased in this manner or the vines can be layered.

NOVOTNA, SCHIPA IN 'TRAVIATA' ON W-G-N-MUTUAL

Alexander Sved Also to Be Heard Tomorrow.

Jarmila Novotna, noted Czech soprano, will make her Chicago operatic debut in "La Traviata," tomorrow. The opera performance will be broadcast from 9:30 to 11 p. m. over W-G-N and the Mutual network from the Chicago Civic Opera house.

Tito Schipa.

Tito Schipa, noted Italian tenor, and Alexander Sved, Hungarian baritone, also will be headliners. The broadcast portion of the program will include the last part of the second act and the full third and fourth acts of the long opera.

Miss Novotna will sing the rôle of Violetta, heroine of Verdi's tragic story. Miss Novotna made her debut in the rôle at the Prague Grand Opera house when she was 17. She made her American debut last year at the Metropolitan.

Alexander Sved will be heard in the rôle of Giorgio Germont, rich uncle of Alfredo Germont, Violetta's lover. Tito Schipa, whose lyric tenor voice has brought him international fame, will sing the rôle of Alfredo.

Other principals include Dorothy Kirsten as Flora, Giuseppe Cavadore as Gaston, John Daggett Howell as the Baron Douphol, Edward Stack as Marquis D'Obigny, and Mack Harrell as Dr. Grenvil.

Maurice Abravanel, noted Metropolitan conductor, will conduct the Chicago Opera orchestra for the performance. Lou Jackobson, W-G-N producer, will supervise the broadcast of the opera. John Gause will be broadcast technician.

The story of "Traviata" concerns the love of Alfredo, a young nobleman, for Violetta, a Paris demimonde. After pledging their love in the opening act, the pair flee to a villa outside Paris and plan their marriage.

In the second act, Giorgio visits Violetta and begs her to give up his nephew for the sake of the young man's career. Violetta reluctantly agrees and resumes her life in Paris. Alfredo, deeply in love, follows her and asks her to return. In the final act the old uncle finally realizes that Violetta's love for Alfredo is sincere and consents to the marriage, but meanwhile Violetta has fallen ill and she dies in her lover's arms when he comes to tell her that they may be married.

"La Traviata" will be the second broadcast in W-G-N's series of five. The popular "Rigoletto" will be heard on Monday, Nov. 25.

WAYNE TO STAR IN DRAMA OF SEA ON CHICAGO HOUR

Walter Wanger's surging drama of the sea, "The Long Voyage Home," will be brought to W-G-N and Mutual network listeners on the In Chicago Tonight program from 7:30 to 8 o'clock next Thursday evening.

The motion picture is based on four one-act plays by Eugene O'Neill and was directed by John Ford. It will be the second Wanger success to be presented this season on In Chicago Tonight. The first was "Foreign Correspondent" in which Wanger and his wife, Joan Bennett, appeared on W-G-N Sept. 26.

John Wayne, one of Hollywood's foremost actors, and the star of "The Long Voyage Home," will come to Chicago to play the same rôle in the broadcast.

John Qualen, a former Chicagoan, character actor and linguist who portrays Axel, a Norwegian sailor, in the picture, will take the same rôle in Thursday's show. Arthur Shields, well known here for his work with the Abbey Players, will be a third Hollywood guest on the W-G-N program.

"The Long Voyage Home" opened yesterday at the Apollo theater. William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N will produce the radio version.

2 More Opera Aspirants.

Gertrude Berggren, New Britain, Conn., contralto, and Gordon Dilworth, Brooklyn, N. Y., baritone, will be the two aspirants in the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air, at 4:00 p. m. today over WMAQ. Miss Berggren will sing "O Don Fatale" from Verdi's "Don Carlos," and Dilworth's solo will be "Largo Al Factotum."

HOW COMEDIANS GET READY FOR RADIO SESSIONS

Tom, Dick, Harry Ad Lib Before W-G-N Mike.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

While Tom, Dick and Harry "ad lib" a lot before the W-G-N microphone, they are exceptions to the rule that most radio wit—even most of it that appears spontaneous—is set down on the script. During one of the Fred Allen-Jack Benny sessions before the microphone Jack exclaimed to Fred, "You wouldn't dare to talk to me that way if my writers were here."

That summarizes the radio comedy situation today. Even Fred Allen and Edgar Bergen, who got along for years without much outside help, have finally acknowledged the fact that they rely on outsiders in a measure for their comedy.

But Tom, Dick and Harry—Bud and Gordon Vandover and Marlin Hurt—rely mainly on whatever resources they can command when they get on the air to carry them thru. Of course they have their comedy songs more or less prepared. Their pianist, Robert Trendler, recently retaliated against them for their daily ragging—they refer to him as Orville Pink—by starting them off in a number and then just suddenly quitting them. The boys floundered thru as best they could.

They Heckle Ed Allen.

Gordon writes the characterizations of Hercules and the Old Timer which Bud delivers. Hurt writes his own Gypsy Rose Levey sketches but he does have the help of Fred Kress for his Beulah sketches which are currently brightening the Show Boat sessions. Bud and Gordon are also featured in sketches in Uncle Walter's Doghouse. Bud sings on Plantation Party.

The trio regularly gets into the hair of Ed Allen, their announcer on W-G-N. They interrupt and heckle while the sponsor's copy is read. And it probably has the effect of causing listeners to follow it more closely.

The procedure of most radio comedians is in decided contrast to their procedure.

Benny sits down early in the week with Ed Beloin and Bill Morrow. Their "writing sessions" sound more like revelry than work. Jack is, of course, a collaborator of this very successful writing team.

How Quinn Does It.

Don Quinn has been writing the Fibber McGee and Molly show since the beginning. Quinn locks himself in a room and spends from 24 to 48 hours there, taking time only to walk the dog, eat and perhaps nap. When he emerges he has a script which only requires polishing and finishing touches.

George Burns has developed a scheme of having two writers working on the same subject. George and his brother Willie then take the best lines of each and work them into a routine. Bob Hope has expanded this technique. He may have from eight to a dozen writers at work on the same material. Bob himself takes a hand in putting the script together.

Fred Allen is said to have four writers this season, working in pairs, each responsible for his own sections of the script. Fred usually pencils marginal notes and then starts scrawling between lines. When he finishes the alterations there may be whole new pages in Allen's minute writing.

THEATER OF AIR TO OFFER 'EILEEN' WITH MISS CLAIRE, MELTON

The Chicago Theater of the Air will present Victor Herbert's "Eileen" from 9 to 10 p. m. next Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual network. This favorite vehicle is the first of Victor Herbert's tuneful operettas to be aired this season by the Theater of the Air.

William A. Bacher, chief of programs and production at W-G-N, has announced that six additional operettas have been scheduled, running into the middle of January. They are "Carmen," Dec. 7; "New Moon" with Conrad Thibault, Dec. 14; "Hansel and Gretel" on Dec. 21; "The Fortune Teller," with Jan Peerce, Dec. 28; "Naughty Marietta" with Michael Bartlett, Jan. 11; and "Cyrano de Bergerac" with Richard Bonelli, Jan. 18.

In Saturday's operetta, Marion Claire, Theater of the Air prima donna, will sing the soprano lead of Eileen Mulvaney, the charming Irish heroine. James Melton, who was heard last month with Miss Claire in "The Chocolate Soldier," will sing the lead of the dashing Irish patriot, Barry O'Day.

Nathaniel Shilkret will lead the W-G-N concert orchestra and chorus. Next Saturday will mark Shilkret's third appearance on the Chicago Theater of the Air.

COMPETES WITH BEER AND DOPE TO SAVE SOULS

Pacific Mission Haven to the Despairing.

BY DAVID ANDERSON.

Competition is tough on South State street, but the 63 year old Pacific Garden mission still does a thriving business in men's souls.

Night and day thousands of homeless men—bums, hoboes in from the wheat fields, ragged panhandlers, crippled up, mumbling, shuffling men—limp down South State street from Van Buren to 11th street and then plod back again. It's a parade of perpetual motion second only to West Madison street. Where they go, whence they come, is nobody's business and nobody cares much.

Lured by Menu.

Or they read the bill of fare on the fly-specked glass of a steaming beanery and peer into the dim saloons where schooners of beer are a nickel. Now and then they stop in front of the second-hand clothing stores to look at the suits and overcoats that dangle on rods from the doorways and listen to the canned music blaring out of the loudspeakers in the transom.

Here, in this jumble and welter of pawnshops, poolrooms, honky-tonks and cage hotels where a night's lodging is a dime or 15 cents—40 cents for a private room, including breakfast—the Pacific Garden mission holds its own.

It's tough competing with nickel beer, 15 cent burlesque and 10 cent whisky, but the mission does it with "bait" that nobody would expect to work on South State street.

"Bait" Is a Fountain.

The "bait" is an old fashioned drinking fountain and it stands just outside the mission door. Once in a while a thirsty man moves out of the shambling throngs and takes a drink. As he bends over his eyes are on a level with the neatly printed Biblical quotations in the window. Other signs bid him enter. Everybody, say the signs, is welcome.

Inside it is warm and clean. Row after row of plain kitchen chairs have been painted tan to match the tan store front. Since the mission was started 63 years ago the doors have not been closed a single day or night.

Originally started on Van Buren street, the mission moved to Clark street, and in 1923 it followed the shuffling throngs of homeless men to 650 South State street.

Founders Are Dead.

It was founded by Col. and Mrs. George R. Clarke, who have since died. Its first location was formerly occupied by the Pacific Beer garden, then one of the most notorious saloons in the nation. Col. Clarke asked D. L. Moody, founder of the Moody Bible institute, to suggest a name. Moody told Col. Clarke to rub out the word "beer" and add "mission." The name has stuck.

Each night the mission houses 73 men on iron cots upstairs after the services on the main floor are over. The men bring bundles of newspapers for bedding. Some evenings as many as 400 persons crowd into the hall to hear the singing and preaching. Harry G. Saulnier, superintendent, estimates that in a single month the mission has managed to find jobs for 20 to 30 men. "But we don't keep records of such things," he adds.

"Our first work," he says, "is the saving of souls. Giving men a place to sleep and finding jobs is incidental. Bringing men to God is our primary business. All else is secondary."

Has Converted 30,000.

The mission thru its years has converted more than 30,000 men, Supt. Saulnier believes. Among its converts was Billy Sunday, the famous whisky-fighting evangelist.

Booze, women and dope are the three main causes of South State street's down-and-outers, Supt. Saulnier says. "They start drinking or taking dope and cut themselves adrift from their homes and families. Soon they are forced to panhandle to get a shot of booze and before long they are fishing cigarette butts out of the gutter. It's an old story.

"But we also work with great numbers of men I call 'up-and-outers.' These are men with jobs, families, homes, men who come to us sore in heart, full of despair. We have set many of these men free again and rehabilitated their spirit. Why, just the other day we saved a man who has been on a drunk for 50 years."

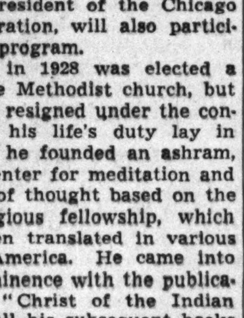
BISHOP WHO RESIGNED FOR AID TO INDIA IS SUNDAY CLUB SPEAKER

Sounding first call for the National Christian mission, which begins this week in Chicago, Dr. E. Stanley Jones will address the Sunday Evening club tonight in Orchestra hall. This evangelistic campaign revivifies what the National Preaching mission began a few years ago, and with a corps of preachers will cover every major city in the country. Dr. Jones' topic will be "Pagans Waste Their Pains." Clifford W. Barnes will preside, and Dr. Ralph Wakefield, president of the Chicago Church federation, will also participate in the program.



Dr. E. Stanley Jones.

Dr. Jones in 1928 was elected a bishop in the Methodist church, but this office he resigned under the conviction that his life's duty lay in India. Here he founded an ashram, a spiritual center for meditation and interchange of thought based on the idea of religious fellowship, which idea has been translated in various degrees to America. He came into literary prominence with the publication of his "Christ of the Indian Road," and all his subsequent books have enjoyed wide popularity.

CHILLS, THRILLS TO MARK DRAMA AT THE GOODMAN

Central Theater Group to Appear Sunday.

Chills and thrills of a first rate mystery, plus back stage information about the theater, will be served up at the Goodman theater next Sunday evening when "The Last Warning" will be given by the Central group of the Community theaters.

The cast will consist of picked players from the various community theater groups of the Chicago park district. These players have demonstrated by their outstanding work in local productions that they are fitted for more advanced theatrical assignments.

"The Last Warning," which ran for more than a year in New York, is a mystery-comedy that deals with the errors and skulduggery accompanying a stage group's efforts to produce a play, "The Snare," in the reputedly haunted Woodford theater.

Play Within Play.

This play within a play lets the audience in on much of the action and terminology that are a part of "backstage." Act 1 is laid in the manager's office, the second act takes place on the stage of the Woodford, and the closing scene of the last act shows part of the actual performance of "The Snare."

Evelynda Hendon, burlesque chorus girl hired to take the other actors' minds off the distraction of the eerie Woodford, is played by Irene Leske, 1021 North Austin boulevard, who represents Pulaski park.

Others in Cast.

Other members of the cast are Jeannette Groves, 4507 Dover street, as Gene; Elmore Stangland, 4913 North Meade, as Barbara; Flavia Trucco, 1429 North Austin boulevard, as Dolly; Arthur Kling, 3821 South Wolcott street, as Mike; Mathew Jurczak, 2507 North Avers avenue, as Wilkins; Joseph Hefter, 3991 Ellis avenue, as Quaile; William Hall, 1621 Division street, as Tommy; Frank Yonan, 532 Deming place, as Robert; Charles Reinhold, 8331 South Paulina street, as Josiah; Roy Graves, 9133 South Ada street, as McHugh; Charles W. Smith, 6731 South Peoria street, as Mac; William Dukes, 2759 North Leavitt street, as Joseph, and Marvin Burchfield, 4201 Melrose street, as Carlton.

William S. Shepherd, assistant drama supervisor for the park district, is director. Virginia Leach, 4514 South Union avenue, is the assistant director.

The show will have an 8:30 curtain. The proceeds will go toward the cost of future central group productions.

SOUTH SIDE AIDS RED CROSS ROLL CALL CAMPAIGN

Chairmen Appointed in City and Suburbs.

In conjunction with the beginning of the annual membership campaign last week, roll call chairmen in neighborhoods and suburban towns were appointed by James B. Forgan, chairman of the Chicago Red Cross chapter. Seven chairmen were named on the south side and six in the southeast suburbs. The drive will continue until Nov. 30.

Red Cross officials explained that in Chicago the roll call is conducted in residential areas only. No solicitation is made in the downtown business district nor in industrial establishments because approximately one-third of the chapter's income is provided by the Community Fund. In suburban towns Red Cross membership invitation is extended in business and industrial establishments as well as in residential neighborhoods.

Importance Is Cited.

Mr. Forgan emphasized that this campaign is the most important since world war days, because of added obligations stemming from the national defense program and increased demands for training in the organization's health and safety services.

5 South Siders Ordered to Duty as Flying Cadets

Five south siders are among the young men from Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin who have been ordered by the army to report for elementary training as flying cadets on Nov. 27. The south siders will go to the Spartan School of Aeronautics, Tulsa, Okla. They are Robert B. Brown, 5830 Stony Island avenue; Roy E. Deadman Jr., 5714 Blackstone avenue; Dean W. Dutrack, 2218 East 84th street; William A. O'Neill, 7846 Ridgeland avenue, and Michael Rodnick, South Woodlawn avenue.

Play's the Thing

Jack Peterson has been tireless in his efforts to give the South Chicago Y. M. C. A. a place in the "Down the Mississippi River Swim" being conducted among the Y. M. C. A.'s thruout the nation. Jack has swum 1,500 lengths of the "Y" pool, or more than 15 miles during the last month. Fred Zehme is first in the boys' division with 910 lengths and Elaine Kasmerick is first in the women's division with 336 lengths.

The course of the race is from St. Paul to New Orleans, a distance of 1,820 miles. Each Y. M. C. A. is endeavoring to swim this distance by registering the combined laps swum by its members. Two hundred twenty-six boys are entered at South Chicago. They have totaled 10,800 laps so far.

Charles Hermanek of the Hyde Park "Y" has not allowed age to slow up his athletic activities. Mr. Hermanek, who is owner and manager of a motor company at 1373 East 67th street, is 54 years old but here is how he relaxes: last year he captained the team that won second place in the city Y. M. C. A. championship competition and for the last 20 years he has been using his spare moments at squash, bowling, and socking the volleyball.

Thirty-three years ago he was a member of the lightweight basketball team that won the city amateur title. He also played sandlot baseball and football on the south side. Today he reluctantly confines himself to slightly less strenuous sports and acts as chairman of the Hyde Park "Y" volleyball activities.

A new boys' club has sprung up in Longwood. The boys call the organization the "B. A. L.," which stands both for Boys' Athletic league and "Brotherhood, Allegiance, and Loyalty" They meet in the home of their sponsor, E. E. Schimmel, at 9628 South Racine avenue, and are planning to purchase boxing gloves, a mat, and basketball material.

The boys are thinking a lot about basketball. When they enter the Ridge Park league, says Brendan Greene, captain, "we will have a good team and will be hard to beat." Meanwhile, under the coaching of Bob Oehman, the club has begun an auspicious football season, thanks to the "great running" of Franny McGurk.

WHAT'S A WHELK? GERARD KNOWS RIGHT ANSWER

Prodigy Even Lectures to His Elders.

BY PAUL HEALY.

Consider an 8 year old boy who can define an apertyx, a whelk, a limpet, and a hoatzine, who knows the rôle that Hippomenes played in Greek mythology, who is familiar with 100 books, and who gives lectures on birds and animals. This is the same boy who can barely write his own name, believes in Santa Claus and is a champion swimmer.

The boy is little Gerard Darrow, prodigy of the Bradwell Elementary school, 7710 Burnham avenue, and baby star of the "Quiz Kids" radio program. Four feet three inches tall, Gerard nevertheless has the poise of a congressman, thinks fast, and speaks slowly, deliberately, and articulately. His round face is grave and wise behind his spectacles, which he hates to remove because he believes they make him look mature.

Knows 500 Birds.

Gerard lives at 7718 Kingston avenue with his father, his aunt, two brothers and a sister. When he was 2 years old his aunt began reading to him stories about birds and animals. Gifted with a remarkable memory, the baby remembered almost everything he heard. At the age of 4, he could identify and give the characteristics of 365 kinds of birds. Today he is familiar with the habits of 500 birds.

Recently he was promoted to the fourth grade after only a few weeks in third grade. Leo Frederick, Bradwell principal, decided that Gerard was wasting his time, since he had no difficulty reading even sixth grade texts.

"I've never seen a youngster of 6 or 8 who had his brackground in special fields," says Mr. Frederick. "What is more important, he has, in addition to this knowledge, a wonderful command of grammar and a good vocabulary. He knew so much in first grade that we had him give a talk on birds to second and third grade children, but he discussed things away over their heads. The same thing was true when he lectured to the eighth grade."

Liked by Other Boys.

"As a pupil, he is frank and always outspoken, but he's not a particle spoiled or smart-alecky with his teachers. He also is liked by the other boys, who seem not to notice that he is different—obviously the intellectual type."

One of his feats in class last year was to memorize 13 reading cards in 15 minutes, a task which the average child is unable to accomplish in several hours He finds learning to write a problem, however, possibly because it doesn't allow him to exercise his whimsical sense of humor. In second grade, asked to print a composition, he decorated some of the O's with eyes, nose, and mouths, some with fantastic beards and some with spectacles. He was pleased when his teacher thought it was funny.

That Gerard is going to school at all is somewhat of a triumph for his father and aunt. He finally agreed to enter first grade but "only to learn to read." After his first few days at school his father asked him how he liked it. "It's all right," was Gerard's answer, "but I think it's going to take up too much of my time. I'd like to play during the day and go to school at night."

Wants Baby Vulture.

Later, however, he became friends with several of his classmates and enjoyed the routine. With characteristic candor, he always hugged the pupils he liked best.

Gerard's favorite after school sport is romping with his cocker spaniel, Rusty. Other daily concerns are his huge collections—assortments of feathers, birds' nests, butterflies, coins, turtles, stamps, and fossils. Currently he is looking forward to the day he will receive a baby vulture, which will be sent to him from California.

"These interests come from his wide reading," says his aunt, Miss Bessie Darrow. "Gerard reads everything he comes across. He has access to adult reading matter at the public library and digests about five books a week.

He prefers fact to fiction, and dislikes tragedy, whether it's in the movies or Grimm's fairy tales. He also prefers books on birds, fish, and animals to Greek mythology. Recently he gave an illustrated lecture on birds and fossils at the Francis Parker Private school and afterward successfully answered questions in the sophomore biology class.

Friend of the Birds.

"When I grow up, I want to be a scientist who studies feathers and birds," he says very seriously. "But my main concern will be to have a law passed prohibiting men from killing pheasants and other beautiful birds. Right now I don't know exactly how it'll be acomplished. I may have to see the President about the matter."

His love for the lower creatures is never absent from his drawings. He has shown his talent for drawing since he was 2 years old, but seldom has he sketched anything but birds and animals. If he does draw a woman, comments his aunt, she invariably has a bird in her hat—a bird, incidentally, which far outshines the lady in beauty.

A superb swimmer, Gerard has won numerous underwater and distance swimming contests during the summer in Michigan. For this he has been given a junior membership in the Illinois Athletic club. Besides swimming, he loves puzzle games, chess, and contact.

His father is Joseph Darrow, an industrial efficiency expert. His brothers are Joseph Jr., a salesman, and Michael, a student at De La Salle High school, and his sister is Mary Elizabeth, a student at the University of South Dakota. Chief common characteristic of the children is an inability to sing the simplest tune, according to their aunt.

Opinions Split on 'Time of Your Life'

By Cecil Smith.

Any play that causes the members of its audience to take violent sides either for it or against it must, by virtue of the exceptional interest taken in it, be considered an important piece of work. In the last three weeks "The Time of Your Life," the William Saroyan comedy at the Erlanger theater, has created an extraordinary split in the opinions of Chicago playgoers. Such controversy, of course, is good for the theater, because it sends people to the box office who want to find out for themselves what all the hollering is about, and because it induces people to sharpen their wits by calling into play their most cutting intellectual instruments of criticism.

The two opposed views may be stated fairly simply. The members of one camp, for whom my erudite colleague, Charles Collins, the Linemaster, is a principal spokesman, finds Mr. Saroyan's jumbled chronicle of waterfront life "daft" and devoid of "common sense." On the other hand, the members of the camp of Mr.

Eddie Dowling and Edward Andrews.

Saroyan's adherents, in which I am happy to share Lebensraum with a number of journalistic colleagues of longer experience than mine, hold that the playwright's disregard for frozen conventions of dramatic style allows him to discover and project a new kind of human insight into his characters.

Since I have confessed to a partisan position in my attitude toward "The Time of Your Life," I should not dream of setting myself up as an arbiter in this dispute. But there are, it seems to me, a great many good things to be said about Mr. Saroyan, and I should like to say a few of them.

In "The Time of Your Life" Mr. Saroyan engages in the frankest and most undisguised kind of experimentation. After seeing the play one can reconstruct a good deal of the author's apparent intention. What would happen, he seems to have wondered, if a large group of rather unprepossessing habitués of a San Francisco bar were allowed to move naturally on and off the stage, speaking their minds with the disjointed freedom that characterizes conversation and idle talk in actual life? Might we not discover more about these simple people, these social under dogs, if we refused to cramp them into the stylized framework of conventional dramatic structure?

And so we spend the evening just becoming acquainted with Joe, who sits and drinks and talks, and with Kit Carson, an old Indian fighter who tells long tales purely to create an effect with them, and with Kitty Duval, whom Mr. Saroyan briefly charac-

Child Benefits from Harmony in the Family

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

(Copyright: 1940: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

MOST of us are willing to admit that we are responsible for our children's behavior. We're not responsible in the same way for what they are at birth. Too many ancestors go into their making, and we can't be sure whether our children will "take after" us or after Great-Aunt Miranda or Great-Grandfather Israel, or will perhaps show a trait we can't understand, because the person it came from is lost in the mists of the past.

So, except in the matter of how parents have lived and the care a prospective mother has taken of her own and her baby's health, we are not responsible for the inherent qualities our children possess at birth.

But what we do with this human material so full of potentialities, that is another story. At the moment of birth our chance is handed us. What use we make of it is seen in the behavior and general development of our children thru the years.

In this connection one thing is certain: The better shape we are in in our own adult lives, the better parents we can be. People who are in involved psychological states, who are emotionally in a turmoil, cannot live with their children day by day as well as if they were not in that condition.

There's another angle to this. It is the physical one.

If a woman is tired out, run down, and nervous she simply cannot do her job as well as if she were well and rested. If you are consistently well and a very strong person you can scarcely recognize the truth of this statement, but if you've ever been overtired and nervous you know it to be a fact, and if you're a person who is normally serene and patient with your children you become distressed to notice the effort you have to put forth to refrain from irritability and actual unreasonableness with them.

In a word, you substitute mismanagement for wise and tactful treatment of your children. They show the direct result, besides responding to the general atmosphere in their own lack of serenity.

Ruth Chatterton to Appear Here as Star in 'Pygmalion'

Shaw's Comedy Opens Nov. 25 at the Selwyn

Ruth Chatterton, one of the theater's most accomplished comediennes, comes to the Selwyn theater on Monday evening, Nov. 25, in a play fully worthy of her distinguished talent. The play is George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," a modern classic which has not received a professional presentation in Chicago in the 14 years since Lynn Fontanne appeared in the Theater Guild production.

The sheaf of press material received by this department upon the subject of Miss Chatterton's "Pygmalion" completely omits all reference to the fact that the gifted actress played here a year ago in a comedy by Marcella Burke and Gladys Unger called "Tonight We Dance." The inference that the engagement of "Tonight We Dance" was unsuccessful must herewith be plainly refuted. Admittedly the play was not the best comedy ever written, but Miss Chatterton, returning to the stage after long and exclusive devotion to the films, proved to be worth any one's time and trouble; and "Tonight We Dance" closed in the face of excellent business at the end of four weeks because a booking made earlier drove her out.

The plot of "Pygmalion" probably needs no exposition, for all conscientious moviegoers must have seen the screen version with Wendy Hiller and Leslie Howard, which was chosen one of the 10 best pictures of 1939 in the annual poll of movie critics' opinion. In case you do not happen to know "Pygmalion," however, the play tells the story of an uncouth Cockney girl who is taken over by a professor of phonetics and turned into a lady with the help of improved diction, correct grammar, and a veneer of good manners.

Barry Thomson, who appeared with Miss Chatterton in "Tonight We Dance" last year, will be seen as the professor who assumes responsibility for Eliza Doolittle's metamorphosis from a pathetic flower girl into an aristocratic social butterfly. Dennis Hoey is also featured in the supporting company, which includes Margaret Moffat, Myrtle Tannahill, Hayden Rorke, Richard Temple, Alice John, Eleanor Wilson, Mortimer J. Weldon, Arthur Gilmour, and Jean Kemper. "Pygmalion" is directed by Auriol Lee, celebrated English actress, director, and producer.

Miss Chatterton and her company are stopping in Chicago in the course of a country-wide tour which will ultimately take them to the Pacific coast. The play is produced by Harold J. Kennedy in association with Jus Addiss and Hayden Rorke.

The arrival of Miss Chatterton means, unfortunately, the end of the run of "The Male Animal" at the Selwyn theater. The excellent comedy of domestic and academic life on a midwestern college campus, with Elliott Nugent as its star, will be seen here for the last time on Saturday evening. A tour will follow, with St. Louis and Detroit the first cities to be visited. Gertrude Bromberg, known to many Chicago playgoers thru her 10 years' admirable service to the local Shubert office, has resigned her position here to go on tour with "The Male Animal" as its press representative.

Opinions of Theatergoers Varied on 'Time of Your Life'

terizes as "a young woman with memories," and with a great many other folk whose inward thoughts would never come out unless we left them severely alone, and did not try to force their stories out of them.

I am sure Mr. Saroyan will not thank me for the comparison, but "The Time of Your Life" reminds me of Gertrude Stein's novel, "The Making of Americans." In a style so repetitious and involved that most people desert it before reaching page 50, Miss Stein in "The Making of Americans" pieces together tiny mosaic bits of incident and characterization with infinite pains and scrupulous selection, until the family she is telling about [supposedly her own] comes to life with astounding psychological completeness. "The Making of Americans" has perhaps as small a quantity of plot interest as any novel ever written, but you know her people by the time you get thru.

Something similar is achieved, with fewer words and with more people, in "The Time of Your Life." So few physical incidents absorb time and interest that Mr. Saroyan is able to let his people show far more of themselves in five scenes than is ordinarily possible within the time limits of a single play.

No play can be dramaturgically good, we are told, without some sort of important conflict, which creates a crisis before a solution, either happy or sad, is reached. "The Time of Your Life" presents no central conflict of any important dimensions. Therefore it is not, perhaps, technically a good play. Its mood is placid, and even the shooting just before the final curtain is treated in a curious vein of high humor.

But even if it isn't a "good play," "The Time of Your Life" remains an "important evening in the theater." For Mr. Saroyan is presenting a single, almost absurdly simple and optimistic thesis: Most people are interesting and valuable in themselves, and not because of anything they do. Their daily lives, whether photographed in humdrum moments or in passing moments of excitement, present absorbing human material. Out of the jumbled data provided by their chance remarks and actions, the careful observer can piece together something of the pattern of the human race—something truer, Mr. Saroyan no doubt hopes, than the distorted behavior of characters who are crowded into the accepted conventional form of the usual play.

This analysis does not, of course, do full justice to the warmth with which Mr. Saroyan has obviously undertaken his task, to his tremendous identification with the minds and hearts of little people, or to the note of broad social satire he occasionally—wilfully and without apology—imposes upon his characters.

Nor does it begin to offer a just tribute to the skill and appropriateness with which nearly all the parts are acted by the members of the present Erlanger theater company. Without the incomparable services of Eddie Dowling, for example, we should not come to know Joe as well as Mr. Saroyan intended, nor could Kit Carson be the same without Arthur Hunnicutt as his interpreter.

Four Thanksgiving day matinées are announced by local theatrical attractions. "Life with Father," at the Blackstone, will offer a Thursday afternoon performance in addition to the regular Wednesday matinée this week. "The Male Animal," "Lady in Waiting," and "Meet the People" substitute Thanksgiving afternoon performances for their Wednesday matinées.

When "Life with Father" rounded out its first full year in New York on Nov. 8, the following total statistics of the New York, Chicago, and Boston companies were compiled: Vinnie [Mother] has made 11,232 round trips up and down the stairway, and Father has called loudly to his Maker 4,160 times. Including three widely spaced tryout weeks of the three successive companies in Baltimore, more than 900,000 people have seen "Life with Father," and the aggregate box office gross now exceeds $1,500,000.

Brock Pemberton, the producer of "Lady in Waiting," in which Gladys George is providing rough-and-tumble merriment at the Harris theater, was once a drama editor, poor fellow. He worked first for the New York World and later for the New York Times. Whenever a controversy rages about some aspect of theatrical activity, he is still likely to sit down at his typewriter and dash off a cogent letter to the Times. Since 1917, when he joined the staff of Arthur Hopkins, he has devoted his professional attention to production. Thruout his enviable career in the theater, he has adhered to comedy as his special range of activity. Among his notable contributions in this field have been "Enter Madame," "Miss Lulu Bett," "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," "Strictly Dishonorable," and "Personal Appearance."

Radio-Theater now announces the winning manuscripts in the play contest announced in these columns last summer. Three prize plays have been selected: "Protective Custody," by Henry B. Rosendahl and Marion McGuire of Detroit; "The Back Seat," by E. R. Woodward of Chicago, and "The Enduring Night," by Allen McGinnis of Tulsa, Okla. "Protective Custody" will be presented at the Civic theater Dec. 13 and 14, with a professional Equity cast directed by John McGee, former director of the Federal theater in Chicago.

"Tobacco Road," the longest-run play in the history of the New York theater, may be seen at the Paramount theater, Hammond, Ind., tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday. There will be matinée and evening performances every day. John Barton, as Jeeter Lester, heads the cast.

Two New Plays 'Expose' Follies of Film Capital

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK, [Special].—What we need is a Papa Will Hays of the theater to pass on the Hollywood exposures designed for the theater. We have had two of them this week, and neither of them is going to do either Hollywood or the theater much good.

The first, "Beverly Hills," is stupid as a satire and vicious as a caricature, if the rumored story is true that it was intended to pillory a screen star of the old days who came to think of herself as a missionary of the "Susan and God" order.

The second is "Quiet Please," a definite improvement on the first, but nothing in the play line that an honest playgoer can cheer about. This ones does tell a story that holds together with reasonable plausibility and is concerned with humans who are at least approximately believable in character and action.

There is still a third to come, one called "Glamour Preferred," but that will not be along for another week. When it does arrive it will make the fourth of a quartet of comedies dealing with stage folk and stage scenes that we have seen within a month. Beginning playwrights always want to write of their newly discovered profession, and most of them have a shot at it. Most of them also miss, I may add.

I am the fellow who demands with his drama a story that is sufficiently human to interest him and sufficiently plausible to hold that interest. I am also the fellow who is not at all offended by the use of "old stuff" if it is honestly used and with some skill.

"Quiet Please" is as old stuff as any of them, having to do with what you might call a Walter Fiddler story about the popular screen divinity who, discovering that her two timing husband had gone fishing for, as well as with, a blonde, consoled herself by inviting a handsome University of Southern California student who has become a gas station assistant to stay longer than he intended staying when he brought her car home.

But it has the advantage of telling a story that has its beginning with the wife's discovery of her husband's little scheme, its middle section with her sudden inspiration about getting even, including the lightly comic working out of her plan, and its end with the husband's awakening and the temporary adjustment of their affairs.

Therefore, to me, it is the best of the show folk comedies recently shown and provides a better than average evening in the theater.

Jane Wyatt.

Also it holds an added advantage in being played by a hand picked cast in a carefully detailed setting. Jane Wyatt, who, to me, is one of the up and coming Cornells of the future and who is improving with every rôle she plays, is the heroine. Now, Jane is not the type for this particular breed of screen star any more than she was the type for the actress in Odett's "Night Music," when she was paired romantically with Elia Kazan. Because she is lovely to look upon and gentle in manner, producers have been miscasting her in the hope that she may give their plays an appeal their authors failed to write into them.

She does just that for "Quiet Please." Her two leading juveniles are Donald Woods and Gordon Jones, better known to the cinema than the stage, and the cast includes Fred Niblo, veteran of the flickers; Ann Mason, Bruce MacFarlane, Anthony Kemble Cooper, and Herman Lieb.

"Beverly Hills" is, according to standards similar to those applied above, practically everything a satirical comedy should not be, except that it, too, is well cast. This one is weak in story value, dishonest in character valuations, forced and unnatural, tho sometimes smart, in speech, and altogether lacking as entertainment.

The unattractive people of "Beverly Hills" include Lois Strickland, a former screen star who has retired to become a happy wife and mother. Leonard, her husband, is one of the successful but shy scenarists who, she feels, must be forced to fight for his rights. Lois introduces Leonard to her old, old friend, a certain May Flowers who, as the text has it, has seen "Susan and God" once too often.

May, being the wife of an investment banker who specializes in movies, is not only soul conscious but also man crazy on her own. She seduces the shy Leonard and rewards him with a writing contract controled by her husband. Lois is disillusioned, but forgiving.

This, as said, is not only rubbish, but dishonest rubbish in the bargain. And yet it was selected and promoted by men as wise in the theater as Laurence Schwab and Otto Priminger. Which is one of our major discouragements during the lean years of the theater. When our best men fail us, what have we to expect from others?

Helen Claire.

Schwab and Preminger, however, did their best for us in the way of players and fittings. The three leading women are Helen Claire, blonde beauty of "Kiss the Boys Goodbye"; Violet Heming, blonde beauty of a half hundred dramas the last several years, and Ilka Chase, brunette menace with the forked tongue who scored a devastating hit in "The Women."

These three did their best for Lynn Starling and Howard J. Green, who wrote "Beverly Hills." They were competently aided by Enid Markey, Clinton Sundberg, Robert Shayne, and William J. Kelly. And probably the handsomest bungalow setting this side of Hollywood, designed by Donald Oenslager.

It appears we have now suddenly become the ballet capital of the universe. This would have pleased the late Otto Kahn no end. It was he who advanced the money to import the first big ballet we ever saw, which was the Russian Diaghileff organization that came over during the first world war years under Morris Gest's direction. Mr. Kahn used to say he hoped that his importation would make America ballet, as well as art conscious, and it did.

Now we have a theater in 51st street devoted for the moment exclusively to ballet. It seats 1,500 persons, and for three weeks recently was packed nightly by as enthusiastic audiences as you can find anywhere. This was the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo.

The Monte Carlo ballet moved out and the original Ballet Russe, organized by Col. De Basil, and, as I understand it, the company from which the Monte Carlo group stems, moved in. Again the theater has been packed for every performance, and this engagement is for four weeks' minimum.

I wouldn't be much good as an expert in judging ballets, seeing my adventures among them have been limited. But, from where I have sat and what I have seen, the original Ballet Russe seems to me to approach perfection as closely as any of them. Its three ballerinas, who are incredibly graceful and beautiful, are all young and amazingly gifted. You know them by name, probably, tho you would never think of trying to pronounce the names—Tamara Toumanova, Irina Boronova, and Tatiana Riabouchinska.

Its men folk—who are even harder to spell — headed by the excellent David Lichine, are also able to startle and to arrest your attention. The settings and costumes are striking. An evening at the ballet is really something to remember. Three visits and you are the noisy one who is getting red faced shouting "bravo." Why? I wouldn't know.

But, as I say, there being no ballet in Paris since the Germans marched in, and none in Russia or Germany or Austria, we now become the ballet center of the world. Which is at least a trend.

Miss Hopkins to Stage.

Miriam Hopkins will shortly return to the stage, playing the proprietor of a small town store in the Mississippi delta in Tennessee Williams' "Battle of Angles," which the Theater guild is producing.

HOLMES, SWEET HOLMES

Marion Holmes, intriguing in her new raven black hair-do, is singing as sweetly as ever with Art Kassel and his band in the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel.

Revival of 'Salome' at Opera Recalls Old Controversy

Miss Lawrence to Be in Title Role Thursday

By Edward Barry.

Among the features of this third week of the Chicago Opera company's six week season are a revival of Strauss' "Salome" in which Majorie Lawrence will sing the title rôle, a performance of Montemezzi's "The Love of Three Kings" which the composer will conduct and in which Grace Moore will sing her first Fiora anywhere, and a presentation of Verdi's "La Traviata" which will bring forward the Czech soprano, Jarmila Novotna, for her Chicago operatic debut.

Marjorie Lawrence.

The revival of "Salome" Thursday night will recall to old timers and to lovers of yellowed newspaper clippings the tempest which arose in November of 1910 on the occasion of the work's first performance here.

It was on the 25th of that month that Chicago's first resident opera company—then only three weeks old —presented Strauss' sultry music drama with Mary Garden in the name part. Arthur Farwell, president of the Chicago Law and Order league, had received a protest in advance of the performance, and he had communicated with Chief of Police Leroy T. Steward. The chief went to the Auditorium to see the show himself and to make up his mind as to whether it was really as bad as it had been painted. In his opinion it was. His comments, as printed in next day's papers, began with the simple unambiguous sentence, "It was disgusting."

Edward C. Moore, in his "Forty Years of Opera in Chicago," tells amusingly of the controversy, or rather the public name calling contest, which followed. Mary Garden and her enemies kept the townsfolk on edge for days with the verbal brickbats they were flinging back and forth.

Said Miss Garden: "I always bow down to the ignorant and try to make them understand, but I ignore the illiterate." Said Mr. Farwell: "Mary Garden as Salome is a great degenerator of public morals." Replied Miss Garden: "Any one whose morals could have been corrupted by seeing 'Salome' must already have degenerated." Said Chief Steward: "'Salome' is vulgar and repulsive, not fit for a respectable public to witness. Said Miss Garden: "Chief of Police Steward has a low mind."

Many others entered the fray—revival speakers, writers to the newspapers, neighborhood philosophers. The upshot of it all was that "Salome" was withdrawn after its second performance.

What offended many people was not so much the music drama itself as the realism of its performance. At a time when Victorian ideas of propriety were still in the ascendancy Miss Garden had the temerity to present on the stage, vividly and with few compromises, the story of the lust of the degenerate Salome for the prophet John. It is little wonder, then, that for the next 11 years the tale had no further presentations at the Auditorium [except in the much milder form of Massenet's "Hérodiade"]. Miss Garden was again seen here in her famous rôle in 1921 and 1922. Maria Jeritza sang it twice in 1934. There have been no performances since.

Next Thursday Miss Lawrence, an Australian soprano who has been heard here previously in "The Valkyrie," "Tannhäuser," "The Jewess," and "Carmen," will have the support of René Maison as Herod, George Czaplicki as John, and Karin Branzell as Herodias. Artur Rodzinski, conductor of the Cleveland orchestra, is directing the performance.

"Salome" runs to intensity rather than length, and the evening will be rounded out with a presentation of the cool, classical "Swan Lake" by the Ballet theater. The whole performance is a benefit for Passavant hospital.

It is impossible to write about Chicago opera without introducing, again and again, the name of Mary Garden. Fiora in "The Love of Three Kings" is another traditional Garden rôle. She sang it no fewer than 19 times between 1920 and 1929. Since 1929, Claudia Muzio and Helen Jepson have each done it twice here.

That Miss Moore's performance Saturday evening will be highly authentic is promised by the fact that she has been coached in the rôle by the composer himself. That it will be well and movingly sung is indicated by Miss Moore's proved ability to grow artistically as her répertoire makes greater and greater demands upon her.

Mme. Novotna has made one broadcast appearance in Chicago [for W-G-N and Mutual last summer] but she has yet to sing from any local concert platform or operatic stage. Tomorrow Chicago will see her as Violetta, a rôle in which she made a deep impression at New York's Metropolitan opera last season.

The brilliance of her voice and her extreme personal attractiveness—plus the important fact that the great Tito Schipa has the rôle of Alfredo—should help to make tomorrow evening's performance of the Verdi perennial one of the most interesting in Chicago's experience.

Except for its appearances in opera and in "Swan Lake" Thursday, the opera company's dance group — the Ballet theater—will have a restful week. Its series of all-dance programs will be resumed next Sunday.

Operas and casts for this week follow:

Monday at 8—Verdi's "La Traviata," with Jarmila Novotna [debut], Dorothy Kirsten, Tito Schipa, Giuseppe Cavadore, Alexander Sved, John Daggett Howell, Edward Stack, Mack Harrell, and the Ballet theater. Maurice Abravanel conducting.

Tuesday at 8—Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," with Rose Tentoni [debut], Hellyn Fix [debut], Ada Paggi, Frederick Jagel, Giuseppe Cavadore, George Czaplicki, John Daggett Howell, Douglas Beattie, Holger Sorenson, and Carlos Celi. Angelo Canarutto conducting.

Wednesday at 8—Double bill. Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana," with Dusolina Giannini, Lydia Summers, Ada Paggi, Arthur Carron, and Mack Harrell. Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci," with Margit Bokor, Giovanni Martinelli, José Mojica, Carlo Morelli, and William Hawkins [debut]. Maurice Abravanel conducting both works.

Thursday at 8:30—Strauss' "Salome," with Marjorie Lawrence, Karin Branzell, René Maison, José Mojica, and George Czaplicki. Artur Rodzinski conducting [debut]. "Swan Lake" [Tschaikowsky-Petipa-Dolin] by the Ballet theater. Alexander Smallens conducting.

Saturday at 2—Massenet's "Manon," with Helen Jepson, Dorothy Kirsten, Anne McIsaac, Elizabeth Brown, Richard Crooks, Giuseppe Cavadore, John Lawler, George Czaplicki, John Daggett Howell, and Raymode Guery. Maurice Abravanel conducting.

Saturday at 8—"Montemezzi's "The Love of Three Kings," with Grace Moore, Lydia Summers, Ada Paggi, Elizabeth Brown, Charles Kullman, Giuseppe Cavadore, Carlo Morelli, and Virgilio Lazzari. Italo Montemezzi conducting.

The Chicago Dance council will give a party for the Humphrey-Weidman group and the Ballet Theater in Ida Noyes hall, 59th street and Woodlawn avenue, tonight at 7 o'clock.

For its second concert in the Arts club next Tuesday morning the Russian trio will play Brahms' Trio, Opus 87, in C major, and Mendelssohn's First Trio in D minor. Nina Mesirow-Minchin, Hans Munezer, and Ennio Bolognini are the members of the trio, which, incidentally, will shortly be heard on recordings of the R. C. A. Victor company.

Today at 4:30 Edward Eigenschenk will give a brief organ concert in the Rockefeller Memorial chapel. Mr. Eigenschenk is regularly organist of the Second Presbyterian church.

After a season's absence from Chicago, Doris Humphrey, Charles Weidman and their dance group return to give a recital in the Grand Opera house this afternoon, sponsored by the Chicago Dance council. Now ranking among the leading American dancers and choreographers Miss Humphrey and Mr. Weidman have spent their energies and talents pioneering in the cause of the modern dance ever since they broke away from the Denishawn group years ago. Besides helping to develop the materials and technique of the modern dance, they have helped to make it palatable to the ordinary audience by widening its scope and entertainment value. Comedy and satire are just as likely to turn up on their programs as drama, tragedy or pure abstraction.

Doris Humphrey.

All but one number—Variations from Miss Humphrey's "New Dance" —on today's program are new to Chicago. Miss Humphrey also is the choreographer of "Square Dances," "Song of the West," and "The Shakers," which appear on the schedule. Mr. Weidman's contribution to the program is his solo suite, "On My Mother's Side." The order of the program follows:

"Square Dances"..............Lionel Nowak
"Song of the West"
"The Green Land"...............Lionel Nowak
"Desert Gods"........................Roy Harris
"On My Mother's Side"......Lionel Nowak
"The Shakers"........................Traditional

Chicago, New York Symphony Orchestras to Exchange Visits

By Cecil Smith.

A historic and unprecedented exchange of courtesies takes place this week in recognition of the 50th year of our resident orchestra. In Carnegie hall, New York, Frederick Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra play on Wednesday and Friday for the regular subscribers of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony society. On Thursday evening and Friday afternoon, here at Orchestra hall, the Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra, conducted by John Barbirolli, presents our Chicago subscription concerts.

By virtue of a fortnight's engagement at Ravinia last summer Mr. Barbirolli is better known than his orchestra to Chicago concertgoers. In seven concerts, during the last week of July and the first week of August, Mr. Barbirolli directed the Chicago Symphony orchestra in a series of programs marked by imaginative arrangement and catholicity of taste. His only visit to Chicago with his own orchestra—in fact, the only concert by the orchestra since the New York Philharmonic and the New York Symphony were merged into a single orchestra more than a decade ago—took place in the Auditorium theater last fall.

The New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra, for all its graciousness in coöperating in this week's exchange concerts, is entitled to adopt a somewhat paternalistic attitude toward our own Chicago Symphony orchestra. For while our orchestra is proud to celebrate its 50th year the Philharmonic—the older parent organization of the present composite institution—is now in its 99th season. Even the New York Symphony orchestra was founded 13 years earlier than the Chicago orchestra. Reckoning from the initial Philharmonic concerts of 1842, the orchestra plays its 3,669th and 3,770th concerts in Orchestra hall this week!

A bond exists between the Philharmonic and the Chicago Symphony orchestra in the fact that Theodore Thomas, who became the first conductor of our local organization at its founding in 1891, had earlier served as conductor of the New York orchestra. A series of distinguished musicians followed in Thomas' wake as Philharmonic conductors; among them were Anton Seidl, Emil Paul, Walter Damrosch, Wassily Safronoff, and Gustav Mahler. More recent conductors, between 1911 and the merger with the New York Symphony orchestra in 1928, were Josef Stransky, Willem Mengelberg, Wilhelm Fürtwangler, and Arturo Toscanini. Since 1928 the Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra has employed, in addition to Mr. Toscanini and Mr. Barbirolli, such noted conductors as Erich Kleiber, Otto Klemperer, Bernardino Molinari, Artur Rodzinski, Sir Thomas Beecham, Hans Lange, Georges Enesco, and Igor Stravinsky.

Another long-time Orchestra hall tradition will be shattered when the visiting orchestra this week plays different programs on Thursday evening and Friday afternoon. Since the very first season, when the weekly Saturday night concert was preceded on Friday afternoon by what was called a "public rehearsal," identical programs have always been scheduled for the Orchestra hall concerts. [In actual practice minor changes have sometimes been made, as happened week before last, when "Fireworks" was dropped from the all-Stravinsky program on Friday.]

On Thursday evening Mr. Barbirolli introduces to Chicago his own transcription of a chaconne by Henry Purcell. The Thursday program, in detail, follows:

Chaconne .................................Purcell
[Transcribed by John Barbirolli.]
[First time in Chicago.]
Prelude to "Irmelin"..................Delius
[First time in Chicago.]
Orchestral Fragments Second Series, from "Daphnis and Chloe".......Ravel
Symphony No. 7, C Major...........Schubert

A forgotten work by Debussy, recently performed by Mr. Barbirolli for the first time in America, adds novelty to the Friday afternoon program. The work is "Le Sommeil de Lear," a movement from some incidental music to Shakespeare's "King Lear" [all of the rest of which, except for a fanfare, was left uncompleted] written in 1904. The complete Friday program follows:

Concerto Grosso No. 7, B-flat major..Handel
Le Sommeil de Lear.................Debussy
[First time in Chicago.]
Overture — Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet" ...................Tschaikowsky
Symphony No. 2, D Major...........Brahms

Dr. Stock will conduct two of the orchestra's newly commissioned works in New York, the John Alden Carpenter symphony and Roy Harris' "American Creed." Other items in the New York programs are Brahms' third symphony and Strauss' "Thus Spake Zarathustra." In addition to New York, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and Boston will also be included in the eastern tour. The orchestra will return to Chicago for its scheduled concerts during the week of Nov. 25.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Last winter Devi Dja and her group of Balinese dancers, comedians, and musicians turned up at the Civic theater, offering delightful and out of the ordinary entertainment. Their popularity was great enough to warrant their being brought back, and on Friday and Saturday nights and Saturday afternoon they will return to the Civic theater with a new program.

Under the title "A Night in Bali" Devi Dja and her colleagues will present a two act, 16 scene revue, featuring songs, dances, comedy skits, pantomimes, and sporting events of the Dutch East Indies. Most of these activities are accompanied by the group's unique gamelan, an orchestra of native percussion instruments. Never having been to Bali, this department can only report what it has been told—that Devi Dja and her company authentically reproduce East Indian dancing and other theater arts, slightly streamlined and adulterated to conform with western civilization's ideas of entertainment. At first hand we can state that there is enough exotic flavor in the presentation to satisfy any one as well as plenty of comprehensible diversion.

The diminutive and dynamic Serge Jaroff will lead the Don Cossack male chorus in two programs at the Civic Opera house today, one at 3:30 and one at 8:30. The group returns each year to Chicago, its popularity undiminished since its initial visit some years ago. The afternoon and evening programs are almost completely different, having only one number in common—a work entitled "Recollection of Tchaikovsky," arranged by Schvedoff and sung in commemoration of the centenary of the Russian composer's birth. Choral numbers by Kastalsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Bortniansky, and other eminent Russians are scheduled on the programs, together with arrangements of numerous folk songs.

Serge Jaroff.

On Tuesday night the Don Cossack chorus will sing in the Highland Park High school, 300 Vine avenue, as the second presentation of the north shore concert series.

Suzanne Bloch, who plays the lute, virginal and recorder with equal facility, will appear for the first time in Chicago on the Musicians Club of Women artist recital in the Arts club tomorrow morning. The artist is the daughter of Ernest Bloch, the Swiss-American composer. Altho born in Switzerland, she came to this country at an early age, becoming a naturalized citizen. She studied music with her distinguished father, Roger Sessions, and Nadia Boulanger, eventually developing a love for music of the 16th and 17th centuries. Besides making extensive researches in the field of early music she learned to play the instruments of the same period, and as a performer she has appeared in numerous recitals, with symphony orchestras and on the famous Dolmetsch festivals of ancient music in Hasselmere, England. The lute she uses is said to date back to 1600; it was restored by the late Arnold Dolmetsch and has 19 strings.

On Monday's program Miss Bloch will devote herself to compositions for the lute, virginal and recorder written between 1445 and 1650.

The Illinois Symphony orchestra is playing downstate on a brief tour this week, so there will be no concert tomorrow night in the Great Northern theater. On the following Monday, however, the orchestra will be back to give its weekly program, with Ralph Rose as conductor and Mae Yampolski as piano soloist.

Paul Robeson, the famous Negro baritone, will give his first full length recital in Chicago in five years at the Auditorium theater next Sunday afternoon on the History and Enjoyment of Music series. The singer has promised to include the number constantly associated with him, "Ballad for Americans," on the program.

E. Power Biggs, one of the best organists playing in America today, will be heard in a recital at the Rockefeller Memorial chapel, 59th street and Woodlawn avenue, on Tuesday night at 8:15. Admission is without ticket.

Vital Problems of Land Grant Colleges Told

By the Rev. John Evans.

Presidents and administrative officers of educational institutions comprised within the Association of Land Grant colleges and universities, which concluded its 54th annual meeting last week in Chicago, had plenty of momentous problems to discuss. The growth in enrollment and faculty membership has brought these institutions into a prominent position in the educational field within recent years, and with that increase an accompanying responsibility. Comparatively small a few years ago, the student enrollment today is almost 300,000 and membership of the staffs exceed 30,000.

Agriculture was the highlight in discussions, especially now at the time of national defense, where agriculture may be regarded as in the first line. Claude R. Wickard, secretary of agriculture, told the association that the immediate task was to help agriculture get better prepared, psychologically and spiritually, and the call is for speed in spreading an understanding of democracy thru group discussion among farm people.

Discussing the plight of low income farmers as a major phase of the farm problem, Mr. Wickard said their particular work was to produce a better supply of food for their own families, and more of their own clothing, shelter, and equipment by their own endeavor.

"Land use planning," he said, "which is now in operation in more than a thousand counties, to be undertaken to a greater extent in thousands of other counties as the program develops, will be one means of making democracy work thru coöperative planning of agricultural programs county by county."

Dr. Carl C. Taylor, in charge of the division of farm population and rural welfare in the United States department of agriculture, was rather pessimistic as to the future of rural youth.

"Not more than one-half of the youths now living on American farms will find promising opportunity in agriculture during the next 20 years," he asserted. "Furthermore, unless definite steps are taken on their behalf the outlook will continue to be dark and can only be brightened by militant and consistent attacks both on the rural and urban fronts of the problem.

"Farm youth must have industrial training to prepare themselves for jobs off the farm. Nonfarm people and nonfarm enterprise must help support such training. Within agriculture itself more attention must be given to all types of nonprofit activities which will enhance standards of living and thus create more favorable opportunities for those youths who desire to farm and should be permitted to do so."

Dr. Taylor estimated that during the next 20 years 6,000,000 boys now living on farms will reach the age of 20. Assuming opportunities remain stationary, 35 per cent of these will be seeking opportunities elsewhere.

Dr. Karl Geiringer, one of Vienna's most distinguished musical scholars, has joined the faculty of Hamilton college, Clinton, N. Y., as visiting professor of music.

Good Morning!

You may never have taken James Cagney or Ann Sheridan very seriously before. But here's where they snap you into attention and make you like 'em in a G.B.W. [greatbig-way].

"City For Conquest" is a story of New York's east side and her tenement children. It is savage. It is tender. It's reckless and it's sane. And thru it all vibrates a steady heartbeat of sincerity.

This "Symphony of a City" [they play that toward the last] starts with beginnings. It speeds forth from their gutters toward their various fates a number of youngsters. . . . James is seen as a truck driver who turns boxer in order to win fame which shall serve as a rivet for his best girl's love and pride.

Miss Sheridan is the girl whose burning ambition is to become a great dancer.

Peggy is successful—and sorry! For, after a great deal has been said and done she discovers that nothing really means anything to her with Danny out of the picture . . . . And she—and circumstance—sidewipe Danny into the shadows for too long a time.

The boy meets tragedy and loves the girl too much to permit her to share any half crusts with him.

The finalé is tremendous—both in pathos and in punch.

Action moves swiftly and credibly. It snares and holds your engrossed attention. Frank Craven, in manner reminiscent of "Our Town," sets the tempo with a prose poem.

The co-stars work together in complete harmony. Each responds to the other's cues and the other's needs. . . . They're magnificent! . . . Supporting players, too, give grandly.

This film has all it takes in direction, "atmosphere," photography. Situations are unexpected.

"City for Conquest" is one swell movie—any way you look at it.

See you tomorrow.

'Liberty Jones'

If the proper cast can be found the Theater Guild will offer this season a work by Philip Barry called "Liberty Jones." It is an allegory about the dangers facing American liberty and requires songs and incidental music. Mr. Barry also is at work on a play for Katharine Hepburn, who did so well by his "The Philadelphia Story."

HICK COP

By CHARLES J. McGUIRK

(Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

"I WONDER," a very rich man asked his wife as he gazed over his chauffeur's shoulder at the husky policeman directing the season's first hot week-end's traffic flowing toward Pompton Lakes at the intersection of Route 10 and Main street in Crestmont, N. J., "what a traffic cop thinks about? He certainly keeps this traffic moving."

Well, the cop was Jerry Collins. He was 28 and he looked pretty good as he stood there keeping the chiselers and smart alecs in line. His 5 feet 10 and 176 pounds were in a blue uniform with a white Sam Browne belt criss-crossing his tunic, riding breeches and black puttees. He also wore a blue visored cap on his mop of black hair and it brought out the blueness of his eyes, the upthrust of his nose and the strength of his mouth and chin.

He was thinking that his vacation was only seven weeks away, the first two weeks in August. He was going to spend it in Point Pleasant. He would like to spend it there with Alice Neal. Alice was a teacher in the Crestmont Grammer school and he had been in love with her for 10 years. But lately things hadn't been going very well between them so it might be better to get the vacation together idea out of his mind. He did so by reviewing what was practically his lifelong ambition.

He wanted to be a good detective but there wasn't much chance to do that here in Crestmont. He had been a regular on the force only three years and Crestmont was small and only 20 miles from New York, just near enough to be blighted by the shadow of the great city so that it was more rural than a town half its size 300 miles farther in the sticks. Nothing ever had happened in Crestmont. Probably nothing ever would.

Still, as Dan often said, crime is where you find it. It could happen here as it had happened in towns even smaller and a real cop is a real cop, no matter where he is. Dan ought to know. He was Jerry's much older brother [there was 18 years between them] and a detective on the midtown squad in New York City, where you had to be good.

Dan always had been his idol. Jerry remembered that he almost died of loneliness when Dan moved into New York. And when he became a New York cop, Jerry decided he would be a cop, too. And here he was, wanting to be a detective because his big brother Dan was a detective.

His next thought was the one which had been in the back of his mind all the time. But he had been trying to dodge it because there was an unpleasant tail to it. The thought was that he had a date with Alice that night. The tail to it was Eddie Brest.

Eddie had everything that women like. He was big. He had brown eyes and wavy brown hair and a nice broad shouldered build. And he thought fast and he had a line. Even as a kid, Eddie could think fast and talk himself out of jams, leaving Jerry or some other dumb lug to take the blame.

Eddie's Invisible Income Fluctuates

Looking back at it now, Jerry couldn't blame him for that. It was a gift and the way he was made. But that is why he never had any use for Eddie. He had the confused idea that Eddie used people like him to carry his load for him. And thought them dumb for doing it. Jerry still thought so.

Eddie had left Crestmont 10 years ago after he had proved he couldn't hold a job by losing five in a row. To hear him tell it, he spent nine years living off the cream of the country, riding in airplanes and de luxe trains and staying at the best hotels. Anyhow, he had returned to Crestmont a year ago. He was wearing clothes that were flashy but good. He was driving a streamlined black convertible sedan with a gray top. And he settled down to live on an invisible income.

The income fluctuated. Sometimes, he had plenty of money. Sometimes, he was broke. When he was broke, he borrowed and he rarely paid his borrowings back. He hadn't changed a bit. He had just gotten bigger and older and better looking. He claimed he was a professional gambler and he did play the horses a lot. But Jerry had his doubts. Dan often told him that every cheap crook claimed to be a gambler because gambling was the only explanation except the real one for the sudden money that came their way. Jerry believed that Eddie was a—

He pulled his punch on that thought because he was fair and he knew he wanted to think Eddie was a crook because he was afraid he was beating his time with Alice. As soon as he came back, he made a play for Alice. Now Alice was splitting her dates evenly between him and Jerry. At this minute, she was out some place with Eddie in his car.

While he was thinking, he was absent-mindedly directing the traffic. So it was sheer instinct that made him shrill his whistle as Eddie's flashy car shot thru the red light even as he raised his hand on the stop signal. The car pulled over to the roadside and when the lights changed, Jerry walked toward it, getting madder and madder.

Eddie sat leaning against the steering wheel and grinning out of the side of his mouth. He was wearing a new gray suit and a panama straw hat. Alice sat beside him. She looked at Jerry and then away, staring straight ahead. Eddie said quickly, "Now don't ask me, 'Where do you think you're going, to a fire?' like every other dumb cop."

Jerry was going to ask just that so he got red and tried not to look at Alice. Then he got so mad he couldn't talk. He just pulled his book from his belt and made out a ticket.

"Hey!" Eddie said, talking fast like he always did when he was in a jam. "Are you giving me a ticket because I got to get a girl home to keep a date with you?"

"You went thru a red light," Jerry declared. "It's going to cost you two bucks."

"Yes," Alice agreed, "you were wrong, Eddie. If Jerry didn't give you a ticket, he wouldn't be doing his duty." She looked at Jerry with no expression on her face. "I'll pay the fine."

"No," Eddie grinned, "I'll only let you pay half of it. We couldn't let Jerry fall down on his duty."

The car slid away and Jerry stared after it till the traffic snarled and pulled him back to his post. It was only then he really saw Alice. But he saw her as plainly as if she was still before him. She was wearing a maroon sports suit which molded her nice figure. The tip of her little nose was sunburned. Her blue eyes were shining. Her black hair was windblown. She seemed prettier every time he saw her. She was sore at him for giving Eddie that ticket.

When Jerry got off duty three hours later, he hung around the station. He pretended to be studying the circulars containing photographs and descriptions of wanted criminals on the bulletin board. But what he really was wanting and dreading was a telephone call from Alice breaking their date for giving Eddie a ticket.

It didn't come. But Eddie did. He was still wearing the gray suit and Jerry had to admit it was a swell outfit. He walked up to Lieut. Davery and said:

"My car has just been stolen. I parked it on Taylor street in front of Regan's saloon while I went in for a drink. When I came out half an hour later, it was gone." Jerry watched and listened while Eddie described the car and gave its license and engine numbers. While the lieutenant was writing it down, Eddie looked around and saw him and grinned. "You slapped that ticket on me just in time," he said. "Boy, if I'd known what a holy joe you'd turned out to be, I wouldn't have tried to do you a favor."

"You always knew the kind I was," Jerry said, "like I always knew the kind you were. You were trying to get away with something and you didn't make it."

Detective Horton came in then. He was Crestmont's only plain clothes man. He was a heavy set man with cold gray eyes. He said:

"Beat it, Brest. We've got the description of your car. We'll notify you, if we find it."

"I'll never hear from you," Eddie sneered as he walked toward the door. "I only reported it to keep the insurance company from squawking when they have to pay off on it."

"I'd like," Lieut. Davery admitted, "to throw that fellow into a cell."

"Maybe you'll get the chance," Detective Horton said. "He acts like jail bait to me."

That night, Jerry drove Alice in his car to Sunrise Inn on Sunrise Lake, 45 miles west of Crestmont. His car wasn't an expensive one. It was the kind a cop who was on the level would buy. But it got him wherever he wanted to go. He was wearing a blue suit with a white shirt and blue tie. He looked pretty good, not as good as he did in uniform, but pretty good. But he wasn't thinking of that. He was thinking how pretty Alice was. She was wearing a print dress that brought out the blueness of her eyes and the cream of her skin and the blackness of her hair.

Sunrise Inn looks out over the lake. It is lighted by soft lights in which the white table cloths look like cloth of gold and the women like women you see in a nice dream. It was a clear, warm night and the moon was full and as big as a balloon. They stayed there till nearly 3 in the morning, dancing, and having a cool drink now and then and watching other couples having a good time.

Jerry waited for Alice to say something about that afternoon but she didn't mention it and he was just as glad because he was afraid, if they got talking about Eddie, he might get sore and tell her what he really thought of him. And then, a little after 2 o'clock, she asked:

"Jerry, why don't you like Eddie Brest?"

"I haven't anything against him," he lied.

"Then why don't you two get along?" she persisted. "I think more of both of you than of any man I know. You just don't understand Eddie. He has some fine qualities. He's generous and he's smart. I think, if you showed the right spirit, he would meet you halfway."

He almost laughed and then he got sore. Sure, Eddie was generous because he liked to show off, to be a big shot. And he didn't care whose money he did it with. And he was smart, too smart. He was just no good.

"Why are you so anxious for us to be friends?" he asked.

"Because he needs some one like you, Jerry," she confessed. "He does foolish things and picks the wrong kind of associates. Today, he took me to a nice restaurant in New York for lunch. Two men came over to our table. I didn't like them. There was something, I don't know, wrong about them. But they made a fuss over him. They played up to him and I could see him believing every word they said. It worries me. People like that might lead him into something he would regret."

"Are you in love with Eddie?" Jerry asked, tho he felt as tho some one had hit him under the heart when he asked it.

"Certainly not!" she flashed but color flushed her face and neck.

"All right," Jerry said. "I'm in love with you. You know it. Forget Eddie. He's no good. Nobody can change a wrong guy. You'll get into trouble trying. Will you marry me, Alice?"

"Not if you were the last man on earth, Jerry," she told him coldly. "Eddie said you were jealous of him. I didn't believe it. But you've just proved it with your own words."

"Well, Eddie is telling you what to think," Jerry blurted, so mad he couldn't see her, "and when a girl feels like that about a guy, she belongs to him. Are you about ready to go?"

"You're just what Eddie said, Jerry," she snapped. "Yes, I'm ready."

Driving home, Jerry tried to unsay what he had said. He looked at the moon, hanging low now and making the green world a shadowy place. He looked at Alice. She was staring straight ahead. He couldn't think of any way to square things. He had declared himself out and now he never could get in with her again. It made him feel lower than the moon.

LeBrun rose and struck Welch without warning. Jerry hit LeBrun.

It seemed only a minute before Crestmont loomed up, a dark blob in the moonlight. Suddenly, he couldn't stand the thought of losing her. He was starting to tell her so when they heard the roar of an engine. A car hurtled at them, flashed by. There were four men in it. The driver crouched over the wheel. The car was black and streamlined with a gray top. It must have been doing 90. Even as they looked back, it shriveled to a dot and disappeared. Alice clutched Jerry's arm.

"That was Eddie's car," she said. "I wonder where he's going."

"It looked like Eddie's car," he corrected her, "but I don't think he was in it. He reported it stolen last night."

"But it was Eddie's car," she insisted. "I'd know it anywhere. I wonder if anything's happened."

Jerry was wondering the same thing. But he didn't say anything. He drove her home, bade her a stiff "Good night" and went on to the police station. It was plenty busy. Capt. Forgan was calling his men in from their posts. Four masked robbers had cracked the Second National bank and gotten away with $15,000. The watchman had grappled with the biggest one and had been knocked unconscious. But when he fell he carried a piece of the robber's sleeve with him. It was gray. The watchman said he would recognize the man if he ever saw him again, despite his mask.

A black convertible sedan with a gray top. And a piece of gray cloth out of the coat sleeve of one of the robbers. It looked like Eddie Brest's car hadn't been stolen after all. It looked like he had just told the police in order to plant his alibi in advance. He was to be the man to question and Detective Horton went to his home to do that. Eddie was gone. At least, he hadn't been to his home all night. They broadcast a general alarm and a description of him over the teletype but he showed up by himself at his home at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, 13 hours after the robbery. He was pretty drunk.

Jerry was in the station when they brought him in. The first thing he noticed was that a big piece of cloth had been torn from the left sleeve of Eddie's gray suit. They took him into the captain's room and questioned him for an hour. When they came out, they booked him on the charge of robbing the Second National bank. Detective Horton told Jerry it was a dead open-and-shut case.

Eddie proved no help to himself. When reporters and photographers swarmed in, he wise cracked and posed for his pictures, looking as tough as he could. He said the dumb Crestmont police were framing him to cover their incompetence in letting their best bank be robbed. "I'm not worrying," he declared. "I'll beat this rap. I have a bulletproof alibi."

Alice Pays Visit to Eddie in Cell

Alice came to see him just before they took him to jail to await trial and talked to him a long time thru the bars of his cell. Jerry came off duty as she was leaving. He saw that she was pale and drawn and there were tears just back of her eyes. She looked at him and then away, as tho she didn't know him and she might as well have slapped his face. He stared after her, started to get sore and found that he was almost crying. "What a sap I am," he told himself savagely. "She throws me over for a crook and now I feel sorry for her!"

The story Eddie told at his trial was ridiculous. He testified that after he reported his car stolen, he went to New York where he met two men he had never seen at a bar. They went from the bar to a rooming house he could not now identify and joined in a drinking bout during which Eddie got drunk.

He awoke long after noon next day in a strange bedroom. He was alone. His clothes were scattered about the room. He noticed that the left sleeve of his coat was badly torn, but he thought he had done it while he was drunk. Nothing had been taken from his pockets. He got up and dressed and left the place without seeing any one. After having a couple of drinks, he took a train and came home, where he was arrested. No, he did not know the men with whom he had been drinking. He was half-drunk when he met them.

The watchman unhesitantly identified him as the robber with whom he grappled. The jury retired and returned within an hour with a verdict of "Guilty." The next Friday the judge sentenced him to 10 years at hard labor in the state penitentiary.

Jerry was glad. Eddie's sentence took him out of circulation and away from Alice. Maybe, in time, she would realize he had been a low number. It shouldn't take 10 years for even a woman to forget a guy like him. Jerry would give her a couple of weeks. Then, maybe, she would let him take her out again once in a while. Just before his vacation, he would telephone her, just as if Eddie had never happened.

Alice called him three nights before his vacation started. Could he come right out to her house? She had to see him. It was very important.

When he got there, she handed him a letter. She wanted him to read it before she said anything. The letter was from Eddie.

"Dear Alice," Eddie had written, "Will you please come to see me? I have been here three weeks now and I am nearly crazy. They lock you up at night and watch you all the time. It is lonesome. Alice, I should not be here because I did not have any part of robbing the Second National bank. I swear it on my mother. I know nobody believes me, not even you. But everything I said at my trial was the truth. I did get drunk with two men I did not know in a strange rooming house. I did wake up to find my sleeve torn. Can't you see I was framed? I do not know how, but I think those two men were part of it. But I do not know who would set them to do it unless it was that dumb

THE TORN LETTER

By EDWIN BALMER

INSTALMENT VII.

FOR a long time there was silence in the court. Probably it was less than a minute that the pause endured, but its effect was increased by the suddenness of the stop of the arguing voices.

Elaine Stranton, in the sixth row behind the prisoner, motioned Tano to bend toward her and she asked: "What is the matter?"

"Nothing is the matter, Mrs. Stranton," the Welsh girl whispered. "It is merely that the state—the prosecution—closed the direct examination of Flora List and has turned her over to the defense for cross-examination. I think Mr. Torpen did not expect that now; I think—"

"Who is Mr. Torpen?"

"The attorney there, Mrs. Stranton—for the defense."

"Oh! That peculiar, tall man!"

"Yes, Mrs. Stranton. I think Mr. Netley surprised him by giving him the witness. Now Mr. Torpen must take her and try to tear down her testimony."

. . . . .

When Tano had returned to the house, she had reported her words with the constable. "He said, Mrs. Stranton, that Miss June would be living at the Commercial house for no short time. I am to pack a bag for Miss June and have it at the hotel for her."

Tano had opened the trunks while Elaine instructed her what to select from them. Tano had finished packing the suitcase and she had gone to her room where she had remained for a few minutes. It was when she had returned to June's room that she had had the strange encounter which she had not yet reported to any one.

Mr. Melbourke was in Miss June's room; he was at one of her trunks—the largest; which was of wardrobe design and contained several drawers. He had opened the top drawer and was sorting thru the things in it. His back was toward Tano but she recognized him at once; she never mistook him for a thief, tho his stealth and furtiveness frightened her.

He finished with the top drawer and pulled open the next. This was one which Tano had emptied when packing the suitcase and it did not delay him. He pushed it shut and pulled out the third drawer which had not been unpacked. He plunged both hands into it and lifted out the soft, silk contents, shaking them and shifting them in his fingers.

Tano had not moved; she barely breathed; but he suddenly jerked about and saw her. He straightened and stood facing her.

"Hello, Tano! There you are!" he greeted her. "Where in the world were you! I came up to find you."

"To help me pack for Miss June?" Tano retorted, her pulses fast and tingling in her excitement—

"Partly," he replied coolly. "But partly to find something—to have you find something of mine for me, Tano."

"Something of yours in Miss June's things?" Tano asked him.

"One of my letters, Tano," he told her.

"A letter to Miss June?"

"Yes. She told me this morning she'd kept it and I was to have it back. She wanted me to have it back; so I came up here for it, expecting you—or Mrs. Stranton—would be here. Then I thought I'd look for it myself."

"Where is the letter — did Miss June say?" she inquired.

"She didn't—except that it was in a trunk. She promised to get it and give it to me after her trunks arrived. But she wasn't here; and you know she won't be here now for weeks, probably. Look thru the trunks for me, Tano—did you see a letter in the drawers you unpacked?"

"There's no letter in the trunk, Mr. Melbourke."

"You mean you took it out?"

"No. It's never been in the trunk."

"Then you know about it?"

"A letter from you, sir, which Miss June kept?" Tano returned, staring at him. What could there be about it, which excited him so?

She found his face close to hers, his eyes probing her; but she had told him the truth and he seemed to see it. He stepped back demanding: "What do you know about that letter, Tano?"

"I know Miss June kept it."

"Where?"

"She kept it in her handbag, sir."

"You mean she has it with her now?"

"I think so. I'm sure so."

What Has Gone Before

After thinking it over for three months in Europe, June Stranton has made up her mind to marry Ned Melbourke, wealthy young man about town. One of his love letters touched her so deeply all previous doubts of her love for him vanished. But instead of driving her home from the docks Ned tries to force June to elope with him and demands the return of the letter she treasured. They quarrel and her doubts rise again. Arriving home, she finds she has been called to jury duty on a murder trial. Lily Leam, the murdered woman, was an actress who rented a place near the Stranton estate. Geoffrey Wardlan, a research chemist, who lived in a cottage on her place, is being tried for her murder. Ned makes a scene in the courtroom trying to reach June and keep her off the jury, and afterward he sends her a note in her suitcase packed by Tano, the Stranton maid. The note is kept by the police matron, who finds it while searching the luggage. In court June listens to Flora List, Lily Leam's maid, testify about her mistress' love affair with Wardlan and of finding Miss Leam dead. Tano and June's mother are attending the trial.

"Look in the trunks."

"But it's never been in the trunks, Mr. Melbourke." And Tano saw that he recognized that this was the truth, too. He turned away from her and stood gazing out the window; and without another word to her, he left the room.

Tano had waited alone for several minutes; then she had picked up the suitcase which she had packed and she had taken it downstairs. Mr. Melbourke and Mrs. Stranton were together; he had been writing; he had an envelope which he sealed.

"Mr. Melbourke has something for Miss June," Mrs. Stranton had said to Tano; and Tano had started to speak but she bit her lips. They knew, both of them, that no communication with a juror was to be permitted. Tano put down the suitcase.

"I'm not to take it to Paignton?" Tano asked.

"No; that's all just now, Tano."

Tano went up to her room. She learned, later, that Mrs. Stranton sent a chauffeur with the suitcase to the Commercial house.

Mr. Melbourke had remained for dinner but he had left very shortly afterward. When Tano had attended Mrs. Stranton as usual, before going to bed, she had made no mention of having surprised Mr. Melbourke making a search thru Miss June's things. This was an item which Tano had decided to keep to herself.

. . . .

Now, at this pause in the trial, recollection of it mounted once more in Tano's thoughts.

"I do not see Mr. Melbourke," Mrs. Stranton, beside her, complained. "I do not see him anywhere."

The attorneys ended their silent consideration of each other. The tall lawyer for the defense turned from his opponent and spoke to the judge.

"Your honor, it is now well past noon. The cross-examination of this witness cannot be brief. Already she has been uninterruptedly on the stand for almost three hours. I therefore suggest an adjournment until afternoon."

Immediately the judge granted it.

For June, in the jury box, the pause had not been sufficient to restore her to her own affairs. For her, Lily Leam still lay unstirring upon the stones of the bed of the brook, her pale, lovely face in the moonlight, her body in the shadows; and at the lodge Geoffrey Wardlan, disheveled and aghast—either at his own guilt or because of his horror—dealt with the police and his accuser.

June Asks Cautious Questions of Cora

At the moment, June longed for nothing so much as to learn how he appeared to others. She started to speak to Cora Helmer before she remembered that one matter must not be discussed or indeed even mentioned by one juror to another—the prisoner on trial and the case against him. The prohibition seemed monstrous.

It proved impossible for June to regard the restriction when at last Cora and she were in their room at the hotel and Mrs. Lennon had gone to look in on Mrs. Enderberry and Mrs. Westcott in 412.

The abrupt, dramatic stop of Flora List's testimony had become intolerable; for June knew nothing beyond that point, never having read the accounts in the newspapers.

She thought of Tano; for Tano had devoured every word she had been able to find printed about the murder. Cora, too, must have read the papers. June glanced thru the open doors into the bathroom and into 412 and beyond. She sat down close to Cora.

"Did they arrest him right away?" June whispered.

Cora continued brushing her hair; she comprehended the whisper; and June saw that she knew the answer but was considering whether to give it. Almost imperceptibly, she shook her head.

"They—questioned—him—first."

"What did he tell them?" June whispered and Cora shook her head; but June cast off caution.

"Did he do it?" she appealed. "Do you think he did it?"

Cora pressed her lips very tight together.

"Can't you tell me this?" June pleaded. "Did they ever think anybody else did it? Did they ever arrest—or question—anybody else for it?"

Cora's lips parted to form one syllable which June could not hear but which she could see to be, "No." And immediately Cora arose and walked away, brushing her hair; so when Mrs. Lennon looked in, the constable found nothing to disturb her. "All ready for a very delicious lunch?" she inquired in her cheery way.

Today there was no discussion of places; everybody knew where to sit. In fact, each napkin was marked, conspicuously, with a name. Mr. Knapp, of Knapp's garage, pulled back June's chair with careful politeness and promptly sat down at her right. Mr. Frayley, the nice old nurseryman, timidly took his seat opposite. No one was at June's left elbow, for she had been given the place next to the head of the table; so, just around the corner, sat Mr. Ristine, the foreman; and at the other end of the long board was Mrs. Enderberry. Cora Helmer was three places away from June. Paul Rogell sat opposite Cora and Mrs. Westcott was beyond him.

"A friend, who asked not to be named, but a friend of some one on this jury," the forman proclaimed "has arranged that the hotel serve us with a special dessert for this meal. It's an extra, you understand —but without charge to us."

June found everybody looking at her and she realized that they assumed that the unnamed friend was hers. She, herself, considered whether this might be some gesture of Ned's; but she thought it was not. She was sure that it was nothing of her mother's, for, if her mother made any such gift it would be at least a dinner and an elaborate one; and it would not be given anonymously.

Mr. Knapp picked up the menu which was between June's plate and his own and he held it for her to read.

From all around the table, she heard other orders being given—similarly generous orders and agreed on with a gala air. Everybody was expectant and cheerful — everybody except Paul Rogell, who had given his order and sat straight and absent minded, taking no part in the general conversation.

Mr. Knapp noticed that June was watching Paul.

"He'll wake up in a minute," Mr. Knapp whispered to her. "You know what he's doing, don't you?"

"No," June said.

"Well, I know. I room with him; he's my roommate for this trial. Did you know that?"

"No."

"Well he is. So I've sort of got acquainted, Not well acquainted yet; but I know what he's doing now. He's fixing a tune in his head."

"A tune?"

"I mean, one of his own. He makes them up. Original—like Gershwin was. Music. Notes, you know. When he's in the room, he writes them down on paper. But he'd better be eating now. He shouldn't miss any of this meal. Say, that boy's thin. You ought to see him undressed. Looks to me he ain't been eating any too regularly where he was."

"Where was he?" June asked.

"Away," Mr. Knapp informed vaguely. "Out west. He just got home. You heard what he's been doing for his family?"

"No; I didn't."

"Well, he didn't tell me; but I'd heard about it, when he was away. He always sent something regular. Never missed a week; and I guess now it took something out of himself. Paul!" Mr. Knapp suddenly raised his voice and called across the table. "Paul! Soup's served. Snap into it."

Paul turned and looked at his roommate and at June. He smiled in his quick, likeable way and took up his spoon. Mr. Knapp made no further complaint against him for neglecting the good luncheon; but June, glancing across the table, observed that Paul alone of all the others failed to share the festive feeling in regard to the meal, even when the special dessert—it was an elaborate "baked Alaska"—was put before him.

They arose at last and returned to the bedrooms for a few minutes; then, under guard of the constables, they were escorted down to the street, formed in pairs for their little procession and marched again across the square. It was precisely 2 by the courthouse clock when June settled herself in her chair in the jury box with Cora Helmer at her right elbow and Paul Rogell at her left.

"It's in—what?" June surprised Paul with her whisper.

He looked down at her. "What's in what?"

"Your—symphony," she whispered more boldly. "You're starting one—aren't you—from the feelings of this trial?"

"What are the feelings—for you?" he asked very seriously, looking into her eyes.

"Such contradictory ones!" she said. "That celebration at lunch over baked Alaska; and now here—death and accusation."

He nodded. "Love—and violent death—and imprisonment and trial and merriment among the jurors. I'm doing it in D minor."

"It ought to be done in D minor," June agreed and drew away from him as a bailiff approached.

Flora List was stepping up on the witness stand and June watched her as she turned and stood before the witness chair, facing the courtroom and the prisoner she accused.

The tall attorney arose from the table of the defense; he looked back once at his client, the prisoner, and advanced toward the judge and the witness.

"You may sit down," he said quietly to Flora. "Please be seated."

She settled herself belligerently in the chair. "I am ready for your questions," she assured him.

"You told us," he began with her, after a brief consideration, "that you attended Miss Leam in a close, personal capacity for more than three years?"

"I did; as her personal maid."

"As Miss Leam's maid," the tall man proceeded imperturbably, "did you become familiar with her list of friends and acquaintances? I mean that, as her maid, you naturally learned who called upon her, with what men she went out or corresponded—in short, the men who knew her and showed her attention. There were some of these?"

"Men that showed Miss Leam attention?" Flora repeated. "Of course there was."

"Will you name some of them, please?"

Question Withdrawn After Objection

Mr. Netley jumped to his feet.

"I object, your honor. It is obvious that a person of Miss Leam's prominence and personal attractiveness must have enjoyed the friendship and acquaintance of a large number of people—professional acquaintances, men who played opposite her or who were interested in the productions; she must also have received perfectly proper attentions from many men of standing and position who could have no possible connection with the particular circumstances which we are now investigating. I submit that to have them mentioned—to drag in their names indiscriminately—is incompetent, irrelevant, and further would do grave injustice to innocent persons, and——"

"I withdraw the question," the tall attorney calmly interrupted, "since the state seems to agree that Miss Leam, during her lifetime, had other friends and possible intimates besides the defendant—an inference which scarcely was to have been gathered from the state's conduct of the examination of this witness."

"I object to counsel's remarks!" Mr. Netley protested, his face fiery red.

"I will rephrase the question," Mr. Torpen proceeded, "and confine it to the period of Miss Leam's residence at the manor. During that period," he referred to the witness, "did other men besides the defendant call at the manor?"

"Tradesmen called," Flora replied.

"Did other men besides tradesmen call?" Mr. Torpen continued patiently.

"Socially?" Flora asked.

"Yes; socially."

"No," Flora replied positively.

"Perhaps you had better explain to us what you mean by socially; what do you consider a social call?"

"A call is social," Flora replied readily, "when a gentleman comes to the door; and he is a friend of Miss Leam's; or at least she knows him and she will see him or send down a good excuse. Certainly it is a social call, if she has him in and entertains him."

"Certainly," Mr. Torpen agreed. "And no such social call was made by any one during the nearly five weeks that Miss Leam was at the manor?"

"Only by Mr. Geoffrey Wardlan; I've told you he was in the house, or somewhere around, practically all the time."

"And no other man came at all?"

"Not socially, I've told you."

"You have. . . . It was decidedly unusual—was it not—for Miss Leam not to have other callers?"

"O, she had other callers!" Flora flung airily. "Miss Dorothy Dunbarton came and stayed two days; Miss——"

"Men," Mr. Torpen reminded her.

"No men," Flora denied again.

"None?"

"Your honor!" stout Mr. Netley hotly protested to the judge, "the witness has twice answered that identical question. If counsel's purpose is to impeach the credibility of this witness, surely he is informed of the proper procedure."

"My purpose," the tall man replied, quietly, "is to clear up some slight but important confusion as to terms which, I feel sure, exists in the mind of the witness. I have asked her another question, which she has not directly answered; and with the state's permission, I will put it again. It was decidedly unusual—was it not —for Miss Leam not to have other men callers?"

His stealth and furtiveness frightened her.

"Not under the circumstances of last summer," Flora denied.

"Will you explain that?"

"Certainly. I've told you how Miss Leam took the manor so she could have a rest; and she meant it. She wanted a rest; she needed it. Then I've told how, after she moved in, that man—Mr. Wardlan—began practically to live at the house; and he didn't want anybody else around."

"You mean, that the failure of other men friends of Miss Leam to put in appearances was due to Mr. Wardlan's wishes?"

"O! It was hers, too. That's what I've been trying to tell you. She was crazy about Mr. Wardlan; and when he didn't want anybody else around, she didn't want them either. You see, she'd practically have had to invite anybody to come, for the manor isn't situated where anybody would be passing and drop in. Practically nothing was playing in New York; and everybody was out of town—in Connecticut or Nantucket or Maine or abroad."

"So, during all the time you were at the manor with Miss Leam you never saw any other man guest or caller come to the door except Mr. Wardlan?"

"That's so."

"Well—during those weeks, did you ever come upon evidence that Miss Leam was receiving attentions from another man surreptitiously?"

June felt Flora start.

"What do you mean," she said and began again, giving herself time, "what do you mean by—by surrept—that last word you said?"

"Surreptitiously," the tall man very quietly repeated. "That is secretly—behind other's backs—clandestinely—without others knowing."

For the first time Flora faltered. Her eyes went to Mr. Netley; and he was on his feet; but he had no other help for her.

"Who do you mean," Flora then demanded of the tall man, "who do you mean that Miss Leam—behind my back—was meeting?"

"I asked you whether you ever came upon evidence that she was meeting some other man—behind your back; for instance during some of those long evenings after she sent you away and you remained away for hours at a time?"

"Every time—every time she sent me away like that," Flora repeated more confidently, "she was with Mr. Geoffrey Wardlan."

"When you went away," Mr. Torpen emphasized. "What I am asking is whether you ever encountered any evidence that—after you had gone—another man than Mr. Wardlan had arrived and spent some hours with her."

"I didn't tidy up the rooms; that was Bianca's work, or Mrs. Danielli's."

"Answer the question, please."

"No; I didn't," Flora at last replied, too positively.

"Never?"

"Never."

The tall man abruptly swung about and walked to the table of the defense; he opened a leather brief case and, from among his papers, he took out a small object which he carefully unwrapped. He returned to his place in front of the witness and held up the object before her. June could not see it plainly; but it was metallic and shiny.

"Have you ever seen this before?" Mr. Torpen asked the witness.

"Perhaps I have."

"You may examine it to make sure," the tall man said and handed it to her.

"Yes; I've seen it," Flora finally granted.

"What is it?"

"A cigaret lighter; a very thick one."

"Where did you see it before?"

"Miss Leam had it; it was among her things."

"When you last saw it, you mean?"

"Yes."

"Do you remember when you first saw it?"

"Not particularly," Flora replied, with attempted indifference.

"Were you ever questioned by anybody concerning it?"

"By Bianca, you mean?" Flora asked quickly.

"I mean Bianca, if she questioned you about it. Did she?"

Flora, having taken too little time with her last answer, took much more before she said: "I guess she did."

"Do you remember the circumstances now?"

"Yes; Bianca had it in her hand when I came downstairs one morning."

"What morning, please?"

"How can I remember what morning?"

"Can you place it approximately—say within a week?"

"Well, I'd say it was before the Fourth of July."

"Go on, please."

"Bianca had it; she said she'd found it——"

Mr. Netley promptly and vigorously interupted. "I object, your honor, to what Bianca said about finding the lighter."

"Objection sustained," ruled the judge. "You may repeat, however," he instructed Flora, "what Bianca asked you about it."

"She asked me," Flora said, looking up at the judge, "if it was Miss Leam's."

"What did you say?" Mr. Torpen asked and Flora turned back to him.

"I said it wasn't. But I was wrong."

"I will ask, your honor," the tall attorney addressed the judge quietly, "that the conclusion, which the witness just expressed, be stricken from the record."

Defense Attorney Offers Lighter in Evidence

The judge so ordered it; and Mr. Torpen inquired of Flora:

"What, if anything, then passed between Bianca and you?"

"Bianca gave me the lighter."

"What did you do with it?"

Again Flora delayed her answer. "I showed it to Mr. Wardlan when he came in a little later."

"Did you ask him anything concerning it?"

"I asked him if it was his."

"What did he say?"

"He said it wasn't."

"Then what did you do with it?"

"I took it to Miss Leam when I went up to her."

"What did she do?"

"She took it from me. It was hers; she kept it."

"She told you it was hers?"

"Yes."

"But you had never seen it before this occasion?"

"No."

"And you were familiar with her possessions?"

"Yes; but of course she was sometimes getting new ones."

"Did she mention buying this lighter?"

"No."

"Did you ever learn from her how she came in possession of it?"

"What business was that of mine?" Flora flung back.

The tall man did not retort. He stepped forward and put out his hand for the lighter.

"You honor, I offer this in evidence and ask that it be marked . . ."

June saw it more distinctly — a small, graceful cylinder of enamel and platinum with an exquisite crested cap underneath which was, she knew, the lighting mechanism. It was a duplicate, apparently, of one she herself had bought in Paris late in June and sent to Ned for his birthday, which was on the thirtieth. The jeweler on the Rue de la Paix had just got it in, he said; it was new. And it was very expensive, she remembered; it wouldn't be duplicated. Probably this one wasn't really much like it; but she edged forward, trying to see its detail.

She felt a tap on her back and turned about. Mr. Knapp, who was seated directly behind Paul, bent toward her and whispered, "Want to see that, Miss Stranton?"

"May I?" June inquired.

"Of course. The jury can examine any exhibit in evidence at any time," he informed her, importantly; and he arose, attracting the attention of the judge.

"Your honor," Mr. Knapp said aloud, "may the exhibit, which has just been received in evidence, be shown to the jury?"

flatfoot Jerry Collins. He might do it because he hates me. But can't you come to see me? It is so lonesome here. Yours respectfully, Eddie."

"So now I framed him," Jerry grinned. "What am I supposed to do, get him out?"

"Yes," Alice said. "I went up to see him and I know he is innocent. I don't know how I know, but I do. Robbing a bank doesn't fit Eddie. He hasn't the nerve. There must be some one who knows he was telling the truth at his trial. I'm going to try to find him. Will you help me, Jerry? Please!"

Could you tie that? A rat blamed him for framing him and the girl he loved wanted him to prove the rat was innocent and get him out of prison so he could marry her. What a sucker he would be to help Eddie!

"O. K.," he said. "What do you want me to do?"

"O, thanks, Jerry!" she said, almost crying. "I believe that those two men I met with Eddie at lunch that day are behind all this. I believe now they were criminals. I thought, if they were, the New York police might have their pictures. I thought I could go over and identify them. Then you could find them and get the truth out of them."

Just a few hours' work, Jerry thought bitterly. He was to discover and convict two men whom Alice had seen just once. They, he supposed, would squeal on the other two. Even if their pictures were on file, how was he going to find them? And even if they were guilty, how was he going to prove it?

"I'll give it a try," he promised. "I'll call my brother, Dan, tonight and we'll go over and look at some pictures tomorrow."

"O, Jerry," she said huskily. "You're a dear! I knew you wouldn't let an innocent man suffer."

"Listen!" he said, getting sore. "If Eddie's innocent, I'm Joe Louis. I'm just going over to look at some crooks' pictures. A detective ought to memorize as many of them as he can. Maybe I'll be a detective some day."

They met Dan at police headquarters next day. He didn't look like Jerry at all. He was heavier and, of course, older. His eyes were gray and wise. He took them into the Bertillon room.

"We'll look over some of the boys who specialize in banks," he said. They had looked at only about 300 pictures when Alice cried:

"Here's one of the men we met—and here's the other!"

"Then you were in very smart company," Dan told her. "Those two are Frank Dion and Harold Metzer. They are the mop-up men in the John Welch mob which is composed of those two, Welch and Harry Le Brun. The four are the best in their line. If they're in the city, we'll locate them. As I understand it, Jerry, you don't want them picked up because a man is doing time for the job. You want to get a confession from them yourself. That should be about as easy as climbing up Niagara Falls on a ladder. But I'll do what I can. If we turn them up, I'll give you a buzz."

Two days later he telephoned Jerry.

"That mob is here," he said. "At the Stuyvesant hotel. It's just off Broadway. They hang out in Frankie's Bar and Grill a few doors away, because they are all horse players and Frankie runs a book.

"You'll meet a fat little man named Charlie Panther in Frankie's. He's a pigeon and he'll be looking for you. He'll send you in with them as Lester Ryan, a con man on the lam from Boston. Take it easy. Harry Le Brun, the big fellow, gets sore quick and he's careless with a gun."

Jerry didn't say anything to Alice. He was ready to go on his vacation so he packed his other suit, put on his blue and went—over to the Stuyvesant hotel where he got a nice room with a bath.

He dropped into Frankie's around 5 o'clock the next afternoon because he knew the race results would be coming in. It was a nice place. There was a long bar and four tables in one room and a wide opening leading to another room where there was nothing but tables. A few women were sitting at these with drinks before them, but they did not have the charm turned on. Jerry figured they had some money down and were waiting for the races to come in. There were three telephone booths in the rear of the barroom. Their telephones rang constantly and some one was always ducking in to answer them.

Frankie stood behind the bar. Not serving. Two bartenders tended the customers who stood thick at the bar. He was a slight man with reddish hair. He looked about 25 and probably was 20 years older. Jerry saw his two men as he entered. They were sitting with two others at one of the tables near the bar. They were drinking beer. One of these, a big man he figured was Le Brun, reminded him of Eddie Brest. He was big in the shoulders like him and slim in the waist. He looked sullen and mean. Jerry didn't like him on sight. The other, whom he took to be Welch, was tall and slight. He had blue eyes and a laughing face. He looked smarter than the others. Dion was blond and stupid-looking and almost as big as Le Brun. Metzer was dark and heavy set.

Jerry Makes Contact with Stool Pigeon

Jerry stood at the bar not far from the table at which the four were sitting and ordered a beer. While he sipped it slowly, he found a dark little fat man staring at him in the mirror over the bar. He recognized him from Dan's description as Charlie Panther, the stool pigeon. Charlie raised his eyebrows and Jerry nodded slightly and Charlie breezed over to him, his hand extended.

"Lester Ryan!" he greeted. "What are you doing so far from Boston?"

Jerry started and winced. He glanced over his shoulder and then he smiled wanly and reached out his hand.

"Hello, Charlie," he said and while he shook hands added in a whisper which carried to the four, "Not so loud on that name. It's hot. Call me Jerry Collins. I got to go now. See you later."

He went out, giving a pretty good imitation of a crook afraid of meeting a policeman. The ball was rolling. He knew that Charlie would now give out the "information" the four were supposed to get.

He could see they had received it when he went back to Frankie's at midnight and found the four sitting with Charlie at the same table. Charlie introduced them in turn. Le Brun was feeling his liquor.

"I overheard what you said to Charlie this afternoon," he said.

"Overhearing ain't healthy," Jerry told him, staring between his eyes. "I've seen guys awful sick from lead poisoning they got that way."

"Sit down," Le Brun laughed. "What'll it be?"

"If it's all right with you," Jerry said, "I'll have a beer."

But that was as far as he got. He saw them every day in the hotel lobby or in Frankie's. He drank with them on their invitation only. He did not want to appear too eager and neither did they. A week later, he sat in his room thinking it over. He'd picked up some information. Le Brun drank too much and when drunk was quarrelsome. But he never talked. Dion was as stupid as he looked. Metzer was ever watchful. Welch, he was sure, was the brains of the mob.

The four were well supplied with money and Jerry suspected that they were living off the proceeds of the Crestmont robbery for which Eddie Brest was doing time.

He tried to tell himself it would be better if he failed to learn anything. Then, Eddie Brest would be out of the way and Alice, in time, might turn to him again. But the fever of the hunt was on him again. He wanted to prove himself a good enough detective to gather evidence to convict these men who, he was sure, had framed Eddie. He needed help so he went out and called his brother, Dan, from a booth.

"I'll speed things up," Dan promised when he heard his story. "Try to be with them in Frankie's at 5 o'clock this afternoon. Pick up any leads I throw out and don't be surprised at anything that happens."

So Jerry was sitting with the four and Charlie Panther when Dan walked in that afternoon and ordered a beer. Sipping it at the bar, he seemed to discover the group for the first time. He came over to the table.

"Hello, boys," he grinned, but his eyes were hard as they took in Jerry. "Who's the new playmate, a punk you're breaking in?"

"Ask him, copper," Le Brun rasped.

"All right, I will. Who are you?" he barked at Jerry.

"What is this?" Jerry asked. "Russia?"

"It might be," Dan said, and smacked Jerry across the mouth with the back of his hand.

Jerry came out of his chair and started a left at Dan's jaw, but Welch grabbed his arm.

"Don't start anything," he whispered. "We're all hot!"

Jerry sat down again, wiping his mouth with his hand.

"Listen, punk," Dan snarled, "I could pick you up and throw you away for consorting with criminals. But I'll give you a break. Beat it!"

Jerry beat it. He went up to his room, jubilant and wild with excitement. Welch practically had admitted that they had pulled a job. If Jerry was figuring right, the four would soon come up with detailed information. He sent a bellboy out for two quarts of Scotch and a quart of gin. He had room service bring up the other ingredients and beer. The supplies had arrived and he was on his second Scotch and soda when he opened his door to a knock and found the four standing there.

"Come in, criminals," he grinned. "I'm throwing a party."

The party went on and on with plenty of replenishments of liquor. At midnight, Jerry stopped even pretending to drink. He sat watching and waiting. But nothing was said until Le Brun, ugly and quarrelsome from the liquor he had drunk, began to pick on Welch.

"I want some money now," he growled. "Why should you handle the money and dole it out? Or why should you run this mob? I doped out the last job. O, I admit I didn't find Crestmont and that you cased the bank and mapped out the getaway. But who found the getaway car and the sucker I framed so he's on ice for doing the job? I did. Who sent Dion and Metzer in to get him drunk in a rooming house because I figured he and I were the same size? I did. And who took his suit to wear on the job? Me. And that was a masterpiece because when the watchman grabbed me, he took a piece out of the sleeve. And that piece and his own car put the sucker away for 10 years. Listen, Welch. I'm heading this mob from now on. Give me some dough. Quick."

"I haven't got any on me," Welch told him.

Le Brun rose and struck Welch without warning and Welch went over backward, chair and all. Jerry hit Le Brun. He went down. As he hit the floor he grabbed for his gun and shot Jerry in the shoulder. The other two ran out of the room as Jerry jumped on him. They struggled for the gun until a lucky punch that Jerry threw caught Le Brun on the point of the jaw. He lay still. Jerry grabbed the gun and held it in his hand. Welch got up slowly from the floor and slipped a small, thin key into Jerry's hand.

"This fits safety deposit box No. 2085 in the Actors' National bank on Broadway," he said. "It's the haul from the Crestmont robbery. Le Brun don't take this mob over and he don't get any money till I get ready to give it to him. You're bleeding."

Jerry pushed Welch out of the room and double-locked the door behind him. Le Brun was getting up and Jerry motioned him to a chair with the gun, picked up the receiver and called Dan.

"We broke it, Dan," he yelled. "Bring some cops and a stenographer. Mr. Le Brun is going to tell us a story. Do you talk, Le Brun, or do I have to coax you?"

"I'll talk," Le Brun said wearily.

Jerry read all about it in the newspapers as he sat with his arm in a sling on the beach in Point Pleasant where he had gone to spend the five days that remained of his vacation. Eddie was to be released soon and he was supposed to be the hero who, single-handed, had freed an innocent man from prison and captured the four who had framed Eddie and were now on their way to take his place. He should have felt pretty good.

But he didn't feel good, at all. He felt low. He knew he really wasn't a good detective. He was just a hick cop. It was Dan who had handled the case and helped him to break it. Besides, it looked like he was going to stay a bachelor for the rest of his life.

He was a sap. The law had his rival salted away in state's prison for 10 years. All he had to do was wait and get the girl he had loved all his life. But what does he do? He digs up the guys who framed his rival so he can get out of prison and marry the girl. He groaned and became conscious of a shadow which had been between him and the sun for a long time. He looked up and behind and saw Alice.

"Jerry, you were wonderful," she said.

"I didn't do it," Jerry growled. "Dan figured all the moves."

"I don't mean about finding the criminals. I mean giving up your vacation to prove Eddie Brest innocent, even when you didn't like him."

"I gave up more than my vacation."

"No, you didn't, Jerry. You know I love you! If I ever thought I'd lose you, I'd see that they threw Eddie Brest back into prison. Only, Jerry, you should never talk when you're angry."

"I know," Jerry agreed. "When will we get married?"

"Well," Alice pointed out, "you still have five days' vacation left. Why don't we use them for a honeymoon?"

Elegance the Rule in Attire for the Opera

By Rea Seeger.

There is no startling clash of color contrast in the collections of formal fashions successfully launched in time for the opera season. Elegance of fabric, subtle accent of color, and great distinction of line and silhouette mark every creation. This year, as never before, there is a revival of exquisite handwork, beaded bands, and motifs, restrained beauty in the applique decorations and expertly seamed streamlines.

Silk jersey is a notable success. In soft, benevolent blues, in subtle off-shades of pinks and misty grays, this fluid fabric is worked with the same skill a sculptor works in clay. Most of the jersey creations are swathed to reveal the figure lines. Each season brings a new mastery of these plasterlike folds of the fabric. Each season there are fascinating new shades and off-colors, as well as the more brilliant colors. Dinner dresses of jersey are topped with thin wool, dress parade jackets with long, fitted sleeves, the gowns under the jackets deeply cut for the décolletage, shirred intricately in the bodice top, and some have the new Grecian line to the shirred sleeve sections that fall well down over the shoulders. Front shirrings still predominate in the clinging skirts, and waistlines are defined at the normal beltline.

When bouffant gowns are featured, the yardage reaches an all-time record for inches. Net, tulle, chiffon, and other ethereal fabrics are gathered, shirred, plaited, or managed with folds of the material to make the glamorous, swirling skirts so effective on any ballroom floor. Sequins do shimmer and twinkle, but it's a more discreet showing than formerly. Rhinestones twinkle like glowworms thru an evening mist on white, on pastels, blacks, and brilliant shades.

A new evening color that is particularly lovely this season is gray. Sophisticated gray jersey, chiffon-thin wool, tulle, chiffon and net, and plum skin-thin silk crêpes are available in several flattering shades of gray. This gray is one of the most dramatic backgrounds for jewelry. It's even more effective than dull black. Gray satin, gray wool, and gray crêpe are effective foils for any jewels.

The most exciting gala occasion coats are of wool, stunning greatcoats of brilliant colored wool, such as emerald green, scarlet, café au lait, white, sapphire blue, violet, tobacco brown, and dull black. These are cut and fitted with the same swank as a tailored military greatcoat, with deep cavalier cuffs, capacious pockets, flaring, high collars, wide lapels with cinched in beltlines. Next to the coats in fashion popularity are the enveloping capes that sweep the floor. Next, the old-fashioned opera capes that swing well down below the hipline, and the regal long coats and capes of luxurious fur, sable, black-brown mink, superflattering blue fox, and ermine. Fur shawls also are new. So are evening capes and coats of leopard, and the priceless few coats and wraps of chinchilla. With all these beautiful evening collections, the most opulent and colorful of winter seasons is about to reach peak interest.

Sketched are some of the available finds, with an especially new interest or trend for unusual color contrast and new streamlines. Also illustrated, the black and white foils of the correct evening fashions for men, dress and evening clothes of impeccable tailoring and flawless fitting. The midnight blue evening clothes with white tie, white waistcoat; the new cut of the evening coat [tails] that hugs the figure, covers the last half inch of the white waistcoat; the luxurious length of snowy white mufflers; the slant of a handsome high hat; the gleam of spotless white gloves, and the expanse of a dazzling white shirt, all these make the superb masculine dramatics for any ball or evening costume of the women. Chicago men are "dressing" for the occasions, and any gala event is something to witness these nights of opera. For specific information, call Superior 0200.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

We are told now that proper humidity in a room is the vitamin A of winter air conditioning. If you would modernize your existing steam or hot water radiators in house or apartment there are automatic humidifiers for installation on all radiators except in bathroom and kitchen. Twin evaporators are built of copper and concealed in the loops of radiator sections. A constant water line is maintained and evaporation takes place only when radiator is throwing off heat and expanding air. These units are moderately priced and come with full directions on how to install them.

This is the month to check on the tight calking of window and other joints around your house, as insurance against fuel loss and also against water leakage that can stain the decorations on the inside of your walls. There are compounds which have the consistency of soft putty but never become quite hard. Tint them to match any surrounding color by using color-in-oil or get them already colored.

* *

If certain radiators in your house fail to heat up quickly or if your whole system seems to lack its one-time pep, there is a small but powerful little electric pump which will mechanically force the circulation of water to all the radiators. Under control of an aquastat, the boiler is kept properly filled with hot water, and when the thermostat sends out a call for heat, the small pump forces it immediately to the radiators.

Boys Suggest Technique of Kiss Refusal

By Doris Blake.

[Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

A short time ago we solicited from our men readers, at the request of interested girls, an opinion on how to refuse a kiss without losing the friendship of the young man proffering it, and on how to save him from the embarrassment a flat and final "no" involves. In response we have, first, "Fraternity Man," with an answer and, along with it, a word or two to young women that may interest them. He writes:

"Recently you had an article concerning the correct way for a fair maiden to refuse to kiss without any embarrassment, and you asked for a man's advice. I imagine you were serious about this, so I am offering my services. Yes, Miss Blake, I am a man, not an old man, but then again, not too young. I believe I am representative. Some people think I'm a playboy, others think I have a level head with good sense, and still others think I have no head. But for your purposes, Miss Blake, I believe I'm representative.

"First, I wish you and your readers to know that there is absolutely no greater blow to any man's ego than a woman's refusal to kiss him. It makes the man feel like a small boy who has been told to go to bed in front of people whom he is trying to impress with his adult intelligence.

"Secondly, Miss Blake, it is invariably the girl's fault that the lover will even attempt to kiss her. No man likes to kiss a woman whom he knows will not coöperate, or at least relax at the point in question. Therefore, he will not attempt to kiss her unless he is fairly sure of the conquest. He certainly will not be at all sure unless the woman gives him some sort of encouragement beforehand. Now I am talking about the normal, level-minded man. I am sure that a young woman would not even go out with one who does not come up to at least this standard.

"So you see, Miss Blake, that when it comes right down to earth, the woman is really at fault. It is my opinion that virtually all women have, in their makeup, the desire to make all men, and I do mean all, look at her and desire her. She will try all sorts of schemes to do this, her clothes, her conversation, and her actions in some way or other. I also think that a fair maiden would think and feel as tho she were slipping if men did not want to kiss her. But when it happens, the girl grows indignant, tries to feel shocked, or just slaps.

"Surely a girl could be honest with her 'date.' If she has no romantic designs on him, it is easy to make him know that without telling him point blank. Really, Miss Blake, most of us are capable of taking a hint, and a hint is a lot better than an abrupt refusal of a kiss. Another thing, if a girl goes out with a fellow just to get out and have a date, she ought to be shot. It may be 'platonic,' true, but usually platonic friendships between maidens and young men are just a term and mean nothing more. Exceptional cases, yes, but very few. So, girls, if you go out with a fellow a few times, and go out with him because you like him, you can expect a kiss or two. If you feel as tho he isn't nice enough to kiss, why lead him on? Why not try some one else? After all, it is a perfectly normal thing for two people who are attracted to each other. In other words, don't bring him to the point where you know he wants to kiss you, just to prove to yourself you can do that. Be fair and you'll be appreciated.

"Fraternity Man."

From a second man, "One Who Knows," comes the following:

"You wanted to know a boy's version of how a girl should refuse a kiss. Well, I think that the girl should put up a little struggle and then, with a wry smile on her face, say, 'No. Please, no. Not now! When she says that to you, you are less embarrassed than if she just said a plain 'no' in a defiant manner.

"One Who Knows."

Pretty Circular Doily

By Ellen Bruce.

This unusual, crocheted, circular doily was created especially to be used under salad plates at bridge luncheons. It is lacey and open-work, composed of wheel and cluster designs which lend themselves successfully to lovely crystal plates. Mercerized crochet cotton is suggested for the more formal type of doily, while carpet warp may be successfully used when doilies are to be employed under fiesta ware.

Fashions Heed Times; Dress for the Home

By Bettina Bedwell.

The troubled madness of this tumultuous world, when chaos looks distressingly near to every one, seems to have affected fashions chiefly in adding the din of raucous claims of designing greatness to the general hullabaloo. But the position of woman, and her approach to clothes in this momentous period, is something else again.

"Man's castle" looms big as a tranquil retreat right now, and woman in that castle becomes more significant to her world, and probably all the world, than for a long, long time. A quiet, distinguished woman, mother of sons and daughters, put it this way to me: "I want to look nicer than ever this winter, so that my children will want to come home and to bring their friends. So I'm paying more attention to my dresses for the house than to anything else."

I feel that looking nice at home, even if it's just a hall bedroom, is as important to your personal charm and dignity as sun is to flowers, and if there are people around you there you can do bigger things than you may dream to buck up their spirits and keep their faith going. And when fashions come home, I find, they are a lot less hectic and stringent. Housecoat, negligee, and hostess gown sections of our emporiums of dress spread themselves to take care of all types of woman in all grades of home. To keep looking like the top of the morning any girl or woman needs at least three strictly home gowns, and these may be as varied as her home castle atmosphere allows:

The kind of robe you put on the first thing in the morning and the last thing at night, which may merely go to the bathroom and dip into the kitchen to set the percolator going, is the first of the home brigade of fashions. And I feel strongly that this type of robe has to be tailored and very simple to look as attractive as it should. Color and material are of top importance, and for most of us flannel or another smooth wool is what's needed. Generally, it seems to me, pale, dusty colors are not so attractive in this robe in winter as they are in summer. Rich shades, or gay, or neutral colors with bright details, guarantee an attractive beginning and end to your day. There are also charming flowered, quilted robes with light backgrounds, but I advise against them unless you're the kind to keep them impeccably fresh every day, which means having two to allow for frequent cleaning. Such robes are classics, like the shirtwaist dress, and the less they are made to follow fashion fantasy, the better, unless such fancy keeps them easy to get in and out of and trim looking.

Many home women, doing their own work, will follow up the robe with house dresses, which may be the launderable kind thruout the year, and in justice to the family must be attractive in color and lines. I claim there's no dress more charming than a freshly laundered pretty house dress, and no garment with more man appeal than a charming apron. A cover-all apron over a simple dark dress is what lots of women find most practical for home work.

Girls who go out to business or professions, of course, have no particular house dress problem, but the home gown, and the so-called hostess gown, the lounging pajamas, or the negligee are something they need, as does the home woman.

Saves Good Money. No Cooking.

This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective remedy for coughs due to colds. It's so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a compound containing Norway Pine and palatable guaiacol, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. It's no trouble at all, and takes but a moment. No cooking needed.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough remedy, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

It's High Time to Be Baking the Fruit Cake

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1940: By The Chicago Tribune.]

It's high time to be baking fruit cakes if they're to have time to ripen before Christmas. Select the fruit and nuts for them carefully, for you can't expect a cake made from poor quality ingredients to have the flavor you like. Much depends upon the fruit. I feel that it is better to buy the candied fruits whole or in large pieces and to cut them up at home than to buy a ready-made mixture.

Fruit which is already cut up is much more convenient to use, to be sure, but often it has had time to dry out and doesn't carry as much flavor as it should. Also, a prepared mix may be overloaded with citron or some other single fruit. Use a strong pair of kitchen scissors to cut up the fruit, and prepare all of it the night before the cake baking to save time and energy.

Since fruit cakes scorch easily, they must be baked at a very low temperature. Recipes usually call for a temperature of from 250 to 350 degrees. The more fruit there is in a cake, the lower the temperature, as a rule. A really fruity holiday cake isn't safe with more than 300 degree heat, and 275 is much better.

If the cake pans are lined with waxed paper or greased heavy brown paper the cakes are even better protected.

When large pans are used, or when there is much more fruit than batter, the baking period called for may be three hours or longer. Sometimes it is a good idea to steam the cakes for the first half of the cooking period, so that they won't dry out too much. To steam them, cover with brown or waxed paper and tie the paper around the top of each cake. Place in steamer on a rack, and keep the water in the utensil boiling constantly.

After fruit cakes have baked and cooled, they should be wrapped closely in parchment or wax paper and then placed in a crock or metal box with close-fitting cover. The container should be as near the size of the cake as possible.

If you wish to pour brandy or wine over your cakes as they "ripen," be careful not to use too much, or they may become soggy. Spoon the brandy or wine over the surface of the cake at intervals of a week or longer, and do not use much more than a tablespoonful at a time. Fruit cakes look prettier when they are glazed, so if you plan to make them for Christmas gifts you'll probably want to give them a shiny coating. The glaze also fixes nuts and pieces of fruit which are used for decoration. Almost any kind of fruit pulp may be used for a glaze, but apricot is considered choice.

Usually apricot glaze is made by combining a cup of cooked apricot pulp [sieved] and 1½ cups sugar, and cooking the mixture slowly to 240 degrees, or until sticky. While the fruit is hot, a thin coating is spread over top and sides of the cakes, and fruit pieces and nuts are pressed into the glaze. When the first coating of glaze cools and dries, a second coating is given, over the decorations. This treatment usually is saved until about a week before the cakes are to be used. After glazing, fruit cakes must be wrapped lightly for storing. If the container has a very close fitting cover it may not be necessary to wrap them at all.

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1940: By Ely Culbertson.]

The national self-rating bridge examination, which recently ran in my daily column, brought to light many interesting facts concerning the bidding habits of the nation's players. Perhaps the most striking of these revelations is that seven players in ten are what might be called "offensive-minded." By this I mean that apparently their main objective at all times is to go game, and that the idea of defense, even when it involves punishing the opponents to the tune of hundreds of points, is of distinctly secondary importance in their eyes.

I must bewail this attitude. A player should have only one objective at bridge and that is to get all the points possible out of each individual hand. Even if a grand slam can be bid and made, it is not inconceivable that more points can be gained by doubling the opponents, hence tho it is fitting and natural to regard a game contract as a normal goal, the defensive side of the game must also be kept firmly in mind.

The reason for the emphasis most players put on offensive bidding as against doubling the opponents is, I believe, the fact that a large proportion of them received their early training at auction bridge. They have never gotten used to the vulnerability feature of contract. Thus, it is the most common of all experiences to see a nonvulnerable team climbing merrily up to a game contract when, as a matter of fact, they could have doubled the overbidding vulnerable opponents and collected twice as many points as the nonvulnerable game is worth. I was particularly interested in the answers to Question 7 of the national examination, which was:

Only East-West vulnerable. The bidding proceeds:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 diamond | 1 spade | ? | |

You are South and hold:

♠ A J 9 7 ♥ Q 10 4 ♦ J 6 ♣ K 10 8 3

What call do you make?

The correct answer was that South should double one spade for penalties. And I went on to say, "The vulnerability conditions make this the outstanding call. You should be able to collect many hundreds of points from the vulnerable opponents if your partner can leave in the double."

To my sorrow, about 60 per cent of the answers sent in to me gave one no trump as the bid South should make. Another 15 per cent or so were more aggressive and answered with two no trump. There were scattered votes for two clubs and other calls, and more than a handful for the remarkably conservative course of passing. Only 12 per cent escaped demerits by giving the correct answer.

Bridge is probably the most democratic of all games, but nevertheless, majority opinion does not rule. This problem was submitted to 15 nationally known experts and every one of them agreed that the double was South's outstanding best action.

I think that there are probably two separate and distinct reasons for the reluctance of players to choose the double in a situation of this type. First, I strongly suspect that they pay very little attention to the vulnerability conditions, or attach little importance to the fact that the opponents are vulnerable. They do not realize that a game [which is certainly all they can look forward to with this hand] is worth only about 400 points to them, whereas a two trick set of the one spade doubled contract is worth 500 points, and a three trick set, 800 points. Second, there is the sad fact that most players do not regard a penalty double at the level of one or two in the proper light. They look upon all doubles as immutable. Hence it is only normal, I suppose, that they should be extremely sure of their ground before they make a penalty double. They seem to forget entirely that they have a partner! In such bidding as that mentioned above—namely, one diamond by North, one spade overcall by East, double by South—if West passes, North does not have to accept the double blindfolded. South's double, tho of the penalty variety, is not an absolute command for North to keep quiet—it is a simple statement that from South's point of view, more points can be collected against one spade doubled than in an offensive contract. North is not only at liberty to contradict South; he is obligated to do so if he has reason to believe that one spade cannot be decisively defeated. Obviously, the best "reason to believe" North can have is that his own hand is quite unsuited to defense against spades. North may have a singleton or void in spades; he may have an abnormally long diamond suit; or he may have a freak two suiter—any of which may be reason for his taking out the double. But whatever North's choice may be, the vital fact to remember is that he does have a choice!

I have mentioned the idea of average players about the "immutability of doubles." It is not difficult to understand why they feel this way. Once upon a time their partner opened the bidding with one heart, and a vulnerable opponent, who had forgotten he was vulnerable or who was just simple, overcalled with one spade on a bust. There they sat with 150 honors in spades and a few other tricks. They doubled in no uncertain tone, only to have their dear partner, when the bidding got around to him, blithely take out the double. Afterwards it was discovered that the vulnerable opponents would not have taken a trick and that the consequent penalty would have been 2,000 points! The fellow that doubled never got over this and from that time on has gone to some pains to inform partner that his penalty doubles are sacred.

Unfortunately, however, we cannot run with the hare and hunt with the hounds. You can't tell partner that your penalty doubles are absolutely sacred and not to be disturbed under any circumstances, and at the same time invite his coöperation. One or the other, but not both. Consequently, we must make up our minds which of these two philosophies pans out better in the long run. The opinions of all authorities with whom I am acquainted is that the coöperative system is infinitely superior. The reason for this is very simple. In a fairly good game you do not often get the opportunity to double an opponent when you are so "loaded" with trumps that you require no coöperation from partner. Hence, it is not worth while to place this construction on a double. Far more often, the situation will arise in which we have a few tricks in the opponents' trump suit, plus a scattering of honors outside. Our partner's opening bid has already informed us that he has some defensive values; the only thing we must now determine is whether those values are so placed as to constitute reasonably good defense against the opponent's overcall. Thus, in the final analysis, a well considered penalty double involves the question to partner, "Can you stand [coöperate with] this double?"

This is the most sensible construction to place on such a penalty double as we are analyzing, for one excellent reason: usually, the largest penalties can be collected when both defenders have a few trumps, rather than when one has many and the other none. If both defenders must wait for a terrific holding in the opponents' suit before doubling a low overcall, they will lose countless opportunities to inflict severe punishment on what may be a neck stretching bid.

Let your watchword be: "The opponents shall not get away with murder!"

South's contract is six hearts. West leads the spade king. Can the slam be fulfilled against the best defense; if so, how?

Solution — Twelve tricks can be made against the best defense, if declarer makes the right play at the very first trick. He must ruff the opening lead in dummy, even tho he has the singleton ace. He now leads a trump, and when East "fails," wins with the ace. Then he throws West in with the trump king. If West exits with a spade, it is ruffed in dummy while declarer discards a diamond or a club. Declarer then cashes the ace and king of the suit from which he has discarded, and ruffs a third round, thereby establishing a discard for his only remaining loser.

If West exits with a diamond [or a club] he presents declarer with four diamond [or club] tricks.

Note what happens if declarer throws off a diamond [or a club] from dummy on the opening lead. Now when West is put on lead with the trump king, he will exit with a diamond, and declarer will have to concede a club trick.

Home Owners' Queries

Chicago—[To the Home Building Editor]—We have a long, darkish game room in our basement. Is there any way of treating walls to make room seem less dark, and not quite so long? James C.

Answer: Paint the two side walls a chalk white and then pull ends a bit closer by painting them a darker color. One such basement seen recently had end walls painted a fawn shade. Room was much brighter by this treatment.

Chicago—[To the Home Building Editor]—Can a wood floor be surfaced with concrete? We have a porch floor and are considering such a procedure. Mrs. G. T.

Answer: Depends on whether porch floor is strong enough to support extra weight. It can be done but get some expert advice. Porch floor may need additional supporting posts.

Chicago—[To the Home Building Editor]—We have moved into an apartment where the chrome plated fittings in kitchen and bathroom have been neglected for some time. Plain soap and water doesn't do the work. What can we use? K. L.

Answer: Saturate a cloth with crude oil and go over them. Then wash and polish dry. After that soap and water should keep them fit.

Springfield, Ill., [To the Home Building Editor.]—Will linoleum that is faded take paint coats? What solid color won't show footprints?

HELEN D.

Answer: Apply two coats of good grade floor paint or floor enamel. A solid color has a tendency to show footprints. You can get around this by stippling. Stipple after your ground color is thoroly dry.

Aurora, Ill., [To the Home Building Editor.]—How can the natural color of copper be retained? Is there any way to give copper a deep brownish color? JAMES F.

Answer: To retain natural color, finish with two coats of spar varnish. To give it a brownish or bronze color, apply repeated wipings with boiled linseed oil. Have it thoroly clean first.

The Lady of the House

Most always when I make plain yeast bread I think of the big fragrant loaves mother used to take from the oven and make them shiny by brushing the hot crust with a little water.

The heel of such a loaf, spread with freshly churned butter and a thick layer of blackberry jam, or maybe apple butter, along about the time we came home from school on a chill November day, is something I still get pretty homesick about. If I were really a "littry lady," as Aunt Ella says, I should say "the thought awakes within me a deep and haunting nostalgia." But this was long ago, in the days of simpler living and simpler speech. The Indians brought the berries down from their northern reservations—and, well, "homesick" is the word.

And what's more homey than plain bread? Or a truer symbol of hospitality? The word lord is a contraction of the old Anglo-Saxon hlaford, from hlaf, bread or loaf, and ford, to supply or give out; the term lord, therefore, means the giver of bread. English noblemen used to keep open houses, into which strangers and vassals might enter and eat as much as they choose; so they were called lords, or givers of bread.

Since ancient times bread has been such a fundamental thing. Did any one ever live who did not relish it? By a kind appointment of providence grains for bread grow in every country and climate. Remember Pharaoh's dream "that seven ears of corn [wheat] came up from one stalk, rank and good?" Among my treasures there is a little old book printed in 1832 and illustrated with quaint engravings. One of these shows a species of wheat which grew in Egypt at that time, and really bore seven ears on one stalk. Others show the ancient loaves, or cakes, and the primitive ovens in which they were baked.

By some strange irony, when I took my own loaves out of the oven the other day, a young man came to my door and told me that his employers are bread specialists. They make 23 different kinds. And I was thinking of a plain wheaten loaf and homemade butter and jam, in a big warm kitchen, with mother waiting for us. So I just said: "Well, I'm a kind of a specialist in bread myself."

Looking for some quilt patterns the other day I came upon an old copy of "Needlecraft," a journal published by the Manchester [England] School of Embroidery, describing and illustrating the picture embroidery taught there long ago. It was so interesting I stopped to read.

The foundation material in this work is colored linen, dyed in correct shades to obtain the various natural effects required—sky, water, trees, mountains, roads, bridges, buildings, etc. Upon the linen of the color of the predominating feature—sky, lake, or forest—are appliquéd the pieces for the other parts of the design. When all the appliqués are in position, the shadings of the design and all the various outlines and shapes are drawn in, making the whole appear somewhat like a colored drawing.

Then comes the embroiderer's opportunity for display of artistic skill, as it is the manner in which all the fine detail is worked out that determines the merit of the piece.

Under the trade-mark of two Roman brigs are shown such fascinating design as: The Old Mill, Rowsley Bridge, On the Quay [Holland], Chinese Tea House, Sunset on the Nile, Dutch Windmill, Moated Grange, Lighthouse, Where the River Bends, Ashford [Kent], Among the Dales. The finished pieces may be used as framed wall hangings, adapted as fire screens, and for other decorative purposes. A clever needlewoman's imagination and skill could easily be put to making original designs showing her own home or some favorite spot.

A friend reports that a tiny neighbor frequently comes over to visit with her husband when he is about the yard. The other day she appeared when the man of the house was away. The lady tried to engage her in conversation, but the youngster didn't respond. She only asked: "Where's the mister?"

When told he was downtown she promptly departed. She wasn't wasting any time on the women.

The spruces have caught in their arms as much of the gold of the maples as they could hold; very reluctantly giving it up bit by bit to the November gale. M. M.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning values. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

This recent airmail cover from unoccupied France shows a number of semi-postal issues on both sides of the envelope. The stamps represent charities for soldiers, war relief, for refugees, for the children of refugees, for the Red Cross, and other things.

On Sept. 7 a special postage stamp was issued by the United States post-office department to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the Coronado expedition thru the southwestern states. This had a face value of three cents, and was in a shade of violet, the color customarily selected for stamps of that value. The first day sale was held at Albuquerque, N. M., and resulted in the disposal of 277,775 stamps and the cancellation of 161,012 first day covers.

The new stamp was in the form of a horizontal rectangle and measuring 1.44 by .84 inches, and shows a reproduction of the painting "Coronado and his Captains," by Gerald Cassidy, as its central design. The painting is a lunette occupying almost the entire design and presents Coronado in armor mounted on a white charger with monks at the left and other mounted men at the right and thruout the background. Below but planted upon the lunette is a panel with the caption "Coronado and his Captains." The spandrel at the upper left contains the inscription "U. S. Postage," above a laurel branch upon which is mounted a shield shaped tablet with the numeral and character "3c." The spandrel at the upper right has the inscription "Three Cents," and a laurel branch with a shield showing the arms of Coronado, all disposed as in the opposite spandrel. Below the lunette appears the principal caption reading "1540—Coronado Cuarto Centennial—1940." The plates for this issue were curved to fit the rotary presses contained 200 subjects arranged in four panes of 50 each. Plates numbered 22634, 22635, 22636, and 22637 were assigned in July, 1940, and printing with the first two plates was started on Aug. 12, and with the last two plates on Aug. 14. Perforation was performed on one of the photoelectric controled machines and the centering was better than average.

The photograph of Cassidy's painting used for the stamp was provided by the Coronado Exposition commission. Victor S. McCloskey Jr., is responsible for the design, Charles A. Brook engraved the vignette, and John S. Edmonson, the frame and lettering.

Francisco Vasquez de Coronado was born in Salamanca, Spain about 1500. He arrived in New Spain [now Mexico] in 1535 with the viceroy Mendoza and soon married Dona Beatriz, daughter of the royal treasurer. This connection enabled him to advance rapidly and in 1539 he became governor of the province of New Galicia, Meanwhile there had arrived at Culiacan the friar Alvar Nunez, who had traveled overland from Florida and who brought news of populous cities far to the north where half civilized tribes lived in barbaric splendor adorned with ornaments of silver and gold and precious stones.

In 1539, an expedition was sent out to retrace the friar's route and report on his story, and in February, 1540, Coronado left Compostela with an expedition composed of some 250 horsemen, and several hundred Spaniards and friendly Indians, and accompanied by droves of live stock and a provision train. He captured the fabulous "Seven Cities," now identified as Zuni villages, but found no gold. The grand canyon of the Colorado river was discovered and described and the expedition wintered on the Rio Grande.

In the spring, inspired by tales of vast herds of bison on the plains and an Eldorado called "Quivira," Coronado pushed north at least as far as central Kansas but without discovering anything of immediate value to his Spanish superiors. It was later discovered that the stories of "Quivira" were fabricated by a plains Indian at the instigation of the Pecos Indians in order that Coronado might be lured far from New Spain to his destruction. In October, 1541, the expedition returned to the Rio Grande and in the spring of 1542 returned home.

Mendoza did not welcome him, as he had been desirous of establishing a colony in the region explored, but Coronado felt that the country was too poor to support a settlement and would not leave a portion of his people there. Coronado fell from grace and was deprived of his governorship and is said to have retired to his estate to die. Another story has it that he fell from his horse on the return journey in March, 1542, and never regained his sanity. He disappeared from history in 1544 and only recently it has been determined that he died on Sept. 22, of that year.

Some criticism has been directed against the Coronado stamp on account of the mixed language inscription used at the bottom of the design. The word "cuarto" is Spanish for fourth and cannot correctly be used with the English word "centennial," according to the purists, who however have no objection to compound words made up of Latin and English such as, for example, "sesquicentennial," etc.

Award Prizes at Sculpture, Painting Show

By Eleanor Jewett.

The 51st annual exhibition of American Paintings and Sculpture opened last Friday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute to continue to Jan. 5. The exhibit is to be congratulated on its superb showing of contemporary sculpture. For the first time in the history of the exhibit sculpture has been given an entire gallery to itself with the extremely interesting overflow beautifully installed about the other galleries.

The exhibition is one of the finest that the Art institute has yet succeeded in assembling for this particular annual. The paintings run from the surrealist to the academic and the various trends and kinds of art have been kept in proportion. This is not a violently modern show; it is a nicely balanced, comprehensive resumé of what is being done in painting and sculpture in this current year—1940.

The prize awards were announced last Thursday. The new prize to be offered for the first time, the Ada S. Garrett prize of $750, went to Ernest Fiene for "Razing Old Post Office, New York." The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan prize of $500 was given to "Curled Figure," a sculpture by Hannah Small of Woodstock, N. Y. The figure is in white alabaster and is charming from the front, tho a little unfinished to the visitor who happens to approach it from the back.

"Evicted" by Ann Brockman, a large canvas peopled by Adam and Eve, won the Norman Wait Harris silver medal and $500. "Bus Passengers" by Raphael Soyer was awarded the Norman Wait Harris bronze medal and $300. Hermann Dyer won the M. V. Kohnstamm prize of $250 with "Main Street in Illinois." The Bertha Florsheim Memorial prize of $100 went to "Union Square, New York," by Sam Ostrowsky, and Ralph von Lehmden, a Chicago painter and a member of The Tribune staff, was awarded the Martin B. Cahn prize of $100.

The month of November continues to be nearly as thickly studded with brilliant exhibits as a patch of November sky is studded with stars. Fresh on our calendar are two attractive small picture exhibits. One is of miniature etchings by members of the Chicago Society of Etchers at the Club Woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers, and the other is the annual small painting exhibit at the Palette and Chisel, 1012 North Dearborn street.

Thru the years both of these exhibits have maintained excellent standards and both have been put on view at the best possible moment of the year, a few weeks before Christmas, so they may supply an answer to the haggard Christmas shopper's plea of: "What shall I give?" We are told that Charles Fabens Kelley, curator of Oriental art at the Art institute, has broken a path at the miniature etching show thru the purchase of some dozen or more delightful little etchings for gifts.

There are a host of intriguing subjects etched by well known artists [John Taylor Arms, James Swann, Lee Sturges, Palenske, Margaret Ann Gaug, Charles Heil, Alfred Hutty, Bertha E. Jaques, Gene Kloss, George Jo Mess, Hubert Morley, Morris Henry Hobbs, and Y. E. Soderberg] so that he who looks and does not find something to his taste must indeed be difficult to please.

The small picture exhibit at the Palette and Chisel will run thru Dec. 6 and close then with an auction, following the annual custom of this particular show. The artist members of the club have given us an unusually fine group of paintings. Leo Marzolo offers an exquisite still life "Verbena"; Oskar Gross, a group of little girls in Pilgrim dress, "Thanksgiving Carol"; Holger W. Jensen, a delightful landscape "Carolina in the Morning"; Arnold Turtle, a characteristic poem in color, "Toward Evening"; Othmar Hoffler, a lovely "Ballerina," and J. Jeffery Grant, the stunning "Waiting."

Put this down as a "must" show on your calendar; it is very well worth seeing.

The Chicago Galleries association, 215 North Michigan avenue, has recently hung a brilliant new exhibit of portraits by F. R. Harper and paintings by William H. Mosby. The portraits make an effective group. If anything, Mr. Harper seems more at home with men than with women, and be sure to note the eyes and hands in his portraits, exceptional work.

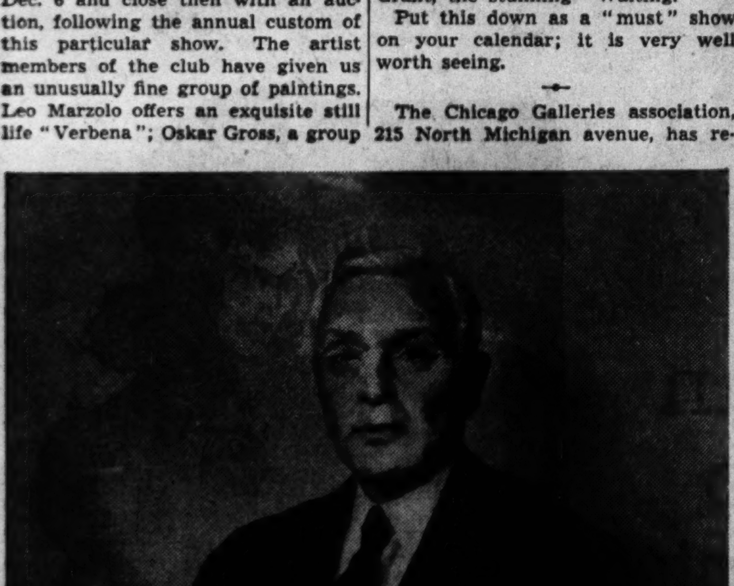
Mr. Mosby is showing a diversified group of pictures that range all the way from some most attractive landscapes in a Europe which is daily disappearing, to two magnificent, large studies of a Belgian horse. One of the charming and lovely paintings he offers is "The Belgian Model," a girl, seated, her back to you; it is an exquisite nude. The "Rose Bowl" [an amazing contrast in technique] is perhaps the most deliberately honest matter-of-fact piece of painting that we have met in some time and it is gorgeous! "From My Studio Window, Brussels" is a study in sunshine on creamy yellow and brown houses, a canvas of pleasurable quality, and the "Skyline, Antwerp," in tranquil gray, might almost be a companion piece to it.

In the first room at the Chicago Galleries association is a mixed group of beautiful pictures representing such well known painters as Frederick Tellander, Leslie Binner, Claude Buck, James Topping, and Bessie Helstrom. Positively another "must" exhibit for those who want all the beauty the November shows have to give.

An interesting little exhibit in a quiet vein is that of lithographs by John Steuart Curry at Gallery House, 17 East Elm street. It will run thru Nov. 23.

Florence Furst, a member of the All Illinois Society of the Fine Arts, has had a one-man show of her paintings in New York this month. Her portrait of "Jean," a small child in a very blue bonnet, was voted the most charming painting in the summer exhibition of the Studio Guild Country Art Center in Redding, Conn. Mrs. Furst's son, Harry Furst, is a sculptor of note and he too was given a New York exhibit early in November.

The Hoosier Art Gallery, 211 West Wacker drive, has a new exhibit this month—paintings by members of the Muncie Art league.



"COL. EMIL TYDEN"

Col. Emil Tyden, who fought in the World war, was recently decorated by the King of Sweden with the Royal Order of Vasa (Knight of the First Class). His portrait by F. A. Harper is one of a group of interesting portraits by Mr. Harper on exhibit at the Chicago Galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue, to Nov. 27.

A complete beauty treatment centers around one jar of cream. With the able assistance of a fine soap and a special sponge, it marks a short cut in the essential care of the skin, serving to cleanse, oil, stimulate and protect.

We doubt if there is a woman in the whole wide world who does not covet a beautiful, radiant skin, but there are some women who feel that the way to obtain one involves such a complicated routine that they just can't be bothered and, instead, go along on the wishful thinking plan.

As a matter of fact, the way to external beauty is extremely simple. Whether you spend a lot of time at it or not, the necessary steps still add up to three, cleansing, lubricating, and protection.

To make this simple procedure even more so, along comes a regal looking package in black and gold with a transparent cover revealing one jar of cream, two cakes of soap, and a special kind of sponge. This one jar of cream is a short cut to beauty in that it is designed to do all things for all people, at all times. We'll admit that is a pretty large order for one jar of cream, but with the assistance of the soap and sponge, experiments have proved it to serve all complexion needs.

The cream, said to be an old Danish formula, is a soft, luscious one about the color of rich coffee cream. It has a delightful herbal fragrance that leans a little toward the lemony side. It's really a honey, and that, incidentally, describes its consistency.

The first step in the treatment is to apply the cream to your face, throat and hands, patting it in with upward and outward movements. Then with warm water and the sponge, you make a rich lather with the soap, which is a fine, superfatted one, and wash off the soiled cream. In addition to an ideal cleansing, the skin benefits by the gentle stimulation it receives from the sponge massage. The next step is to rinse well with warm water, using the sponge for this, and rub the skin dry. Do this briskly if it is oily, gently if dry and sensitive.

At this point the treatment can vary, according to whether you are going to apply makeup or retire. If you are preparing your skin for makeup, smooth on a very light film of cream and splash with cold water. Blot dry with a towel, and you have a clean, glowing surface, just moist enough to serve as a perfect foundation for your makeup, and one we found lasted for hours. You'll be armed with a good protective, too, when you're exposed to the biting wind and cold of the coming winter months.

If you give yourself this treatment in the evening before retiring, the second coat of cream serves as a night cream. Simply apply a generous coating, and if your skin is dry omit the cold splash. The cream disappears into the skin almost immediately, leaving it soft and smooth as velvet.

And don't forget your hands. The same simple rules apply. Smooth on the cream, wash the hands, dry well; apply a second coat, dip in cold water and blot dry. Their smoothness will be something to rave about.

So there you have it, a full beauty treatment in one jar of cream, that is effective, easy to use, and moderately priced.

FLORENCE MURDOCH.

Your Stars ★ Today ★

By WYNN

Sunday, Nov. 17.

Background vibrations today are not as good as outer appearances would make us believe, so let's rest up and not take too much for granted. Week ahead is much more active, mentally and physically, than usual; watch consequences all the way.

Self-Reliance.

To what extent does hero worship diminish our self-reliance? It all depends on the individual. Do you let others do your thinking for you? Who makes your decisions, you or the conclusion of some one you admire? Your decision under certain circumstances could be the same as that of your hero; but are you sure it is really yours? Analyze the amount of influence you invite or permit from others.

Your year ahead from anniversary today is changeful, shifting. Opportunities, obstacles confront you thru deserved good will or the opposite of all you equals—past presents its bill. Danger: Dec. 15-31, May 2-10.

Outdoor Art League.

The Chicago Outdoor Art league will take a "Rocking Chair Tour of the Chicago Parks" via sound motion pictures following a luncheon Tuesday at the Woman's University club. Mrs. William Westerlund heads the organization.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

By Sally Joy Brown.

Today we present a number of requests from persons who are suffering from physical handicaps of one type or another and are unable to help themselves.

The first appeal comes from an elderly man, a victim of tuberculosis, who is in need of warm clothing.

"Dear Miss Brown: I would greatly appreciate it if your readers could provide me with an overcoat, size 38. Once a week I must go to the north side for treatment, and at present I am wearing summer underwear and a light weight suit. The dining room here is some distance from my quarters and I am very much afraid of taking cold. So far, my cure is progressing nicely, but I do need warm clothing.—MR. L."

This man is now in a sanitarium on the southwest side of the city.

Miss B.'s need is not for an essential, but for companionship, and I feel sure some reader will be able to fill her need, which she describes in the following letter:

"Dear Miss Brown. I am a shut-in, because of an arthritic condition, and I am asking you if any one has a bird which could be given to me. I had a lovely canary, a good singer, but he died, and I miss him so much, as he was constant company for me. I live in a rooming house and have few callers, so I would be grateful if I could have another bird."

Miss B. lives on the north side of the city, and we hope that some one can supply the singer she longs for.

Miss K. is 74 years old and seldom is able to leave her attic flat on the northwest side of the city. Since she is so much confined, time hangs heavily on her hands. She is interested in making a patchwork quilt, but lacks the material and the means with which to purchase it. She would be grateful if our readers could donate quilt patches. The address will be supplied to any interested reader.

Mrs. L. is elderly and crippled and, while she has a home, with room and board, has no income. Her appeal reads as follows:

"I am able to help around at times, but only on rare occasions and there are so many hours in which I have nothing to do. I cannot afford yarn or thread to crochet, and I wonder if you would help me to get some woolen yarn, since I enjoy that work. I am no seamstress, but I can do embroidery and crochet, altho yarn is too expensive for me to buy. If I had material of any color, I could do something to help pass the time, as my days are very long."

"I am not strong enough to call for anything, but if readers will mail surplus yarn I shall be grateful. You have been a real friend to me in the past, which I never shall forget, and I hope you can help me in this matter."

The address will be supplied to any interested reader.

A family on the northwest side of the city is most anxious to obtain a wheel chair. One son is the sole support, since the father has been very ill, and recently suffered the amputation of both legs. The wheel chair he had is worn beyond repair, and the purchase of another is financially impossible. If any reader has a discarded chair, preferably a small indoor one, the X. family would be most grateful for it.

Muriel Lester of London to Speak to Church Women

Miss Muriel Lester, frequently called the Jane Addams of London, England, will address an interdenominational massmeeting for women to be sponsored by the woman's department of the Chicago Church federation at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow at the Hotel Sherman.

An interdenominational luncheon for women will be held under the department's auspices Wednesday noon at the Hotel Sherman, with Dr. E. Stanley Jones, missionary to India, and the Rev. Hilda L. Ives of Newton Center, Mass., as speakers. Miss Lester is founder and director of Kingsley House, famous London settlement house.

Both meetings are planned in connection with the national Christian mission to be held today thru Wednesday in Chicago. Mrs. Lincoln M. Coy heads the woman's department.

Sorority Women to Hear Commissioner of Court

Mrs. Bess Sullivan Heptig, special commissioner of the Juvenile court, in charge of the women's pension division, will speak on the court before the business women's group of Alpha Gamma Delta at a dinner meeting Tuesday at the Stevens building.

American walnut is the wood used to make this interesting new line of furniture. The finish is a soft, light brown called "tobacco."

Tobacco Brown Tone in Newest Walnut Pieces

"Popular Furniture Styles," a new booklet by Edith Weigle, tells which periods are most in favor with home owners and apartment dwellers, and answers questions about the mixing of styles and of woods. Price 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Edith Weigle.

There are a great many home owners and apartment dwellers who prefer the simpler styles of home furnishings to the elaborate or highly fashionable ones.

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith or Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jones may like to look at the amusing Victorian pieces, or the elaborate Louis XV. and Louis XVI. styles, or the elegant Regency furniture, but when it comes to buying they want something simpler. And I don't mean early American.

What's the answer? Perhaps modern pieces in light woods will satisfy them. Or they may decide to do at least one room in the charming, comfortable, always good, French Provincial styles.

Or, have they seen a brand new line, and an exceedingly likable one, of walnut, the pieces being inspired by the designs of the golden age of walnut in the 17th and 18th centuries? Called Burleigh, this group is really English Provincial in character. The chairs are strong, sturdy, with solid wooden seats or ones done in artistic floral tapestries or homespuns. The tables are of the drop leaf and the end-extension sort, and there are some unusually fine open cupboards or Welsh dressers to display china and pottery.

All the pieces in this walnut line have been given a lovely, satin-like finish in tobacco brown. It must really be seen and touched to be appreciated. It is a tone that will bring beauty to any room.

We like especially the bedroom ensemble with its paneled head and footboards of the bed, and a frieze of graceful curves ornamenting beds, chests, and dressers. Over the bureau hangs a wooden framed mirror with a tall, curved top ornamented with painted, stylized flowers.

For the hall there is a lovely table with a leaf that folds back against the wall. This table is fine for a game of cards, too.

A kneehole desk of good proportions has interesting brass drawer pulls. A coffee table with gracefully rounded drop leaves at either end has a lower shelf, making it most useful.

The photograph today shows a living room grouping in this new Burleigh walnut furniture. The tall secretary desk is a very useful item, offering plenty of storage space, shelves for books, and a writing compartment.

Notice that the upholstered chair has a walnut frame and is planned to go with all the other pieces in this group. This furniture is available in Chicago.

Clotilde Children's Patterns

The jumper mode persists as the most popular for the youngest set. There's something about the style that is especially flattering to juveniles and their rather awkward figures. This one has a pinafore front coming midway up the bodice of the blouse, with princess lines to the skirt and patch pockets at the sides. The blouse has a typical shirtwaist collar and long, full sleeves caught into snug wristbands.

The blouse may have short sleeves, if you like, and the pockets on the skirt are optional.

Corduroy and woolen are excellent choices for the skirt, with washable fabrics, including silk, rating top honors for the blouse.

Style No. 2712 is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14. Size 8 requires 1⅝ yards of 39 inch material for long-sleeved blouse; 1 yard of 54 inch for jumper.

Address orders for Clotilde Children's Fashions to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central annex, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred)—wrap it carefully for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Helen Jones, Milwaukee, Wis.—I helped myself to one of my small girl's toy coffee pots about six months ago. Now I use her discarded toy to hold my bacon drippings and it's a big convenience. When I want to use drippings I place pot near range, melt it, and pour out whatever amount I need.

Mrs. Harry O'Brien, Chicago—Why hasn't some one thought of designing neat tiers of soap dishes for bathrooms, with enough separate containers so each family member has his own parking spot for his own cake of soap?

Kitty White, Elgin, Ill.—I add a goodly supply of baking soda to my hot suds when I want to take the odor of fish from my frying pans.

Mrs. Fred Hurley, Chicago—Last winter my husband fastened a burlap sack securely to wall of our back porch and it made an excellent housing center for the family sled. We'll bring it out and do the same when the first snow flies this year.

* *

Frank Anderson, Chicago—To the men of your "Household Forum" I'll give this tip: When I want to use an empty oil can for some other purpose I can always clean it easily with sawdust.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation

with herb laxative, combined with syrup pepsin to make it agreeable and easy to take

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels, combined with good old Syrup Pepsin to make your laxative more agreeable and easier to take. For years many Doctors have used pepsin compounds, as agreeable carriers to make other medicines more palatable when your "taster" feels easily upset. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna, combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully its herb Laxative Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines, to bring welcome relief from constipation. And see how its Syrup Pepsin makes Dr. Caldwell's medicine so smooth and agreeable to a touchy gullet. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna at your druggist's today. Try one laxative that won't bring on violent distaste, even when you take it after a full meal.

Matty Malneck Again to Prime the Pump Room

By Will Davidson.

Not that it is at all necessary, but they're priming the Pump room again this week.

Matty Malneck, the gifted young musician who gave his compact little orchestra what amounted to its bistro baptism a season ago in the Ambassador East's famous blue and white room, will return Saturday night for an indefinite visit. Matty has evidently taken up a couple of notches in his musical belt, for the 15 piece band he featured on the west coast after leaving here has happily shrunk again to the original eight.

Effecting a minor monopoly on names, the Pump room has also engaged Larry Adler, who blows tunes out of the tunnelled innards of a harmonica so expertly that he rates appearances with symphony orchestras, no less. He will appear twice nightly at the Pump room.

It's when she sings a fragile, lovely little song the French words of which she learned by rote, and couldn't translate exactly for you if she had to, that Gracie Barrie comes triumphantly into her own as the star of the Drake hotel's Camellia House. This is a new sort of triumph, too, for the little, dark haired wife of Bandsman Dick Stabile, for she has adapted her pert little self beautifully to the starched formality of the room. Whether she's singing "Our Love Affair" or "The Lady Is a Tramp," Miss Barrie is genuinely and warmly unostentatious. Quite an agreeable change from recent Camellia House floor show antics. Gracie will have a neatly enhanced reputation when she goes back east to rehearse for a new musical revue, "Crazy with the Heat." Incidentally, Romo Vincent, rotund Chicago comedian, will get his first chance in a legitimate show in that same revue.

Don the Beachcomber is back at his south seas paradise on Walton place. If you favor lobster Newburgh, ask Don to fix you his Cantonese version of that dish. He adds to the diced, steamed meat a sauce that contains ginger, brandy, Chinese garlic, and a heavy bodied broth brewed from duck, chicken, beef, and pork, all mixed with soy bean sauce with a finesse known only to Don and his staff.

Even when you have to watch Willie Shore from behind a sometimes moving frieze of Hi-Hat club waiters and customers, the ballet minded boy who started his professional career as a Russian dancer in Al Tierney's Metropole café at 23d and Michigan nearly a decade ago, is very funny. His "I Don't Want No Pie" skit, born of a facetious remark one dawn at Ernie Rickett's Chicago avenue café, is a memorable and somewhat exhausting confection of what are rather indelicately called belly laughs. With or without stooges, Willie is silly and is, you might say, at the beak of his career.

He has a good show behind him, too. The nasal nuances of Songstress Ruth Petty, the elastic dancing of Jaqueline Allen and the Callahan sisters, and the ensemble numbers of the Billy Younger girls are popular foils for Willie's ever present humor.

Joe E. Lewis, Tamara, and the Chandra Kaly dancers are at Chez Paree by now, Fats Waller is back in the Panther room, and Bobby Ramos' band has taken over the Colony club stand. Thursday the Palmer House launches its Holiday revue, featuring, of course, Ray Noble; Wednesday Dolly Kay heads a new show going into Harry's New Yorker, and Saturday Ben Cutler's orchestra makes its Chicago debut at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Boswelling the Bistros:

More about Maggi. Not only is La Belle Thrush McNellis still protesting in a nice, musical way that some persons are "Unfair to the Union of Love" at Armando's exclusive club in New York—she has her own little spot now. It's a new upstairs annex to Armando's, called the Bandbox, and best of all, she has Pliner and Earle with her again. New York, as did Chicago, loves them. . . . Joy Paige is back with Flo and Walt at their Walton street bar-lounge, playing piano and singing an amazing version of "Trees," with Flo taking a jive cut at the lyrics. They have a tap dancing waiter, too. Mr. Wiggins. . . . Two ex-band leaders are with Griff Williams, George Jeans, trombone, and Charlie Gaylord, violin. Ask Griff to tell you about the time he tried to call George and got the morgue. . . . Pierson Thal, Gloria Fay, Nev Simons [remember his saxing and singing at Casa de Alex, of sad, fond memory?] et al, continues to do a neat job of entertaining Blue Fountain room patrons in the Hotel La Salle. . . . Rogers and Morris' Eugene and Willie Howard impersonation at Harry's New Yorker is one of the grandest bits of tomfoolery of the season. . . .

ON SCREEN AND IN PERSON

Little Gloria Jean will be very much present at the Palace this week. She's on the screen in "A Little Bit of Heaven" and will appear in person Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Drama Notes

Eddie Dowling, of "The Time of Your Life," has agreed to serve as a judge for the annual Marjorie Montgomery Ward Baker playwrights' prize given by the Coach House theater in Oconomowoc, Wis. The award, amounting to $300, will be given next August, after the four plays selected as the best have all been produced at the Coach House theater. Only comedies may be submitted. The contest closes Jan. 1, 1941. Manuscripts should be sent directly to the Play Reading Council, Coach House Theater, Oconomowoc, Wis. In addition to Mr. Dowling, Dan Goldberg of "Variety" and Cecil Smith will serve as judges.

When Marion Colby sings her torch songs in immobile, deadpan fashion in "Meet the People," nobody in the Grand Opera house audience could ever imagine that she was an "international" jitterbug champion as recently as a year ago. The jitterbug prize came her way in a nation-wide contest engineered by Artie Shaw, the band leader. When, Virginia O'Brien, the original "cold torch" artist of "Meet the People," left the Hollywood company last year to try her luck in a Shubert revue, "Keep Off the Grass," in New York, Marion Colby tried out for the part and won a contract. She is 19, by actual count, and hails from Venice, Cal.

Vaudeville

Abbott and Costello, comedy team; the Merry Macs, harmony foursome, and Larry Adler, the wonderful harmonica player, head the stage bill at the Chicago theater this week. In addition the show offers Ruth Day, dancer, and the Jansleys, acrobats. "City for Conquest," starring James Cagney, Ann Sheridan, and Frank Craven, is on the screen.

June St. Clair is back at the Rialto theater. She is to be found in the company of such entertainers as Charles Country, Marvin Harmon, Val Williams, Melanie La Beau, and Connie Fonslu. "Before I Hang," with Boris Karloff, is the current motion picture.

Gloria Jean, appearing on the Palace theater's screen, will make personal appearances at that theater on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

"Drunkard" in Swing.

Michael Todd, producer of "Hot Mikado," has vowed he will soon present "The Hot Drunkard," a swing version of the popular old melodrama. David Gregory is writing the book, and Alan Roberts and Jerome Brainan the score. Watson Barratt and Cleveland Bronner are designing the sets.

"Tomorrow We Smile."

Reginald Denham and Edward Percy, who turned out "Ladies in Retirement," have almost completed a new play called "Tomorrow We Smile." The collaboration is a long distance one for Mr. Denham is in New York and Mr. Percy is in Britain, alternately writing and watching the war.

Little Theaters

The Goodman theater's second production in its members' series, "Time and the Conways," by J. B. Priestley, will be given tonight thru Wednesday. Altho we are not sure, we believe this to be the first performances of the play in Chicago. If not, we hope some one will correct us. On Saturday afternoons the children's group offers Charlotte B. Chorpenning's "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," which is breaking attendance records for these productions.

At the Woman's Club theater Ayn Rand's "The Night of January 16" will be put on tonight by the Lyceum Theater guild. Esther Sachs has directed the play.

"Golden Ball" is next Saturday's presentation of the Jack and Jill Juvenile theater. It will be given at 10:30 o'clock in the 19th Century club, Oak Park.

Wednesday thru Saturday the Guild theater, 616 Church street, Evanston, continues to give its version of Robert Sherwood's "The Petrified Forest." This is the last week for this production, and "Double Door" will replace it the following Wednesday, Nov. 27.

CHICAGO PLAYBILLS

CONTINUING:

"Life with Father," adaptation of Clarence Day's book by Russel Crouse and Howard Lindsay, with Lillian Gish and Percy Waram; Blackstone theater; 40th week.

"The Male Animal," comedy, by James Thurber and Elliott Nugent, with Mr. Nugent; Selwyn theater; 11th and final week.

"Meet the People," the famous topical revue from the west coast; Grand Opera house; eighth week.

"The Time of Your Life," Pulitzer prize play, by William Saroyan, with Eddie Dowling and Julie Haydon; Erlanger theater; fourth week.

"Lady in Waiting," Margery Sharp's adaptation of her own novel, "The Nutmeg Tree," with Gladys George; Harris theater; second week.

COMING:

Criticism Leveled at Clubs Echoes In and Out of the Ranks

By Betty Browning

THE criticism leveled by certain club leaders at their own organizations, as reported last Sunday in The Tribune, has roused echoes in and out of club ranks.

The plain truth seems to be that in times such as these the old tolerant attitude expressed frequently by many a husband or daughter, "O, it's a nice place for her to spend her time when she hasn't anything else to do," no longer applies to the woman's club.

Fiddling doesn't sound quite so pleasant when Rome is burning thruout the performance.

Mrs. Clarence G. Goodwin, trustee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, whose progressive point of view on women's organizations was cited in the article, writes concerning it: "The consensus is that it is very timely and thought-provoking and will cause some of the old 'stand-patters' to wonder if the changing world has struck the clubwomen. Thank you very much for giving me such a splendid part in the controversy."

Harsh and fervent are the comments of outsiders, harsh in their "off the record" frankness, fervent with a unanimous hope that women's clubs may be aroused to a sense of their powers and responsibilities.

"I think it was Webster who said, 'Most people would rather lie down and die than think,'" comments a woman who lectures frequently before women's organizations. "I have found that that applies to most club audiences.

"I have also found that the way to a club audience's mind is thru its stomach," this (Continued on Page 3.)

Celebrities of Diplomatic and Opera World Present at Social Events

By Cousin Eve

MME. MARJORIE LAWRENCE of the opera, gay and fascinating diva of our present Chicago season, has come up from Australia—her home town, so to speak—via South America, where she had been singing in the Argentine. She had fluttered thru Brazil and landed somewhat breathless at Mrs. Walter Kirk's luncheon before the opera a week ago Saturday.

Mme. Lawrence was feeling the change from the tropics and shivering in her furs, at the same time that her mind was jumping happily ahead in a manner purely feminine. There was a frock to be bought here in Chicago for the New York concert at Carnegie hall Dec. 13 for the benefit of "bundles for Britain." As the duke and duchess of Windsor have promised to come up from Nassau for this great charitable event, the lively young singer said her costume just must be "something" and no mistake about it.

Mme. Lawrence has outstanding personality and a superb voice, and her great rôle here in Chicago is to be Salome in the operatic performance Nov. 21 to be given for the benefit of Passavant hospital. Mrs. Kirk is president of the woman's board, which has sponsored the event, and "Salome" is really an event. Richard Strauss' score is one of the most complicated and magnificent known to musicians and, believe me, gives one the chills and gooseflesh with its brasses and smashes.

Artur Rodzinski is coming from Cleveland to conduct "Salome," and the know-it-alls say that Mme. Lawrence is the tops in this rôle and that she does the dance of the veils divinely. For the time being, however, the singer is wondering what sort of head our opera committee furnishes for the great scene; some that she has seen in the past were disconcerting. People who read (Continued on Page 2.)

their Bibles remember that Salome was the stepdaughter of Herod and that she danced before him, exacting for her wild performance the head of John the Baptist on a tray. It is the most somber of all tragedies, and if one has visited the ancient ruins in the Moab mountains, rising purple and barren from the Dead Sea, one has a still more vivid sense of the terrific drama. "Salome" is to be rounded out for the benefit by the Ballet Theater's "Swan Lake," which evokes warm memories of Pavlowa and other great Russian ballerinas.

At Mrs. Kirk's opera party which followed celebrities were plentiful. There was Italo Montemezzi from Milan, composer of "Love of Three Kings," a perfectly charming man and full of delightful recollections, especially about Mary Garden. "She didn't need a voice," said he. "She had so great a personalitee." Then there were Mrs. Jefferson Caffery, wife of the American ambassador to Brazil, and later on Mr. and Mrs. Igor Stravinsky and Miss Elsa Maxwell, who traveled here in the train of Miss Grace Moore. The latter also was present at "Falstaff," every inch an exotic diva in white hat, white furs, smart costume, and radiant good looks.

There didn't seem to be any head or tail to the Casino tea in honor of the American ambassador to Poland, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, and his charming wife. Yet it was an interesting party full of zip, even if there wasn't a receiving line. Now that I think of it, Miss Elizabeth McCormick gave me the glad hand in the foyer of the club and she and Mrs. Charles Edward Brown did the honors at the tea table, laid in the center of the ballroom. Mrs. Stanley McCormick also was present with her kinsman, Robert Hall McCormick, who later introduced the tall, gallant ambassador to the assembly in a remarkable speech. I thought while Mr. McCormick was in the throes of giving Mr. Biddle's history, that the latter was getting to be a real United States of Europe in himself—he is president of the French societies in Chicago, head of the Italy-America, and now he has taken on Poland as well. And that 's the ideal way for a good American to be—friendly to all. Consul General and Mrs. Carol Ripa and Joseph and Mrs. Staniewicz were present in the official group.

Mrs. Biddle is remarkable for her chic individuality and lack of pose. And [Tony] Biddle is just as natural as she is; both have that simplicity and lack of self-consciousness that is charming and warms the heart. Mrs. Biddle is a dark haired woman, slim and white, with eyes that have no color, yet are alive like pale opals. Her mouth is sensitive and wide, and I thought how modern she was, and who could paint her, the sleek swirl of the black hair with its close velvet cap and nosegay of dull flowers, the sheathlike black frock in a jetted pattern, held at the throat with a circle of jewels. Very quietly elegant.

"Tony" Biddle, in ambassadorial gray with the striped blue-gray linen that so many men are wearing, was a heartening figure as an envoy en vacances. He spoke in an agreeable voice, with enormous tact, of the sorrows of Poland, laying much stress on the brave resistance of the Poles to "the adversary." Always it was "the adversary." Charles Brown was reminiscing with Mrs. Biddle about the old days and Dorothy Judah. It seems that both Margaret Biddle and Dorothy Judah had strings of huge pearls and wore them at the same dinner. The Judah pearls had hitherto been the biggest upon the horizon, being the size of hazel nuts. But after seeing Mrs. Biddle's pearls, Mrs. Judah unfastened her string and threw it on the table—"what's the use?" quoth she—she was always a funny girl. The Biddle pearls were presumably large as walnuts and very gorgeous.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown had a dinner the same evening for the Biddles when the ambassador spoke again, more intimately and before an entirely different company. There were about 16 guests, including Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kirk, the latter in shell pink satin; Count and Countess Giulio Bolognesi, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Field. Mrs. Biddle's costume was an enchanting one of black, brocaded in silver moons, cut rather high and worn with emeralds. Her wrap was a short one of sable.

The Browns brought their party to the ballet celebration Mrs. Carleton Palmer was having in the Green room of the Opera house. This room, as big as a minute, with an especially low ceiling, has walls covered with signed photographs of artists who have sung in our opera in the dear dead past. There had been a ballet performance that night in the big theater, and all the slim little ballerinas came crowding in, looking thin and hungry as anything, poor little dears! Charles Wiman, who attended the ballet with his handsome wife, declared that Nancy, his niece, who is in the company, gets only half a ladyfinger every other Thursday. Nancy is a daughter of Dwight Wiman, and instead of making her debut in New York this winter and having a splendorous ball for a coming out party, she took the cash and joined the Ballet Theater.

When Nina Stroganova, the quaint little Danish star, came into the Green room that night, we pressed a chicken sandwich upon her, but milk was all she would allow herself, dear little hollow cheeked thing!

A buffet with sandwiches and hot coffee circled the Green room. Mrs. Palmer in sea green lamé received, and the rest of us milled. Ruth Page was there and Tom Fisher, also the Fishers from Detroit, very multimillionaire and all that sort of thing. They have just purchased a luxurious shooting box from Mrs. Biddle with thousands of woodland acres in northern Michigan. Another who milled that night was Nicky de Molas, who used to paint, and maybe he still does, those "conversation" pieces. For the benefit of the unsapient, a conversation piece à la de Molas is a painting of a great house, château or castle, with owners grouped on the outside engaged in various sports. Little dogs frisked, saddle horses pranced, and ducal families posed for posterity while the painter usually sketched himself and his easel in one bright corner.

The idea came out of Italy from the 16th century and de Molas has painted scores of castles in England, one for the Lamott Belins of Washington in eastern France, and quite a few for the du Ponts of Delaware. They were called "conversation pieces," I dare say, because they caused so much conversation.

The price was $5,000, and I knew a young couple in Lake Forest who were very keen on having one. De Molas came out often, taking notes of their beloved French château with terraced gardens framed in deep woods, and they could hardly wait for the finished masterpiece to be framed and delivered. It was a great moment in life to have their idyllic existence crystalized, as it were, and kept forever in front of their eyes, with a background of Renaissance towers and bowers.

Finally the huge express package came and "the conversation piece" was carefully taken out of its wrappings. But what met their astonished eyes was a painting of a strange great house, a quite unknown group of owners, with a greater number of children than theirs indulging in frolics alien to Lake Forest. They called in friends to find out if, after all, this could be their house seen from some other viewpoint. But one and all were mystified. It might be the house, but was it?

Presumably, de Molas was doing so many "conversation pieces" at that time that he sent out the wrong one. We don't know yet the dénouement. But he did a nifty piece of scenery and costumes for the ballet, "Capricloso," choreographed by Anton Dolin, and danced to the ancient music of Cimarosa, the Italian composer, one of whose light operettas was revived lately at the Civic theater by Giovanni Cardelli.

The Ballet Theater is a big, expensive show. When it arrived in Chicago it was in direct competition with Col. de Basil's original Russian ballet of Monte Carlo, playing at the Auditorium. It will take time for the Ballet Theater's balletomanes to equal the Russians in dancing, to sail thru space like graceful arrows, to rise light as thistledown, pose plastically in the air, to touch ground without a dull thud. For dancing is not mere jigging up and down to classic music. Yet the Ballet Theater has much that is very charming under its hat. It is gay, fantastic, young and rigolo. One is delighted with the friskiness of it, the tongue in the cheek, as it were, the dash of it.

The presence of young society girls in Richard Pleasant's organization also is remarkable. Two of Mrs. Irving Chase's girls and Nancy Wiman are in the company, and we do hope they will be allowed a bit of turkey for our forthcoming mercantile Thanksgiving.

Writing of turkey reminds me of the annual St. James bazar and turkey dinner next Tuesday in the parish house, 666 Rush street. Mrs. Fremont Chandler is chairman of this celebration, which is always very social. Beautiful ladies of the parish have been concentrating on this sale all summer, and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis will resume this year her psychic hand readings, famous thruout our broad land. Mrs. Hartley Postlewaite is co-chairman of the committee, and Mrs. Duncan Browne, wife of the rector, heads the directorate.

Another sale on Tuesday goes on all day in Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen's Astor street house for the benefit of Eli Bates social settlement. This is always une affaire tres chic, with the young married set as sales girls, and for these Mary Meeker Cramer is having a luncheon that day. They are specializing on a line of gorgeous evening bags and smart outfits for parlor maids and nounous. Mrs. Bowen's is one of Chicago's handsomest houses—after the American manner. It has a lovely walled garden with trees at the side, joining on the south the house of Mrs. McCormick Blair, her daughter.

Mrs. Bowen sold her Bar Harbor house in August to a Belgian, Louis Bosman by name, whose wife is an attractive Dutch woman. Neither of the Bosmans speaks English and one wonders at their choice of this far northerly summer resort for their place of refuge. The house is a very large and splendid one with a magnificent view, and the contents, furniture, silver, rugs, and books have been divided between the three surviving children and grandchildren. Besides Mrs. Blair, there are Mrs. Louise Phelps and Joseph Bowen Jr., and their progeny.

One of the crowded events of last Sunday was the Armistice day ceremony at the Chicago Historical society in Lincoln park. Mrs. Joseph Cudahy originated the Red Cross tableaux last year, so lovely that they traveled to Washington and were repeated. It was a stirring hour for the audience with an organ recital, march with the colors, and a short address by James B. Forgan, chairman of the Chicago chapter.

Roger Holden was the commentator of the tableaux that followed, and in reading the names of the actors, it gave one pause to find they were largely Polish, Swedish, and German. They were beautifully done, these tableaux, from the first, showing Henri Dunant, the Swiss founder of Red Cross, on the bloody battlefield of Solferino, down thru "Today's War Refugees" to "Disaster Relief." The whole showing of tableaux was truly impressive and the audience was intensely enthusiastic. Mrs. Charles S. Dewey was chairman of the Armistice day committee, which was made up of women prominent in Red Cross service—Mrs. Joseph Cudahy, Mrs. James Forgan, Mrs. Garfield King, Mrs. Clive Runnells, Mrs. Irene Sidley, Mrs. Richard Stearns, and Mrs. Frederic Upham, to name a few.

Miss Dorothy Jane Thoma's engagement to Kellogg S. Edmunds was announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin L. Thoma of River Forest, last night at a party at the Drake. Mr. Edmunds is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Edmunds of River Forest.

P.-T. A. and Library Group Designers of Reading Lists

Book lists designed for use in the guidance of children's and adolescents' reading, and in the selection of current books, have been prepared by the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers in coöperation with the American Library association and the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. Mrs. Bernice Weideman Karraker, reading and library chairman of the Illinois congress, who also is a member of the staff of the Illinois state library, has sponsored the project.

Jewish Youth of Chicago to Attend Dance Tonight

Nearly every Jewish youth organization in and about Chicago will take part in the first dance of the All-Chicago Youth council of the Jewish National fund this evening at the Hotel Sherman. Ben Levin is chairman of the event, with Miss Frieda Ascher, and Miss Julia Gershon heading key committees. Radio and stage stars will contribute to the program.

Civic Matters Prominent on Club Programs

Civic problems of particular import at this time will be considered by several organizations this week. The Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers will hold a joint conference on legislation and school education all day Tuesday at the Stevens hotel. Sessions will be free to the public.

Mrs. Harry M. Mulberry, state legislative chairman, will discuss "Financing the Chicago Public Schools" in the morning, and Miss Susan B. Scully of the Illinois Education association's Chicago division will speak on "Child Welfare Thru Teacher Tenure, Certification, Minimum Salaries and Retirement Plan."

Separate conferences on school education and legislation will be held in the afternoon, with Mrs. Elias Freudenheim, state chairman of school education, and Mrs. Mulberry, respectively, presiding.

Legislation to make Illinois eligible for federal aid to dependent children, and to give the schools adequate support thru the state distributive fund, was placed at the head of the Illinois congress' legislative program by the board of managers at a meeting last week at the Stevens hotel.

New measures adopted by the board for support include a change in the residence requirement for relief to aid residents who move from one part of the state to another to take a job, should they lose that job; changes in the liquor law to prohibit employment of minors in places selling liquor retail, and to bar the sale of liquor within 300 feet of a school or church [the limit now is 100 feet]; the establishment of a cottage type institution for the care and education of mentally retarded children; and a bill to limit the sale and display of fireworks.

A study of the merit system in Chicago and Cook county will occupy the afternoon session of the school of government to be sponsored by the Cook County League of Women Voters from 10:30 until 2:30 o'clock Tuesday at league headquarters. The study will be based on charts prepared by Mrs. William Mullin, personnel chairman of the league.

In the morning Chicago and suburban chairmen will divide into two groups, the city chairmen to discuss the Chicago budget, the suburban chairmen to discuss Cook county townships. The groups then will come together to compare notes on their experiences as watchers at the polls and as workers in election information booths.

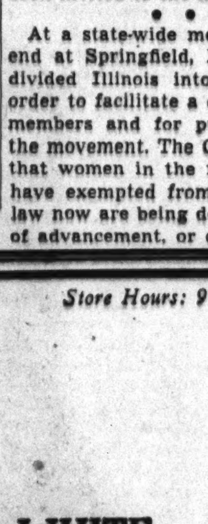
The Zonta club of Chicago is devoting its luncheon meeting Tuesday to a discussion of the movement launched by the Illinois Women's Concord to exempt private secretaries and women in executive, administrative or professional capacities from the provisions of the Illinois 8 hour law for women.



Miss Ellen L. Nylund. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Miss Ellen L. Nylund, legislative chairman of the Concord, and president of the Women's Bar Association of Illinois, will speak. Mrs. Anne V. Zinser, president of the Concord and a Zontian, will introduce Miss Nylund. Eight other Illinois units of this international service organization for women executives have been invited to the meeting.

At a state-wide meeting last weekend at Springfield, Ill., the Concord divided Illinois into 25 districts in order to facilitate a current drive for members and for public support of the movement. The Concord contends that women in the fields it seeks to have exempted from the eight hour law now are being demoted, deprived of advancement, or deprived entirely of their jobs because of the law.

Welfare and housing will be discussed before the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs at its all day meeting tomorrow at the Auditorium hotel. In the morning, Newton Farr, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will speak on "What We Are Doing in Housing," and Miss Jessie Binford of the Juvenile Protective association, on "The Underprivileged Child."

At the afternoon session, Dr. Beatrice Tucker, medical director of the Chicago Maternity center, will talk on "The Value of the Women's and Children's Hospital to the Community," and Dr. Franklin Fitch, on "The Newer Legislation for the Protection of the Family." Mrs. Herman C. Lammers and Dr. V. A. Latham will be in charge of the day.

Dean William Clarke of De Paul university college of law will speak on "The Constitution as Applied to Our Daily Life" before the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs Friday morning at 209 South State street.

Following luncheon, Evelyn Millis Duvall, executive director of the Association for Family Living, will talk on "Problems and Promises of the American Home." Dr. Carl Sommer, newly appointed state director of public welfare, is expected to be present to discuss "The Chicago State Hospital." Mrs. J. Hamilton Laird, Mrs. Thomas Malvacher, and Mrs. A. U. Sawbridge have planned the meeting.

The Most Rev. Eugene J. McGuiness, Roman Catholic bishop of Raleigh, N. C., will discuss "Christianity in the South" before the Charles Carroll Forum of Chicago at 3:30 o'clock today at the Morrison hotel. Bishop McGuiness has been field secretary, general secretary, and vice president of the Catholic Church Extension society. The Rev. James A. Magner, director of the forum, will preside at the open forum following the lecture.

Miss Mary Gilson, assistant professor of economics at the University of Chicago, will address the Women's division of the American Jewish Congress on Monday afternoon, Nov. 25, at the Palmer House.

"He That Would Save His Life" will be the title of Miss Gilson's talk. It will touch on her observations in this country and in Europe, which she has visited 14 times. Miss Gilson serves on the state board of advisers on unemployment insurance and free employment agencies. Her autobiography, "What's Past Is Prologue," recently was published. The Negro choir directed by J. Wesley Jones will sing.

Judge Will Speak.

Judge John Gutknecht of the Municipal court will speak at a rally of the Welfare auxiliary, Daughters of Zion Infant Home and Day Nursery, tomorrow evening at the home.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Suppressing for one issue Martha Freeman Esmond's furor scribendi, we shall use this space today for printing some of our readers' offerings.

Requests for Old Songs.

Mrs. Gladys Nerganah, Chapin, Ill., collects old songs and would like two ballads beginning as follows:

[a] "No home, no home," said a poor little girl,
As she knocked at the rich man's door.

[b] "'Twas about 4 o'clock in the morning,
Just about the break of day."

The chorus of [b] begins:
"Poor Lu, poor Lulu, my darling."

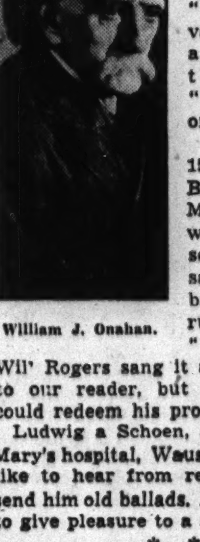
Mrs. Julia Lester, 4724 Vincennes avenue, Chicago, asks for two old elocutionary selections: [a] German dialect story of the man who wanted to be "close by, a good vays off"; [b] a verse in which the refrain is: "The barber kept on shaving."



William J. Onahan.

M. LaQuaye, 158 North avenue, Battle Creek, Mich., wants words of a song his father sang years ago, a ballad of the gold rush of '49 called "Joe Bowers." Will Rogers sang it and promised it to our reader, but died before he could redeem his promise.

Ludwig a Schoen, a patient in St. Mary's hospital, Wausau, Wis., would like to hear from readers who will send him old ballads. Here is a chance to give pleasure to a shut-in.

F. M. Keith, La Grange, Ill., asks for the author of the poem:
"Give me three grains of corn, Mother."

The reference room of the Chicago Public library tells us that the writer of this once popular verse, dealing with the Irish famine, is Amelia B. Edwards. It can be found in Bryant's Library of Poetry and Song and in Best Loved Poems of the American People.

Stories of the Street and of the Town.

Franklin J. Meine, 537 South Dearborn street, Chicago, is editing an anthology based on a column, titled as above, which appeared in the old Chicago Record, 1893-1900. After these had appeared in the paper they were collected and bound in paper covers and sold for 25 cents. Mr. Meine would like to hear from any one who has one of these books or reminiscences or clippings from that column.

Little Robert Reid.

This famous young hero, it appears, is known to many of our fans. Letters have poured in, most of these giving only a part of the lines. The first reader under the wire was H. L. Hamilton, Chicago, who sent four stanzas, which his mother recalled. Mrs. Hamilton thinks it was in the "Analytical Third Reader" used in the country school she attended in Bremen township, south of Blue Island. Mrs. Fred Kamps, Marshfield, Wis., sent five stanzas, which she copied for us from a Second Reader published by Harper and Brothers, 1860. But from Mrs. George A. Heckman, Fairbury, Ill., we received the rhyme [five stanzas] in an enchanting book called "Songs for the Little Ones at Home," copyright 1852. Here are the five stanzas:

"I will not use tobacco, no,
It is a filthy weed;
I'll never put it in my mouth,"
Said little Robert Reid.

"Why, there was idle Jerry Jones,
As dirty as a pig,
Who smoked when only ten years old,
And thought it made him big.

"He'd puff along the open street
As if he had no shame;
He'd sit beside the tavern door
And there he'd do the same.

"He spent his time and money too,
And made his mother sad;
She feared a worthless man would come
From such a worthless lad.

"Oh no, I'll never smoke or chew,
'Tis very wrong indeed;
It hurts the health, it makes bad breath,"
Said little Robert Reid.

Memories.

Mrs. Daniel Gallery sends a reminiscence of Archbishop Feehan, recalling that on the occasion of a reception in his honor on his arrival in Chicago her father, William J. Onahan, made the address of welcome.

The Elegant Eighties.

There is still time to order your book containing letters from this column, reviewing Chicago events of the '80s. John T. McCutcheon, in his foreword to the book, will make you homesick for the past, as he writes of his life in Indiana, surrounded by sea shells from far off places, tintypes, and stereoscopic views of "Niagara Falls in Winter." Mr. McCutcheon says: "As '89 drew to a close I came to Chicago with my sheepskin and $17 in cash."

Criticisms of Women's Club Rouse Echoes

lecturer adds. "If you want a large and receptive audience, be sure to have luncheon for them, or even tea and wafers.

Then she says almost wistfully: "And think what power women's organizations have if only they would use it!"

"They're dying on their feet. What they need is a shot in the arm like that article," remarks a publicity consultant, who also has had an intimate acquaintance with clubs. She recalls challenging clubwomen in an open meeting on two of their pet phobias, politics and commercialism: "What is politics? Isn't it citizenship? And commercialism? Isn't it the bread and butter your husbands and sons provide?"

• • •

Yet this same publicity expert, on more than one occasion, has paid women's organizations this tribute: "No one has yet told the magnificent story of the millions of dollars which women's organizations raise for charity."

The gulf between the serious work of the clubs and their much publicized pursuit of personal pleasure is commented upon by a writer, herself president of an authors' club.

"Women are a powerful influence, if only they would recognize their power and use it, but too great a proportion of club members, it seems to me, consists of bored women seeking social spheres in which to pass the time between luncheon and dinner.

"There are real workers in clubs, true, and they deserve credit for the remarkable advances they have made in civic, intellectual, and philanthropic fields, advances made, it is rather evident, in spite of the dead weight of thousands of inactive members who attend club meetings only to drink tea and admire the work of intelligent members with serious goals to achieve. With the world in turmoil, it is time the women's clubs shelved inane pursuits and settled down to real work."

Another critic unburdens herself as follows: "It's time that visiting authors and authoresses ceased to be the pièce de résistance of club activity. A little less gushing over celebrities and a little more constructive effort in behalf of our country are in order."

Speaking of authors, Louis Zara recently made a pointed suggestion to a club audience: "You can do a real service to American literature if you will read and talk about the books of young authors of talent who have not yet reached the best seller stage."

To encourage talent thus would be one answer to the familiar criticism that women listen to reviews of books every one is reading so that they won't have to bother to read the books for themselves!

Leadership is the quality most needed in the club world today, comments the executive secretary of an important national organization.

"So many of the women are floundering," she says. "They are dissatisfied with the way their clubs are going along, especially at a time like this. Many of them are spiritually and mentally bored with their programs. They have ideas, but they can't seem to crystalize them.

"I think there are two chief reasons for this. They haven't enough concrete information to lead to concrete action. And they're afraid of getting into hot water. They want to avoid starting something new because that's likely to lead to controversy."

This veteran club worker has a suggestion for developing leadership. "Give them responsibility, and even those most inclined to sit back and leave it to some one else can be changed into the most valuable workers. I've seen it happen again and again."

There are good grounds for differing with this experienced observer as to the need for leadership. It is safe to say that there are just as many outstanding women in club work today as there were in the years when the club movement was in its palmiest days of expansion.

In fact, since there were infinitely fewer club women in the early years when clubs were making some of their most important civic contributions, it is probably safe to say that there are more outstanding women in club work today than ever before.

One of the most fearless of these leaders is Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, Md., first vice president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and one of its most constructive critics. She has called the federation a machine perfectly geared for action, needing only purpose and spirit to serve it as motive power. Her dynamic talks in which she calls on members to furnish that motive power have offended a certain conservative minority at times, but she is expected to become the federation's next president.

Take, too, Mrs. Burnett D. Warner. As president of the Chicago Woman's club, where that much discussed conversation on what's wrong with women's clubs took place, she followed up the first conversation with an invitation to hold a second one at the club, and herself invited key leaders to join in the discussion.

Mrs. Burnett D. Warner.

The second conversation brought out the fact that leadership alone is not the answer to the problem. Again and again, the size of clubs and the difficulty of galvanizing the great numbers of members into action was emphasized.

As Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation, put it so graphically at the national convention last spring, "The federation must be forged as a spearhead for action!"

This is a more difficult task today, the clubwomen made it clear, when there are thousands to be drawn into the current of the club movement than in the days when there were only scores or tens.

Yet without the active support of its rank and file the club movement obviously cannot gain the momentum sufficient to carry thru the projects initiated by its leaders.

At present, as clubwoman after clubwoman testified the other day, significant projects all too frequently are sent to committees and kept there, where the majority of members have little or no contact with them.

The suggestion was made that one way to interest more of the members in more of the projects might be to reduce the number of projects and to concentrate on those enlisting the greatest enthusiasm.

So much for "what's wrong with women's clubs." As to the good they have accomplished, the countless worthwhile contributions they have made, that's another story. Perhaps it can be told in part, at least, another time.

Three Seek to Blaze the Trail to Cape Horn

DETROIT, MICH.

Detroit to Cape Horn. Across 14,000 miles of North and South America, thru tremendous expanses of jungle and over high mountains which never have been traversed by automobile.

That is the ambitious undertaking of the Richardson Pan-American highway expedition, which will leave Detroit Monday morning to attempt what nobody ever has done—drive a car all the way from the United States to the lower end of South America.

The purpose is "to promote inter-American good will and the construction of the Pan-American highway."

The expedition will be headed by Sullivan C. Richardson, a Detroit newspaper man, who has a record for successful explorations in Mexico and southern Utah. He will be accompanied on this adventure by Arnold Whitaker and Kenneth C. Van Hee, also of Detroit.

They will travel in a car especially built for the expedition. It has a 54 gallon gasoline tank which will give the machine a range of 500 miles. It will carry ropes, block and tackle, picks, shovels, chains, and special tools for getting a car thru places a car is not supposed to go.

Reserves of axles, springs, and other parts have been shipped to points along the 14,000 mile route to be available if the terrific road conditions prove to be too much even for the sturdy car. Special tires, moulded for the expedition, will house inner tubes half an inch thick.

Those are the bare facts, but those details do not tell the story.

The story will emerge from the difficulties the Detroiters will encounter in the jungles and mountains.

Americans will be able to follow the progress of the expedition. Richardson has arranged to send back accounts and pictures, to be printed in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and other newspapers.

Furthermore, he will take along 26,000 feet of colored motion picture film and other thousands of feet of black and white film to record the progress of the undertaking.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcomed. Please keep them brief. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

TRIBUNE SERVICE.

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 4.—To the Travel Editor: I want to thank "The Voice of the Traveler" for its quick and efficient service, and to state that the world's greatest newspaper certainly does get around.

On Sunday, Oct. 27, you published my inquiry about the whereabouts of a young lady who lived in England, whose name I had first seen in your columns, and with whom I had been corresponding for some time. I had not heard from her for several months, and was quite concerned about her. My impression was that she had come to America.

After you had published my query, I received letters from persons in various parts of the United States, asking me to let them know if I succeeded in locating the lady. And last Saturday I had a letter from her, saying she had come to this country a short time ago and had not had time to advise me of her arrival.

Needless to say, I was thrilled to know she had arrived safely, and, thanks to your column, I am looking forward to meeting her real soon. J. CHAPMAN.

THANK YOU DEPARTMENT.

Rock Island, Ill., Oct. 20.—To the Travel Editor: I should like to take this opportunity to thank, thru your columns, all the generous persons who responded to my plea for information on the Canal Zone. I was overwhelmed with letters—all of them very interesting. I wish I had time to reply to each one.

MRS. S. E. RANDALL.

Canada Expects Record Ski Year

MONTREAL, Que.—The Laurentian playground north of Montreal is looking for a record ski season. Despite the war, advance bookings are ahead of last year. New resorts are going up in every town between Shawbridge and Mont Tremblant. Four new skitows are being built—one at Ste. Marguerite, one at Ste. Agathe, and the other two at Ste. Adele. New ski schools are being organized, with European and Canadian instructors.

A system of reporting snow conditions, in which ski instructors, resort associations and railroad officials will participate, will provide a correct analysis of ski conditions.

INDUSTRIAL PROPERTIES.

NEW 1 STORY PLANT
Ready in 60 Days!
BUILT TO SUIT YOUR Own Requirements.
Clearing Industrial District, Inc., has sufficient steel, lumber and building material in stock for 1 building 200,000 sq. ft. or a number of plants of smaller size, aggregating 200,000 sq. ft. These plants can be completed and delivered within 60 days. After this supply of steel and lumber is exhausted delivery of 4 to 5 months may be expected and costs will be greater.
We have available plans and estimates covering one story plants of nearly every size and type. Plants will be financed, designed, and delivered on either long term lease or a sale financed over a period of years.
The Clearing Industrial District owns districts both northwest and southwest in plentiful labor areas and has its own architects, construction division, etc. so that it is necessary to deal with only one party to cover all phases of the transaction toward obtaining a completed building all ready to move into. Provision always made for future expansion. Switch track optional.
It is our suggestion that any building contemplated in the next few months be built now.
FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CALL RANDOLPH 0136 OR WRITE.

MOTORS—TRAFFIC—HIGHWAYS

GASOLINE PLAYS A THANKSGIVING ROLE OF IMPORT

It's More in Usage Now Than Brandy Sauce.

BY HAL FOUST.

This is turkey week. Traditionally, the holiday is devoted to family feasts at home hearths. But the automobile, when it redesigned residences, commerce, society, and even family life, also motorized Thanksgiving.

More gasoline than brandy sauce will be burned next Thursday. Petroleum fuel will assemble relatives scattered by current economics. Chicagoans, thousands of them, will return to home towns to dine with aunts and uncles. Other city dwellers will eat drum sticks at farm tables where food is plentiful regardless of any AAA program.

Four Days Off for Some.

Other thousands of Chicagoans, judging from inquiries at The Tribune travel bureau and at the Chicago Motor club, will tour the highways on Thursday. Many of those who ordinarily do not work on Saturday and Sunday also will be away from their offices and shops on Friday, so as to have a four day vacation. Most of these vacations are to be spent on trips.

Before discussing these trips it might be well to mention that the one-day Thanksgiving observance is likewise motorized in many instances. The family residing in a small apartment doesn't care so much about remaining between the walls of their home on a holiday. For the wife particularly the attractions of a home-cooked meal is not great as the attractions of an automobile trip.

Eat on the Road, Too.

Therefore next Thursday there will be almost as many families enjoying the holiday with changing views thru a windshield as there will be families enjoying the holiday with an exchange of views at proverbial firesides. Hotels and roadside eating places catering to travelers will be serving turkey dinners to those who will spend Thanksgiving on the highways.

The four-day vacationists, judging from the inquiries at the travel bureaus, will be driving distances that a few years ago were considered hardships. According to Bert Vanderwarf, manager of the Chicago Motor club, many are getting route information for trips to New Orleans and Gulf of Mexico resorts, involving about 2,000 miles of wheeling. Other popular destinations this week-end will be the Smokie mountains, Manmouth Cave National park, and the Ozark mountains.

VOICE OF TRAFFIC

ALMOST AN ACCIDENT.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—To an Oak Parker: Sunday morning, Oct. 27, at about 10:30, you crossed Division street at a 30-mile speed. You paid no attention to me at all, coming from your right, at a 20-mile speed.

You would be in the hospital now except for my constant alertness on intersections. But why did you run away? You heard my brakes screech [a new car], and when you saw me turn north to Berkshire, you headed west on that street and "disappeared."

I merely wanted to tell you, Oak Parker, that you were never closer to being hit broadsides. A CAREFUL CHICAGOAN.

REPORTS TAX DODGER.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—As I understand the law, all residents of Chicago are compelled to buy, in addition to the state license, a city vehicle sticker. I know of one party living in the 5600 block of South Campbell avenue who drives a big sedan, complete with one state license plate, no city sticker, no safety sticker, and parks in the street all night every night without lights. Can anything be done to prevent this all night parking? It is a dangerous and unlawful practice.
READER.

ON CENTRAL AVENUE.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Traffic on Central avenue is very heavy and dangerous. It is getting worse every day. It is difficult for one to cross to the opposite side unless you are near a stop and go traffic light. To make a left turn one must wait.

Between Fullerton and Diversey avenues drivers race like maniacs, causing accidents which could have been avoided had we stop and go lights at Wrightwood avenue and Central avenue, which is midway. The new viaduct bridge across the Milwaukee railroad tracks and Grand avenue increases the hazards of this Central avenue race and slaughter track. How many people must get killed before a stop and go light will be erected at Central and Wrightwood avenues? There is plenty of money [from gas taxes and auto licenses] for the people's protection and safety. J. H. GOODSON.

RECKLESS BUS DRIVER.

Berwyn, Ill., Oct. 30.—Yesterday evening at 4:50 p. m. a Bluebird system motor bus arrived at the Harlem avenue intersection on Joliet road near Lyons, Ill., to find about 25 cars waiting at the traffic signal there. Traveling at 45 miles per hour, the driver took advahtage of the changing lights to swerve into the third lane, dash by the waiting cars, and swing dangerously onto Harlem avenue—narrowly missing a head-on collision with several westbound cars. The same driver almost sideswiped some other motorists when leaving his Lyons terminal a few minutes before.

The Bluebird system recently has expanded its operations in Berwyn and Lyons, and unless their drivers are soon cooled down, these suburbs may well anticipate an increase in traffic fatalities. The Illinois Commerce commission should question the existence of public utilities which regard the general safety so lightly. CUTLER HUMISTON.

SAVE THE CHICKENS.

Fairbury, Ill., Sept. 15.—Motorists touring Illinois highways can give the chickens a break by blowing their horn in several short blasts and get a laugh out of it at the same time when the chickens make for the ditch. We the farmers have trained the chickens to obey the auto horn. EFF AYE ZEE.

TRUCK INDUSTRY CHALLENGED BY ARMS PROGRAM

Interstate Red Tape Hampers Growth.

BY TED V. RODGERS.
[President, American Trucking Associations, Inc.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—The national defense program, whose very essence is speedy and unhampered transportation of materials, presents the American trucking industry with its first real hope of freedom from restrictions and red tape that have threatened to stifle it.

The rapid growth of the trucking industry is one of the major business developments of the last two decades. The obstacles it faces have been, and still are, far greater than those born of ordinary competition. Early in the 1920s there began an upward growth of taxation and regulation. Legislation has grown so fast that the operator needs advice at every turn.

State Line Barriers.

Every state line crossed means red tape, taxes, new rules, using one truck in one state and two in the next, adding license plates, checking in at ports of entry, and being weighed. [The permissible pay load in Texas is 7,000 pounds as against 114,000 in Nevada.]

A century and a half have passed since the constitution outlawed state levies on imports from other states. In the last few years, however, many states have set up ports of entry.

Ostensibly these are to insure trucking lines' compliance with local laws. Actually they are devices to collect fees from motor carriers. Kansas alone has 66 of these ports.

Better Laws Sought.

And stabilization is not yet in sight. The motor carrier must become acquainted with the Transportation act of 1940, even tho the Motor Carrier act, which it amends, is less than five years old. It was amended in 1938. In some of the states, however, investigations are under way that may result in new and better laws.

But, as stated before, the greatest hope is the government's defense program. There is some hope that the Interstate Commerce commission may bring some uniformity in state laws, regarding to size and weight of the trucks. A precedent for this is its safety program, which fixed a pattern later adopted by many states. There are many battles yet to be fought, but we in the industry look to the future with confidence.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Two girls, Virginia Campbell and Joselyn Reynolds, recently completed a 3,070 drive from New York City to Los Angeles in a De Soto fluid drive in which the only time the gearshift and clutch were operated was at the start. After the single operation which put the car into gear, automatic counters governing the clutch and gearshift were sealed. At the end of the trip it was found that the girls had not used the clutch or gearshift once. A De Soto with standard transmission, which accompanied the car for comparative purposes, also was equipped with automatic counters which showed that there were 4,097 gearshifts and 4,162 clutch operations. L. G. Peed, De Soto vice president, said that before making the long trip neither girl had had more than ordinary experience behind the wheel.

B. J. Brady, Chicago zone manager for Chevrolet, said that Chevrolet dealers in the Chicago area set new high marks in sales during October. They sold a total of 3,842 new passenger and commercial cars during the month, a gain of 141.3 per cent over October, 1939.

Resignation of W. A. James, widely known in the automobile industry, as merchandising manager of the Hudson Motor Car company was announced by George Pratt, general sales manager. He is succeeded by M. M. Roberts. James, who had been with Hudson 20 years, resigned because of ill health.

With the heavy work connected with the Chicago Automobile show behind them, car dealers in the Chicago area are redoubling their efforts to reach the Community Fund quota set for the automobile division, James F. Goodwin, north side Dodge-Plymouth dealer, and chairman, said yesterday. Goodwin has organized the Chicago area into subcommittees with prominent dealers in charge of each group.

"ALKALIZE" UPSETTING STOMACH ACIDS THIS AMAZING PHILLIPS' WAY

It's hard to avoid it if you're friendly and gay . . . AND IF you over-indulge—eat or drink too much . . . stay out all hours . . . you're due to "pay the piper" in the morning. You're in for a session of OVER-ACIDITY of the stomach that can get you really down and spoil the whole next day. There's no use to fool with slow, makeshift remedies or "potions." Only a thorough, FAST ALKALIZATION can combat excess stomach acidity.

The QUICK, EFFECTIVE way is to follow the routine in the pictures here . . . with, remember Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia . . . one of the most remarkable alkalizers known. Just two tablespoonfuls at bedtime and two in the morning with your orange juice...that's all.

But the results: You will literally be astonished. You'll be on top of the world when you wake up. For, while you sleep, that Phillips' goes to work to thoroughly neutralize the excess stomach acids over-indulgence brings on. No "morning-after" depression. No nausea. It's wonderful . . . you're alert . . . full of vitality . . . at your best.

Try this remarkable method after your next party. See for yourself what it does.

But to get the results you want, be sure it's genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Get either liquid or tablet form at any drug store.

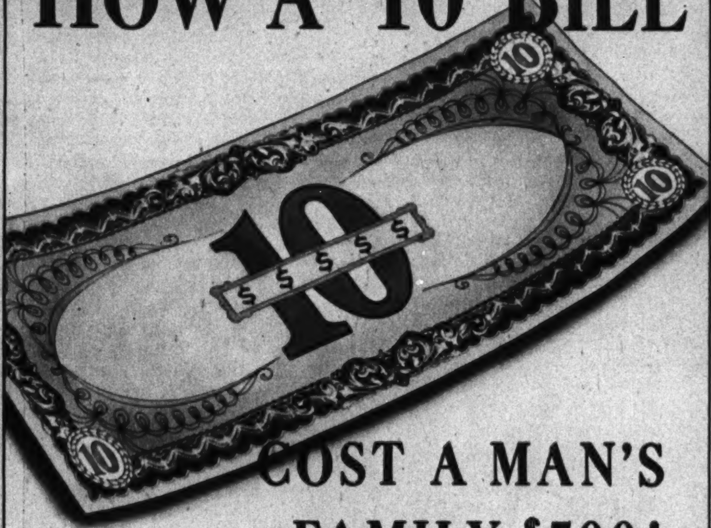
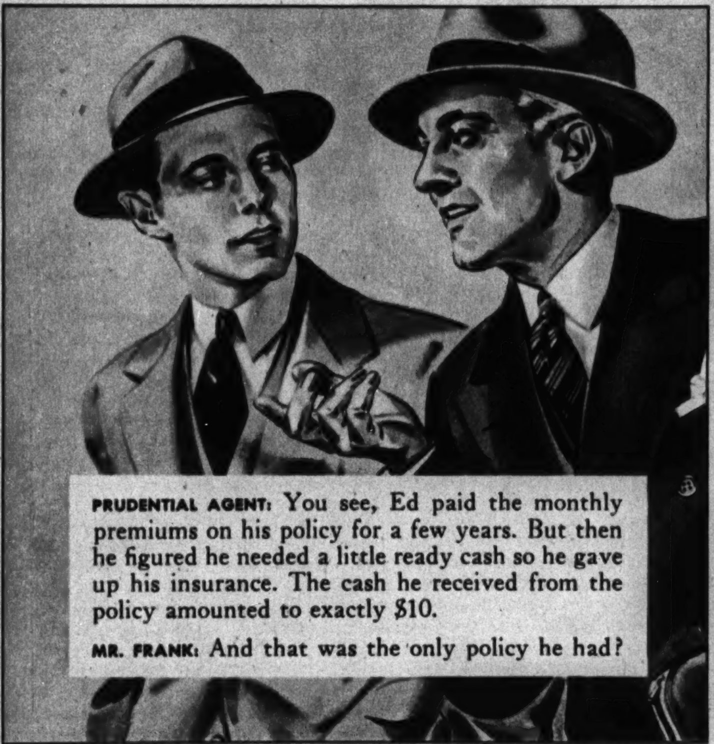
HOW A $10 BILL COST A MAN'S FAMILY $500!



MR. FRANK: Ed's death was an awful tragedy, Mr. Watson. His wife tells me he had given up his life insurance only a couple of months ago.

PRUDENTIAL AGENT: Yes, Mr. Frank, his case is an example of the danger of leaving a family without protection. It wouldn't have cost Ed very much to have kept his policy in force, but he surrendered it for just $10.



PRUDENTIAL AGENT: You see, Ed paid the monthly premiums on his policy for a few years. But then he figured he needed a little ready cash so he gave up his insurance. The cash he received from the policy amounted to exactly $10.

MR. FRANK: And that was the only policy he had?

PRUDENTIAL AGENT: That's right. If he'd kept it in full force, or let it run under extended insurance, his wife would have received $500. But because he surrendered it she was left with hardly a cent.

MR. FRANK: What a shame. It certainly pays to keep one's life insurance in force.

AMERICAN GIRL 1941

Eyes bright as stars . . . Hair brushed to shining . . . Cheeks—clean, fresh, sweet as a newly flowered rose . . . Attire trim as a uniform, or—a benison of grace and soft enchantment . . .

Thus stands our American Girl of today. An eager, spirited thing. Brimming with life. Disciplined in living. Swift to serve as today's swift events demand.

That jewel brightness is part of her unchanging tradition of high health and personal beauty.

In her primer of true breeding there are five flaming requisites to the meticulous care of her face—the clear and treasured edicts long laid down by Pond's:—

BATHE the face lavishly, attentively, both night and morning, with quantities of luscious Pond's Cold Cream. With unstinting, zealous fingers, spank this cream's fragrant and freshening unctuousness into the skin of face and throat. Spank for 3 full minutes—even five. This swift and obedient cream has two functions. One, cleansing. The other, softening. It does your bidding by mixing with the dried, dead cells, dirt and make-up on the surface of your skin, softening and setting them free.

WIPE OFF all this softened debris with the fresh caressing absorbency of Pond's Tissues. With it you have removed some of the softened tops of blackheads—rendered it easier for little plugs of hardened sebum to push their way to the surface.

SPANK again with fresh fingerfuls of gracious Pond's Cold Cream. And again wipe off with downy Pond's Tissues. This spanking enhances both the cleansing and the softening actions of this Pond's Cold Cream face bath. Your skin emerges from it infinitely refreshed, touched with the warming glow of a gentle exercise. Lines seem softened. Pores seem finer.

COOL with the faint intriguing astringence of Pond's Skin Freshener, splashed on with cotton dripping wet with it. Then a few seconds to dry.

MASK your whole face, for one full minute, with a blissful coating of Pond's Vanishing Cream. This delectable cream, so innocent of greasiness, has as one of its chief missions in life the duty of dispersing remaining harsh particles, chappings, aftermath of exposure. When you wipe it off, it leaves a perceptible mat finish, the petal look you've dreamed of. This is its second mission. Then with what enchantment your powder goes on. How surprisingly it holds.

This brief Pond's ritual has taken but five to ten minutes. Perform it in full once daily—before retiring or during the day. And again in abbreviated form as your skin needs freshening and your make-up renewing.

Carry your head freely in proud awareness of a skin kept beautifully fresh and flower soft as is your right.

Guard your skin's tender look and feel, as do so many members of America's most distinguished families, as, indeed, do millions of lovely American girls—with Pond's. Already some thirteen million women in the United States use Pond's.

GIVE-AWAY for the thrifty minded—Frankly to lure you to our larger cream jars, which are actually a better buy, we are handing you FREE (for a limited period) a tempting supply of our equally authoritative hand lotion, DANYA, with each purchase of the medium-size Pond's Cold Cream. Both for the price of the cream! At beauty counters everywhere.

Presto Cake Flour

Opens up a new world of cake baking for any woman

Finer cakes with less fuss—the Presto Speed-Up Way

1 Rolling a cake on a roller is easy. Have waxed paper 18 inches longer than cake. Crumple 18-inch end for "roller," sprinkle rest of paper thickly with powdered sugar, turn hot cake onto sugar. Trim edges. Roll cake over roller. Cool.

2 When roll has cooled, unroll it for spreading. Cake will be slightly convex—easier to reroll without cracking. Spread a strip of cranberry-orange mix at one end for "center." Spread rest of cake with cream cheese and roll tightly.

3 Now comes the glaze. Spread outside of cake with cranberry-orange mixture. Decorate with "leaves" of cream cheese and candied cranberries.

The Harvest Log

A not-too-sweet dessert with a delicious new cranberry-orange spread. Easy to make the Presto Speed-Up Way.

Sift, measure.......1 c. PRESTO Cake Flour. Set one side.
Beat frothy........¾ c. egg whites (about 6).
Add to whites......½ tsp. cream of tartar. Beat stiff.
Add to whites......½ c. sugar. Beat till points are formed.
Now add another....½ c. sugar
To................½ c. egg yolks (about 6). Beat thick and light colored. Fold these carefully and lightly into the egg white mixture. Fold in PRESTO Cake Flour. Have ready large shallow pan or tray—about 12 x 18 inches—greased, lined with waxed paper and the paper greased. Spread batter evenly. Bake. Tear off a strip of waxed paper about 1½ feet longer than cake. Sprinkle thickly with powdered sugar at one end—the length of the cake. When cake is done turn out onto sugared paper immediately. Remove paper from the bottom. With sharp knife trim off crisp crusts from all edges. Crumple up plain end of waxed paper for a "roller." Roll up the hot cake and permit it to cool rolled up. When cool, unroll carefully and spread ¼ inch thick with white cream cheese (about ½ lb.) softened with milk. Roll up tightly and frost with Cranberry Glaze. For smaller cake use ½ this recipe and a pan about 9 x 12 inches.
Bake: 350°—20 to 25 minutes Serves: 12 slices

Cranberry Glaze

Grind..................2 c. raw cranberries. (Use medium knife on grinder.)
Wash, quarter, grind....1 large orange—unpeeled.
Add to fruit............1¼ c. sugar. Stir. Let stand until sugar is dissolved.
To this mixture add.....1 tbsp. plain unflavored gelatine which has been Soaked in..............¼ c. cold water and dissolved over hot water. As mixture thickens spread over roll except on ends. Garnish with white cream cheese and candied cranberries if desired. Some of jellied cranberry mixture may be placed in center of roll if desired. Store in cool place till served.

Remember—no baking powder or salt when you use Presto Cake Flour.

THE PRESTO SPEED-UP PLAN

Less sifting

Less mixing time

Less clean-up time

—and a better cake (The "Presto" Ingredient does it)

Now you can stir up beautiful cakes on short notice—have "party" desserts whenever you think of them—and count on surer success by the Presto Speed-Up Plan.

Presto Cake Flour is the modern, streamlined flour. It contains just the right amount of the ingredient we call "Presto*," scientifically pre-measured and pre-blended in exactly the right proportion with a flour famous for its fine, tender gluten. This eliminates the need of baking powder and salt—the incorrect kind, amount and mixing of which is the most frequent cause of costly baking failures. Presto works better in all your recipes.

Presto Cake Flour is also the quicker way to better pastries, biscuits, waffles and cookies. A great new idea at an everyday price. Write "Presto Cake Flour" on tomorrow's grocery list.

"I've found it's silly to work like a dog on washday!"

Mrs. Maude Murphy, 7738 South Wood Street, Chicago

Read why Mrs. Maude Murphy, 7738 South Wood Street, Chicago, has continued to use Chicago's modern laundry service ever since trying it six years ago . . .

"At first I kidded myself into thinking that doing my own laundry wasn't so bad. But how tired I got of that same awful drudgery week after week. And once I discovered that the laundry could do our things better than I could—no matter how hard I worked—well, I use the laundry for everything now.

"Clothes come back much cleaner and sweeter-smelling than when I did them. After all, the laundry has the very latest equipment—no wonder a mere housewife can't do as good work. My laundry does the whole job, ironing and everything. Our bill for the three of us runs about $1.25 a week."

Clean, Hot Water PASTEURIZES Clothes at the Laundry . . . Chicago laundries use more water in washing and rinsing clothes than the average housewife could afford to use at home. Water is completely changed from 10 to 12 times for a single batch of clothes. Water temperatures are controlled exactly. Prolonged washing in extremely hot water actually pasteurizes white clothes—a great health benefit.

To permit the use of milder soaps (milder soaps than you could use effectively at home), laundries soften all water to the zero point. This is only one of many steps the laundry takes to safeguard clothes against wear and tear.

How long has it been since you've sent your clothes to a modern laundry? Wonderful improvements have been made in service during the last few years. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been invested in new equipment. You can select any type of service from damp wash or fluff dry to completely finished work. There is a service to fit your budget and special requirements.

*Enjoy a 10-minute washday—just the time needed to gather up and list your clothes.

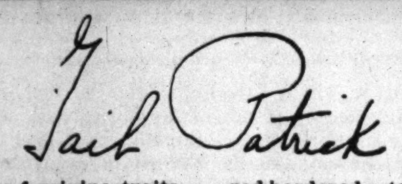
Match Your Handwriting WITH THE HOLLYWOOD STARS!

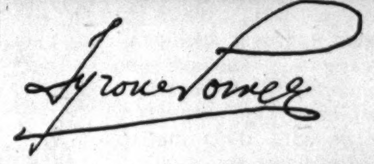
By SHIRLEY SPENCER



THERE are lots of girls with characters and personalities just like Gail Patrick's, and so there should be a great many of the young woman readers who find that their handwriting is something like Miss Patrick's. The reason for this similarity is that she has so many typically feminine traits. She is gently affectionate, likes a home environment, is conscientious, somewhat timid in venturing far from conventional patterns, sensitive to criticism, and very much concerned with making a pleasing appearance. She is dainty and neat, shy, and under ordinary circumstances would not be overly confident or ambitious, but since going into the movies her signature has developed large capitals. She tells me that this is her professional signature, but that her personal signature is still very small.

Look at your own writing and see if you make very small, light letter formations like these made by Miss Patrick. She uses red ink on her red-bordered stationery — another indication of her interest in pretty accessories. Most of her letter formations are the conventional type used by the average American young woman, so she is typically an American girl.

The large capitals "G" and "P" show how much her appearances on the screen have bolstered up confidence in herself. What kind of capitals do you make? Each has a meaning.



IF YOUR best girl sighs ecstatically when handsome Tyrone Power smiles on the screen, do you wonder what he has that you haven't got? Here is your chance to find out! Compare your handwriting with his and see if you have some of the same characteristics which have sent him to fame and fortune.

Tyrone Power's handwriting reveals personality PLUS, and that soaring "P" is loaded with romantic imagination. He can turn on the charm because he has a wealth of magnetism, as his long, powerful pen strokes reveal. His open, large letter forms tell us that he gives generously of himself. (That is something for the disgruntled young men to remember.)

His confidence and poise are shown in the long, firm underscore. Notice the hook on that stroke and on the end of the "y" and the beginning stroke of the "P." These hooks reveal tenacity and determination to realize the dreams and ambitions which the inflated loop of the "P" and the tall "T" indicate. Notice the ease and grace with which he combines his letter forms.

Mr. Power is an A 1 extrovert, and that spells popularity anywhere, any time. He is very social and loves an audience, so that he can be expressing himself and using the greatest asset he has—his personality. Are you the personality type? Send in your handwriting and let me tell you.

DO YOU imagine that you are cool and self-contained, simple and direct in speech? If you think that describes your character, take a look at the handwriting of Bette Davis and see how your handwriting compares with hers in size, slant, and letter formations.

You will notice that Miss Davis writes a slightly backhand script, entirely unornamented, showing her unsentimental attitude and her straightforward frankness in speech. She doesn't go in for frills. Notice how bluntly the terminals of her letters end. That tells you not to expect tact from Miss Davis. When she tells you what she thinks she doesn't mince words. However, she doesn't always say all she thinks, as that closed "a" indicates. She only tells you what she wants you to know. How about your small "a's"? Do you leave them open, or do you close them up with looped strokes as Miss Davis did in the last half of her signature?

Miss Davis' simplified script shows a determination to stand or fall on merit. When she makes up her mind she is not easily persuaded to change it, as those short, heavy down strokes indicate. However, don't think Miss Davis is unfriendly, for she certainly is not that. Any one who makes garland letters—like the joining of the "v" and "i" in "Davis"—can always make friends.

How well can you keep a secret? You can keep one if you close your "a's" with an extra stroke as Miss Davis does.

MICKEY ROONEY has a strongly developed sense of comedy. That is different from a sense of humor. The first is sensing and being able to do things which make other people laugh, while the latter is being able to enjoy the humor that the first creates.

Mickey's signature looks like some of the comic attitudes he assumes that delight his fans. He has a real dramatic flair and is more creative than the average movie star. A romantic hero just has to be himself on the screen, but Mickey doesn't depend on his looks; he gives his characterizations an original twist. This creative talent is shown clearly in his unusual signature.

His handwriting shows that he is inventive, and if he hadn't gone into the movies he might have found a place for himself in the field of science. He undoubtedly will develop a high degree of technical skill in the field he is in, because when a boy has a keen, analytical mind and a technical bent he finds some way to make use of that specialized talent. Industry, the army, and the navy are looking for this type of young man.

How about you—have you technical skill and a scientific trend of mind? Compare your writing with Mickey's and see if you write small, angular, and not very well formed letters. Is your handwriting foreshortened and blunt like his? Send in your writing to me and let me tell you what type you are.

Yale—Birthplace of the Old College Try

It Pioneered Vigorous Life

By LLOYD WENDT

The old Yale fence, site of many a town-gown battle.

FRANK MERRIWELL was the collegiate hero of the paper-backed novels. When he matriculated at Yale that institution not only won every game it played but it became the pedagogical paradise of almost every youth who lived in the wide-eyed nineties.

Frank Merriwell stepped full grown from Gilbert Patten's imagination just at the time Walter Camp, the great Yale coach, had fathered football into the realm of respectability, and the Yale crew was winning its amazing series of victories. Yale, in that golden age of Merriwell and Camp, stamped its pattern of college life as we know it today upon American universities and high schools. Bands and cheer leaders, class fights, special honors and secret societies, vast sports programs, all the trappings of modern education, find their origin, or their popularization, in the university at New Haven.

Walter Camp in later years.

Yale, with the help of Camp and Patten, sold the college idea to a tough young country in the days when the term "Harvard indifference" was the badge of the dilettante. College in the nineties had to compete with Buffalo Bill, Deadwood Dick, the wild west, and Indians. That Yale had great libraries, fine laboratories, splendid journals, eminent savants, and a position of leadership in the development of new world research and culture didn't mean as much to young America as a good drop kick, an 80-yard run, or an iron crew. Yale came thru with such sterner stuff, and the results are with us yet.

There is nothing in the origin of Yale college at Saybrook, Conn., on Nov. 11, 1701, to suggest that it would some day represent the American boy's dream of higher education. The little school at Saybrook was established "to propagate in the wilderness the blessed reformed Protestant religion in the purity of its order and worship." Staid Harvard was considered too frivolous by the Rev. Israel Chauncy, Thomas Buckingham, the Pierponts, and the others who founded Yale.

In 1717 the college at Saybrook was moved to New Haven and named Yale college in honor of Elihu Yale of London, who made a gift of books and merchandise to the school. In those years Yale graduates were almost exclusively ministers or tutors, yet a flair for showmanship and light amusement crept in. The college records show that some of the students were addicted to card playing, and at commencement time, instead of adhering to a strict program of Latin discourses, the graduates began to present dialogs and plays!

Ebenezer Baldwin, writing a history of Yale in 1832, piously hoped that those unseemly ornamentations would soon be ended. Aside from the moral effect of the plays, said Baldwin, they were intrinsically no good. "In the absence of scenery, unsupported by female actors, and on a stage surrounded by a circle of clergymen and senators, every effort for dramatic display at commencement must prove abortive," he observed.

Yale students of those days were wont to sit on the college "fence" under the elms on College street and hatch out poetry, brochures, and minor disturbances not at all pleasing to the stolid New Haven citizenry. That probably was the birth of the college mob spirit later to be expressed in class fights and interclass football.

Near the fence was South dormitory, home of the senior class, and it was there early in the 1800s that the high jinks now accepted as a part of college life began first to appear. The inhabitants of South, for example, invented the sport of rolling heated cannonballs against tutors' feet; started the practice of filling the college bells with water in the winter, permitting them to freeze solid; and they regularly fetched to chapel various domesticated and wild animals.

Early in the 19th century began one of the first of Yale ceremonials, the burial of Euclid. The sophomores gathered in winter or late autumn to perforate a volume of Euclid with a red-hot poker. This signified that the sophomore had "gone thru" Euclid. A funeral service, attended by all of the student body, was then held in one of the halls, complete with dirge, prayer, and sermons in Latin.

This was followed by a lugubrious torchlighted procession to the burial ground in the woods on Tutors' lane. The procession probably was the forerunner of all the snake dances, torchlight processions, and calcium light ceremonies that have been seen in colleges and high schools since.

Ever since the 1750s, when New Haven townsfolk complained of the Yale fence sitters, there was recurrent trouble between the students and townsmen, finally culminating in the town and gown riots. While no one has ever approved such rioting, investigation showed the Yale students to be largely blameless, and they impressed the country with their mettle in the days when the student was often considered a fop and a dandy.

The first riot is recorded in 1772, and thereafter the students often battled boisterous sailors who swaggered to the college green from the water front, looking for trouble. Later the New Haven firemen joined the feud. In 1841 the firemen precipitated a serious fight when they held a water-throwing demonstration near the green, where an interclass football game was being played. Hotheaded southern students in the school refused to let the Yankee smoke eaters get away with it. The Yale boys drove off the firemen and then attacked the High street fire station. There were many bruised heads, and three students were arrested.

Finally the students appointed a class protector to lead their ranks in riots. He was given the appropriate title of "class bully," and he carried a club. This class office existed for years, but has now been discarded.

The worst of the riots occurred in March, 1854, when Yale students attending Homan's theater noisily booed an Irish singer whose ballads particularly pleased the firemen.

There was a fight outside the theater when the show ended, and the next night the Yale boys jammed the house.

The firemen came in force also, aided by a group of longshoremen led by Pat O'Neill. As the students left the theater they were warned of their danger by the police, and they marched off in closed ranks for protection. The mob followed.

Opposite Trinity church the students began singing the "Gaudeamus," their favorite Latin song. Somehow this display of erudition infuriated the mob. There was a rush upon the Yales. O'Neill seized John Sims, a student from Mississippi, and attempted to drag him from the Yale ranks. One observer said Sims struck O'Neill with an iron bar. Another said Sims drew a knife and stabbed his adversary. In any event, O'Neill was slain, and an even greater mob attacked the students in College street.

The youths obtained pistols and opened fire. Bricks, stones, and bullets flew. Aim in general was bad, and there were no serious wounds or further fatalities. A coroner's jury found that O'Neill came to his death at the hands of persons unknown. From then on the "Gaudeamus" was casus belli at any New Haven fire station.

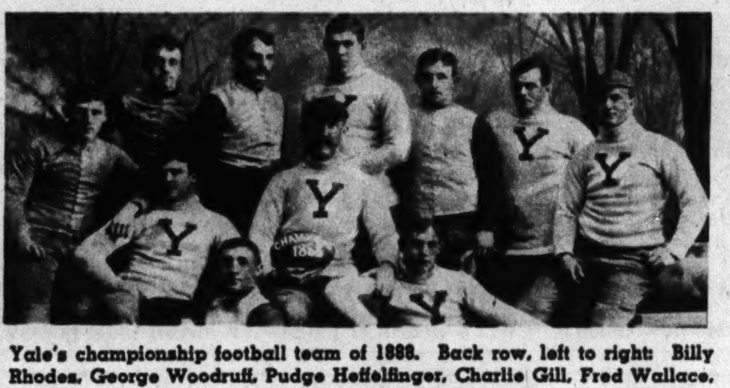
Modern college societies and "rushing" of new members probably had their origin at Yale in the customs of the Linconia and the Brothers in Unity debating societies, which regularly rushed the incoming freshmen as soon as the sophomores had finished hazing them. Valedictorian and salutatorian honors for the highest senior scholars date back to 1798. For nearly 100 years these scholastic honors were the most sought after in school. They have since been abandoned at Yale, althc they survive in many other colleges and in many high schools.



Yale's championship football team of 1888. Back row, left to right: Billy Rhodes, George Woodruff, Pudge Heffelfinger, Charlie Gill, Fred Wallace, Billy Bull. Center row: A. A. Stagg, Lee McClung, Capt. W. H. Corbin. Front row: W. C. Wurtemberg, Billy Graves.

For years at the dinner clubs there was a custom of awarding the wooden spoon to the most popular student. Despite the high reputation of the wooden spoon, it became a junior class political spoil and the ceremony died out.

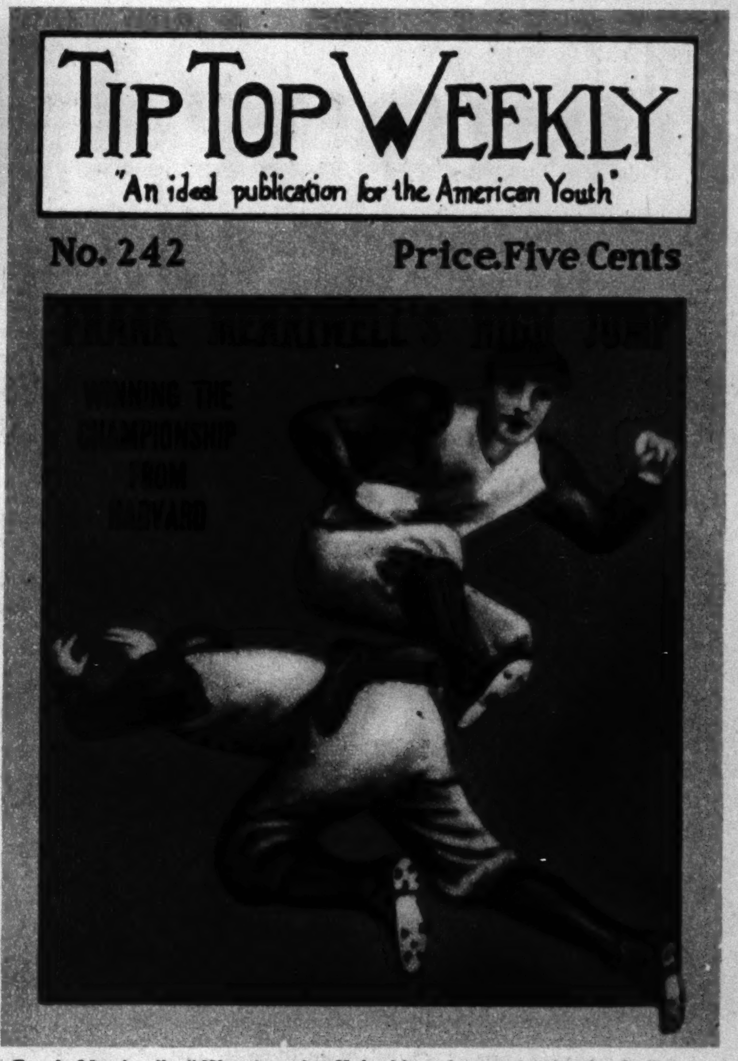
The Yale tap day ceremonies, renowned thru the college world, were initiated about 1850 by the senior secret societies. These societies, modeled after ritualistic clubs in European universities, are really secret. They meet in barred and windowless tombs, and their esoteric lore is guarded by sacred vows.

Election to one of the six societies is regarded by many as the highest honor a Yale undergraduate can receive. Pledges are selected from the junior class on tap day, the second Thursday in May. On the stroke of 5, representatives of the societies go among the juniors and pick their men by slapping them on the back. Tap day as it is known now was instituted in 1871 on insistence of the faculty. Prior to that the societies kidnaped their neophytes. Competition for the choicest men was fierce, and fighting between the organizations forced the adoption of the more peaceful tap day method.

Oddly, the members of the various junior societies are chosen in the fall of their sophomore year, during rush week. On Friday night at the conclusion of rush week the pledges to the societies speak their vows, and there follows the calcium light parade, one of the most colorful of Yale demonstrations.

It is in sports, however, that the Yale influence is particularly felt. Yale invented modern football and presented the first great football coach — Walter Camp. Yale was the first American college to take up rowing. Its record of 164 swimming meets without defeat is unequaled anywhere, and the Yale record is a distinguished one in other sports.

Yale was playing a kind of football as early as 1820. Playing is hardly the word, for the football battles were between the freshman and sophomore classes and there was little playful about them. The gridiron was between Temple and College streets near Center church. The ball was an inflated beef bladder covered with leather. If it was not possible to kick the ball, the object of the game was served by kicking the shins of an opponent.



Frank Merriwell—"Wearing the Yale blue, he made the football team every year, won all the Harvard games single-handed . . ."

The interclass football games brought out the old college spirit so much with us today. Jubilant football celebrants used the snake dance developed in the junior class calcium light ceremony to express their elation. The games also brought out class yells, most famous of which is that taken from Aristophanes' "The Frogs," which has now become the Yale cheer:

Brek, kek, kek, kex,
Koax, koax.
Brek, kek, kek, kex,
Koax, koax.
O-op, o-op,
Paraboulou.
Yale! Yale! Yale!
(Nine rahs)
Yale! Yale! Yale!

Along toward 1840 a system of rules had been developed for interclass football, and an umpire was appointed to judge the fair goals. Finally by 1853 three umpires were used, and their selection alone often resulted in a free-for-all fight.

It is to be seen that early Yale football was not a pastime for pantywaists. The freshman class of 1857 devised the first flying wedge. It consisted of 36 of the strongest men in the class! "Teams" of that day, however, numbered anywhere from 75 to 135 men.

So fierce were the football combats that from 1860 to 1870 they were banned by President Woolsey of Yale, but in 1870 the class of '72 resumed the sport and a match was arranged with the class of '73 at Hamilton park. The game was played Nov. 16, 1870, and the juniors won, 6 goals to 0. A second game, for the college championship, ended in a draw.

Meanwhile, in 1869, Princeton and Rutgers had played the first intercollegiate football game in America at New Brunswick, N. J., Rutgers winning, 6 goals to 4. The following Saturday Princeton defeated Rutgers, 6-0.

Columbia got a team together the following year and played both Princeton and Rutgers. There were no games in 1871, but in 1872 Yale turned from interclass football and beat Columbia, 3-0. There were about 30 men on a side in those games.

In 1875 Harvard challenged Yale, carrying to the gridiron a rivalry already famous in rowing. Harvard insisted on playing Rugby rules, and defeated Yale, 4-0. Despite defeat, Yale liked the Rugby game, which permitted a player to pick up the ball and run with it, and in 1876 Yale forced the young football association of the eastern colleges to make rule changes that resulted in the scoring of the modern touchdown.

It was Walter Camp, a great Yale athlete and an expert at the old rough-and-tumble type of football, who invented the touchdown and most of the rules that make football the game it is today.

Camp entered Yale college in 1876 and immediately went out for football. He had speed and a special ability to kick the ball. Play then started from "scrum." The players lined up and attempted to force the ball to their own backfield with their feet. Camp changed this to the scrimmage line we now see on the gridiron.

Walter Camp appeared in five games against Harvard during the six years he played football for Yale. Yale won four games and tied one. Camp's specialty was a drop kick while running at high speed. There were few rules, and players kicked the ball or ran with it whenever they could get close enough. The gridiron (it wasn't known by that name until Camp devised the 10-yard stripes) was 140 yards long and 70 yards wide. There were no pads in the uniforms. The players wore knitted caps and canvas pants and jackets. Some of the jackets had leather handles on them so that a player carrying the ball could be dragged along by his teammates.

But Walter Camp wanted football to be a game of brains and strategy rather than brawn and luck. Upon his graduation he went into business, but his real job was coaching the Yale team. He became the "coach of coaches," the master strategist of the game.

On Oct. 9, 1878, Walter Camp recommended that the number of players on a team be 11 men. He suggested that the ball be flipped back from scrimmage by a center and that the team possessing the ball should keep it as long as it could make consistent gains.

This last innovation just about ruined Camp's reputation. In a Yale-Princeton game following the adoption of the possession rule Yale kept the ball all thru the first half and Princeton all thru the second. No downs system had been arranged. The following year a team lost the ball if it failed to advance five yards. Years later the present 10-yard system was adopted.

Walter Camp was the first to assign particular duties to half backs, the full back, and the quarter back. He also developed great coaches who carried the Yale tradition to other colleges, and thence to the prep schools and high schools of the land. Among them are Amos Alonzo Stagg, for many years at the University of Chicago and now at the College of the Pacific; Dr. Harry Williams, who went to the University of Minnesota and invented the forward pass in 1905; George Woodruff, who coached at the University of Pennsylvania; Jack Owsley, who introduced Yale style of play at the United States naval academy; Howard H. Jones, coach at the University of Southern California; and Albert H. Sharpe, who went to Cornell.

If Walter Camp was a flesh-and-blood hero who brought Yale traditions to scores of schools and thousands of boys, the fictional Frank Merriwell carried the same brand of fight and sportsmanship to millions. Gilbert Patten, who created Merriwell, had never gone to college. He had written many dime novel successes when in 1895 A. G. Smith of Street & Smith, publishers, asked him to do a series especially for boys. It is probable that it was Smith who decided that the hero of the books should go to Yale.

Frank Merriwell had a year at prep school first. Then, wearing the Yale blue, he made the football team every year, won all the Harvard games single-handed, led his class in scholarship, and was elected to the best fraternities. He always proved that it paid to be a gentleman.

There was only one difficulty about Frank. As he leader of his class he naturally had to receive passing marks. There seemed no way to keep him from graduating in four years.

Patten tried a subterfuge. He caused Frank to lose all his money, forcing him from school. But the boys clamored so loudly for Frank Merriwell to return to Yale there was nothing to do but let him go back and graduate. Commencement was the finish for Frank Merriwell.

SEQUEL TO STORY OF HEROISM

(PHOTO IN PICTURE SECTION)

THIS IS A SEQUEL to a story of heroism in the forests of Quebec: Rose Marie Louise de Kerowaille Grenier, whose portrait you may see in today's Picture Section, will be 18 months old on Thursday of next week; and she is a fine, hearty infant with a merry twinkle in her eye. That does not appear dramatic, as sequels go, yet it is; for the drama lies in the fact that there is any Rose Marie at all.

On May 28, 1939, Rose Marie's mother, Mrs. Raoul Grenier, lay near to death in childbirth in a remote cabin on the River Outardes. The cabin was on one of the timber tracts that supply pulpwood which is made into paper for The Chicago Tribune. To save the life of Mme. Grenier an immediate operation was necessary.

That was the word brought to Baie Comeau, a Tribune timber town some miles away. It was whispered to Howard West and Ralph Heimer of Chicago, pilots of The Tribune's twin-motored amphibian plane, who at that hour were in church.

Map showing where Mrs. Grenier was taken by plane.

Pilot West and Co-Pilot Heimer tiptoed from the church and dashed to Comeau bay. There lay the Tribune plane. Lashed by a high wind, the water was too rough for a safe takeoff. West attempted it nevertheless—and failed. Tried a second time and failed. On the third attempt the ship climbed into the air. A few minutes later it landed on the River Outardes among threatening cakes of ice.

On the ice-dotted river only a short run was possible. With the expectant mother aboard, the plane taxied and took off. It climbed sharply, but could not climb as steeply as the situation demanded. Its hull scraped thru treetops along the stream. Spectators gasped. But happily the flying boat cut thru and soared on into the sky. Shortly afterward Pilot West brought it down safely on rough Comeau bay.

At the Baie Comeau hospital a successful Cæsarean operation was performed. Mme. Grenier was safe; so was the baby.

And that is why there is today a Rose Marie Louise de Kerowaille Grenier, a fine, hearty infant with a merry twinkle in her eye.

Looking at Hollywood with John Chapman

Forthright Bob Montgomery—Up to Fame from a Farm

Hollywood.

ABOUT 15 years ago in Greenwich Village, N. Y., a newspaper man gave a housewarming party at his new two-room apartment. He borrowed a punch bowl and poured some gin and oranges into it and invited fellow workers and a few Broadway acquaintances. Miriam Hopkins came and brought with her a nice looking but unemployed young actor.

Somebody started a crap game, and this young actor looked hungrily and miserably at it—hungrily because he was a good crap shooter and miserably because he didn't have any money. Noting his unspoken yearning, Miss Hopkins secretively slipped him a $5 bill. With this entrance fee the nice looking young man cleaned out the game, winning $46. Then, in front of everybody, he counted out his pile of bills and gave to Miss Hopkins $28—half the winnings plus the $5 loan.

Robert Montgomery was that kind of guy, and he still is. He saw no reason for concealing the truth—that he was broke and a woman staked him to some crap money. Miss Hopkins' busted young actor companion no longer shoots craps; he prefers shooting pheasants, and is markedly efficient with a shotgun. He has his own money, too, and quite a bit of it.

Altho not the national box office draw Clark Gable is, he reputedly draws from Metro a few dollars more a week than Gable does. Gable's wage is said to be an odd number like $7,283 a week, while Montgomery's is a handy round number of $7,500. This financial eminence comes partly from seniority; Montgomery has been on the Metro lot 12 years and getting raises all the time. He has made 55 movies for Metro. He just finished his 56th picture, and the first off the home lot—Alfred Hitchcock's comedy, "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," in which Carole Lombard is also a star.

It is hard to picture the smooth, affable, handsome Bob as a farm boy, but that's what he was. He seems to fit without ostentation into the sleek lines of the fabulously expensive and magnificent, intricate gray Lagonda roadster which he brought home from England after he finished driving an ambulance in what used to be France.

His pleasure in the Lagonda, however, does not come from swanking around town in it; he gets it in the garage of his acre-and-a-half Holmby Hills home. He takes the motor apart and puts it back together again. Or he cleans the engine by spraying it with a kerosene mixture in an insect gun, and enjoying it.

Bob Montgomery was not born a farmhand, however. He arrived May 21, 1902, as the child of the late Henry Montgomery, comparatively wealthy vice president of the New York Rubber company. Until he was 16 he and his brother Donald led privileged lives, going to an exclusive school at Pawling, N. Y., and making the usual tour of the contlnent. Then Montgomery Sr. died and the family had practically no more money. It did have a working farm at Pawling, and young Bob helped work it. He got a job in a foundry, was nearly killed when some humorous workmen locked him in a coke oven and hauled him out just short of asphyxiation. He and Donald landed in the machine shops of the New Haven railroad and became engine wipers.

As an ambulance driver.

When Bob had saved enough money he went to New York looking for a better job and became a deckhand on a Standard Oil tanker bound for San Pedro. On shore leave he visited Hollywood, but thought nothing of it. Back in New York, he signed off, met a fellow named Steve Janney, and shared rooms with him. Janney was a would-be playwright who supported himself by playing bits in Broadway shows. Thru Janney, Montgomery got a job as a one-man mob in William Faversham's "The Mask and the Face," in which he played seven different mob parts.

Later he landed with George Cukor's noted Rochester, N. Y., stock company, which helped develop—besides Cukor—such Hollywood luminaries as Bette Davis, Billie Burke, Wallace Ford, Ralph Morgan, and the girl with the $5 bill, Miriam Hopkins.

Broadway success followed and he scored a personal hit in an ill-fated play, "Possession," which Edgar Selwyn produced. Selwyn by that time was ready to succumb to the movies, and he persuaded his skinny and still hungry young actor to try them, too. After a couple of feeble starts the Montgomery film career got going. Playing Greta

Bob with Joan Crawford in "Untamed," a 1929 vintage film.

Garbo's lover in "Inspiration" earned him his stardom. His most recently released films were "The Earl of Chicago," a hit, and the English-made detective drama, "Haunted Honeymoon," which was a miss.

When shooting of the latter film was over Montgomery went to France and became an ambulance driver. He served about six weeks, and then there was no more to do. France was rapidly folding up and there weren't any more ambulances to drive. Those weeks, however, gave him his share of bombing and airplane machine gunning.

Montgomery went to France because of a quiet conviction that he should do something, and he was no rich actor playing at war. He worked manfully as the head of the We the People Committee for Willkie because of a quiet conviction that something should be done. He made innumerable political speeches—but, unlike most Hollywoodians, could not be got into a loud personal political argument.

When he was asked to speak on films at the recent annual Herald Tribune forum in New York he already had a quiet conviction that the films, if they are to progress, need a more inspired industrial leadership. He began his speech by saying: "Any similarity between the motion picture industry and creative art is purely coincidental."

This was a striking paragraph, and the press associations put it on the wires. Hollywood thought that Montgomery was accusing the films, which have done so well by him, of not being an art medium. The short wire service version of the speech failed to make clear a distinction Montgomery had made between the movies as an art and the movies as an industry.

As most grownups have finally come to realize, the motion picture has become a superb art medium and turns out some superbly creative and artistic works, and Montgomery would have been a chump to maintain otherwise. But Hollywood thought he had, and he was all but burned in effigy. After he got back from New York they found out he hadn't been shooting at the movies as a medium but at the bosses for being a brake on progress.

Bob's habit of thinking for himself and sticking by what he thinks does not make him a stormy petrel, nor does it make him a long-haired highbrow. He avoids loud fights, and he has a superlatively good time. When he went to New York for his talk he had one night at the World's fair with two newspaper man friends. They dined at the French casino. Montgomery chatted with the goggle-eyed hat check girl, found that she had never seen the fair, altho she had worked there two seasons.

"Come on, then," he said.

The casino was about to close for the evening, so he and the two newspaper men took the hat check girl on a tour of the amusement zone, and she had the time of any young girl's life.

Montgomery is married to the former Betty Allen, once an actress, and they have two children, Robert and Joan. Their home is quietly elaborate, with terraced gardens and the usual swimming pool and bathhouse. It is colonial outside and in, for Montgomery's real love is New England. He has a farm near Pawling—not the family working farm, but an old place with a lot of hunting acreage which is currently occupied by Mrs. Emlyn Williams, wife of the English actor—and this is the spot which is really home. He gets three months off each year and spends them there. His California house is decorated with paintings of the Pawling place.

His California house is provided with a very workable bar concealed behind sliding panels of the wood-lined library, and a well stocked wine cellar beneath it. He is a very cagey drinker, managing to make a couple of highballs last all night. The book shelves of his living room contain what is conceded to be the most complete collection of Max Beerbohm first editions, manuscripts, and memorabilia, and on the walls are many fine Beerbohm sketches. According to the official bibliography, Montgomery has all but one item of everything Beerbohm ever did—and nobody has ever found that one item. It is something of which only 12 copies were made, and all 12 copies have vanished.

The family intimates are not highbrows—Jack and Phyllis Morgan, James Cagney, Richard Barthelmess, the Lewis Milestones. The Montgomerys entertain well, but have small dinner parties rather than big ones. The usual evening amusement is poker for modest stakes. Bob would like to become a motion picture director, but he still keeps handy his A. B. ticket—the one he got when he was an able seaman on the oil tanker.

Miriam Hopkins, who gave Bob $5 in dice game.

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: Very unfortunately, the undersigned missed your article about the Tschaikowsky film at the World Playhouse, but I understand that it was very favorable. In my opinion there is no one on stage or screen at the present time so lovely as Zarah Leander.

However, I did not intend to bore you with my eulogy, but I should like to know if in the abovementioned article you made any reference to the fact that Zarah Leander is Swedish, not German. You know it, of course, but nobody else seems to. She is a great favorite on the other side of the Atlantic.

I do not expect an answer to this, certainly do not want to bother you, but if you make any further mention in the paper about this film would you say at that time if Hans Stuwe and Marika Rokk also are Swedish? Zarah Leander has a slight accent, and sometimes I thought the other two had also.

I am not Swedish—I am Norwegian. Yours very truly,
JOHANNE FASTING.

Editor's note: Suppose I let you tell the folks the news? Thanks for your interest and your letter.

Dear Miss Tinée: Could you please settle an argument my friend and I have had about the picture "South of Pago Pago"? I say it is pronounced Pango Pango, but he says Pago Pago. We would like to know who is right. Thank you.

READ RESULTS OF 1940 NATIONAL SURVEY CONDUCTED AMONG THOUSANDS OF DENTISTS

DENTISTS SELECT IPANA FOR THEIR PERSONAL DENTIFRICE 2 TO 1 OVER ANY OTHER!

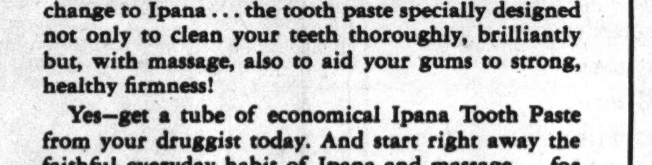
Help yourself to firmer gums, brighter teeth with Ipana and massage... the dentifrice used by twice as many dentists as any other

WHEN you brush your teeth tomorrow morning ask yourself, "Is my dentifrice doing everything for me that a dentifrice can and should do?"

Perhaps it is. But bear this in mind: Of all the dentifrices on sale today, the dentists of America prefer Ipana for their personal use 2 to 1 over any other paste, powder or liquid! That is the remarkable fact disclosed by the 1940 National Survey recently conducted among thousands of dentists from coast to coast.

Why not follow the lead of these dentists who know about the proper care of teeth and gums? Why not change to Ipana... the tooth paste specially designed not only to clean your teeth thoroughly, brilliantly but, with massage, also to aid your gums to strong, healthy firmness!

Yes—get a tube of economical Ipana Tooth Paste from your druggist today. And start right away the faithful everyday habit of Ipana and massage... for the sake of healthier gums, brighter teeth, a more sparkling smile!



HELP GUARD AGAINST "PINK TOOTH BRUSH" WITH IPANA AND MASSAGE

Mrs. R.: "Oh, darn it! There's 'pink' on my tooth brush again today!"

Betsy: "Mommy, teacher says when you see 'pink' on your tooth brush you should see your dentist right away. She says 'pink tooth brush' may not mean serious trouble, but it's a warning just the same."

Dentist: "Yes, Mrs. R., gums as well as teeth must have regular care. For today's soft foods deny them the exercise they need for health. That's why gums often become weak and tender. I suggest daily gum massage."

Mrs. R.: "Thank you, doctor. I'll start using Ipana and massage today."

SEE YOUR DENTIST at least twice a year for a thorough professional cleansing. And when you next visit him, ask his opinion of the value of Ipana and massage to healthier gums, brighter teeth, a more attractive smile.

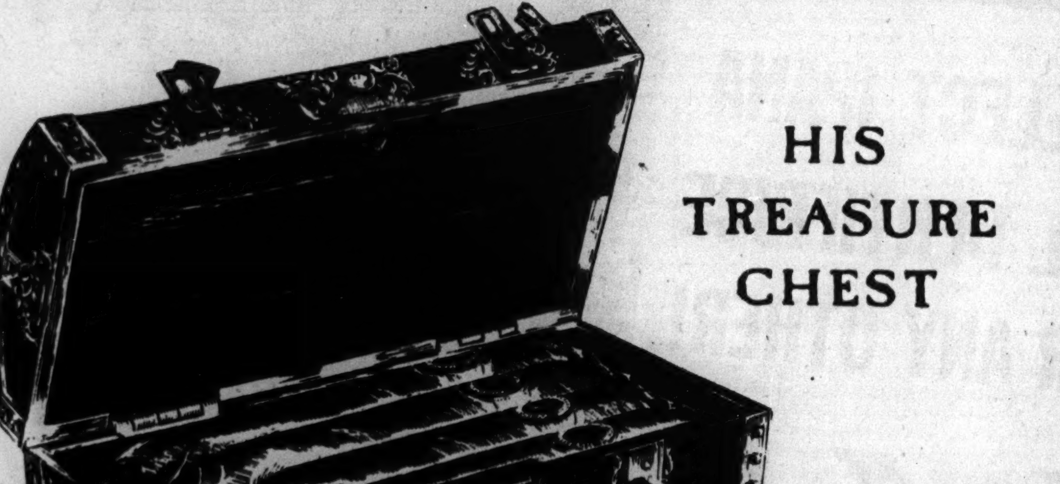
HIS TREASURE CHEST



WHEN wondering what to give a man on his birthday, remember this: the lover of fine tobacco can never have too many good cigars. He knows how to treasure them so they will mellow and improve with time. He loves to share these riches with his cronies and in them he finds peace and satisfaction in his lonely hours. To such a man a box of Dutch Masters will bring rare delight.

PURER ALL-VEGETABLE Spry TRIPLE-CREAMED FOR EASIER MIXING

★ AUNT JENNY'S HOLIDAY RECIPES ★

EGGNOG PIE

1 teaspoon gelatin
1 tablespoon cold water
1 cup milk
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
3 egg yolks, beaten
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
1 baked Spry Pie Shell
Nutmeg

Soak gelatin in cold water. Scald milk in top of double boiler. Combine sugar, cornstarch, and salt and mix thoroughly. Add to scalded milk and cook until thick and smooth; then cook 15 minutes longer, stirring constantly.

Stir a small amount of mixture into beaten egg yolks, return to double boiler, and cook a few minutes longer. Add gelatin. Add butter. Cool. Add vanilla. Fold whipped cream into custard mixture. Pour into baked pie shell. Sprinkle top generously with nutmeg. Garnish with pastry stars or turkeys. Chill pie until ready to serve.

SPRY PIE SHELL

Use for all your one-crust pies

1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
7 tablespoons Spry
3 tablespoons cold water (about)

Sift flour and salt together. Add ½ of Spry and cut in until mixture is as fine as meal. Add remaining Spry and continue cutting until particles are size of a large pea. Sprinkle water gradually over mixture. With a fork, work lightly together until a dough is formed.

Roll dough ⅛-inch thick and prick with a fork (for baked pie shell only). Place dough in 9-inch pan and let relax 5 minutes. Pat with ball of dough. Trim pastry 1-inch larger than pan and turn back edge. Flute rim. Bake in very hot oven (450° F.) 12 to 15 minutes. (Use unbaked pie shell for the Tangy Top Mince Pie.) See what tender, flaky crust Spry gives—so delicate-tasting, too, a perfect partner for the delicate cream filling!

(All measurements in these recipes are level)
(Clip and save these Spry recipes)

TANGY TOP MINCE PIE

3 tablespoons Spry
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
2 egg yolks
1 cup milk
Juice and grated rind of 1 lemon
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1 pint mincemeat (fairly dry)
1 unbaked Spry Pie Shell

Combine Spry, salt, sugar, and flour and mix well. Add egg yolks, milk, lemon juice, and rind and beat with rotary egg beater until smooth. Fold in egg whites.

(If mincemeat is moist, cook it down to a fairly dry consistency.) Spread mincemeat in unbaked pie shell and pour lemon mixture over mincemeat. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) 10 minutes, then reduce heat to 350° F. for 45 to 50 minutes longer.

ORANGE MARMALADE CAKE

½ cup Spry
1 teaspoon salt
Grated rind of one orange
¼ cup orange marmalade
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, unbeaten
2½ teaspoons baking powder
2 cups sifted flour
½ cup water

Blend Spry, salt, rind and marmalade. Add sugar gradually and cream well. (You'll say Spry mixes like magic!) Add eggs, singly, beating well after each addition. Sift baking powder with flour 3 times. Add to creamed mixture, alternately with water, mixing after each addition until smooth.

Pour into 10 x 10 x 2-inch Spry-greased pan. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 40 minutes. Spread Delicate Orange Topping on top and sides of cake. (Notice the true orange flavor in the cake, too. Purer Spry lets it come through in all its tangy richness.)

DELICATE ORANGE TOPPING

1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese
1 tablespoon Spry
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon grated orange rind
2½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
2 tablespoons scalded top milk (about)

Blend cream cheese, Spry, salt and orange rind. Add sugar gradually, beating until smooth and creamy. Add just enough top milk to make a nice spreading consistency. Makes enough frosting to cover top and sides of 10 x 10 x 2-inch cake.

Building for Perfection in Autos

● This is the first article of a series on the subject of notable recent achievements in automobile engineering, designing, and construction.

PRODUCTION of automobiles in America has increased a thousandfold in the last 40 years. In 1900 fewer than 5,000 motor cars were made, but since that time twice has the annual production in the United States and Canada combined exceeded five million cars —in 1929 and in 1937.

Despite this amazing growth in the business of building automobiles, however, the main objects of the men who design and build cars have remained substantially the same. They still seek perfection along the lines of strength, power, maneuverability, safety, comfort, economy, and appearance. Altho the car of today is fundamentally the same as the first road vehicles powered with internal combustion engines, there is little now, so far as appearances go, to remind one of the pioneer types. Moreover, in mechanical features the modern motor car, while still operating on the original basic principles of the early horseless carriage, is, as compared with it, like a modern air liner beside the Wright brothers' first flying machine.

Automobile engineering and designing have attained such a level of excellence that it is difficult to imagine that cars can be improved further. The very nature of progress makes it certain, however, that the cars of the future will be improvements on those of today, in spite of the fact that the present-day vehicle appears to be everything that any one might want at any time. The automotive engineer frankly admits that perfection has not been reached.

Such achievements in car engineering as the self-starter, four-wheel brakes, hydraulic brakes, free wheeling (now discarded), stabilizers, all-metal bodies, safety glass, steering post gear shift levers, and the recent sealed beam headlights and fluid couplings stand out conspicuously and are noted by every one interested in motor cars. But scattered in among these accomplishments are countless others that are merely taken for granted by the public that recognizes the automobile industry as an industry of progress.

In the laboratories and drafting rooms, around the testing blocks, and upon the vast proving grounds of the industry are the best of scientific minds constantly engaged in the job of designing better automobiles. A vast army of engineers, metallurgists, chemists, and others of scientific bent are ever seeking ways to improve the motor car, and the great factories that turn out the cars are constantly being equipped with improved machinery to do their jobs better. These factories, it might be mentioned here, employed in the peak year of 1937 more than a half million workers. But this figure represents only a small part of the complete motor car picture. If we include with the automobile factory workers the tire factory employés, the raw material workers, the fuel and oil refinery workers, the sales and service men, the road builders, and the truck and bus drivers the figure soars to far above six million—all directly or indirectly connected with the automotive industry.

It is not surprising, then, that the automobile industry, which has produced more than 50 billion dollars' worth of cars in 40 years, should go to extremes to improve its products year by year. It is a highly competitive business. Only the most progressive of the manufacturing organizations have survived. The list of cars that have passed into oblivion in the last four decades is many times longer than the list of cars that still are being made. Yet only three years ago a new record in production was set—a record that is certain to be broken many times in the future.

Since the series of articles of which this is the first is not intended to be a history of the automotive industry nor a discussion of things of the past, but rather a review of the very latest of achievements in the motor car field, let us here point out in a general way how automobile engineers themselves classify these accomplishments. They divide them into four main subjects, as follows:

1. Power.
2. Ride and handling.
3. Styling.
4. Structure.

Below: Today.

Power, as the term implies, has to do with what makes the automobile go—the engine. Perhaps in no other part of the car has greater progress been made in recent months than in the engine. Increased horsepower has been achieved with reduced fuel consumption, owing to scientific designing. More flexibility also has been attained. The compression ratio of the cylinder has been increased, and new all-steel gaskets have been perfected to stand the greater pressures. Likewise under the subject of power comes the improvement made in fuels. As motor designers have been working toward perfection in engine performance, chemists of the automotive and the petroleum industries have been matching their attainments with improved fuel. A blending of these two research programs has brought amazing results. Thirdly under the subject of power come the marvelous inventions for the smoother transmission of engine power to the rear wheels of the car. The so-called fluid coupling, now found on cars of several different makes, is one of the great milestones of the automotive industry.

Under the general subject of ride and handling, of course, come the factors of improved comfort for the passenger and greater ease in handling for the driver. In addition there is the factor of greater safety for both. Introduction of ball bearings to the business end of the steering column, in connection with the worm gear, has made for feather-touch steering in those cars that have incorporated the innovation.

Styling takes in both exterior and interior lines and deals largely with the modern tendencies in streamlining, in enlarged passenger and luggage space, and in the use of art metals and plastics.

Structure has to do with the construction of the car as a whole, its use of improved and stronger metals such as steel alloys that can be drawn and welded perfectly, in the safety factor of the turret top, in the substantial reduction in the weight of the vehicle itself, and, lastly, in the new designs, in which the body and the chassis are in effect a single unit.

All of the automobiles of today, featuring improvements that come under the foregoing four general subjects, it should be borne in mind, are far beyond the experimental stage. Every type of car turned out by every manufacturer has been put thru the most exacting of tests before being judged ready for the market. These tests are actual road tests, yet they are made upon roads far more difficult to negotiate than any that the average motorist ever will face.

On the proving grounds of the manufacturers cars are driven at breakneck speed day after day and month after month, over the roughest of roads, up the steepest of grades, thru mud and water and sand, to make certain beyond all question of doubt that they can "take it." When a car finishes with this sort of a test without developing faults the engineers can rest assured that other identical cars are much more than fit to meet the tests of ordinary driving.

In an early issue the subject of improvements in automotive power will be discussed.

"The Desert Song"—An American Favorite

WHEN the Chicago Theater of the Air presented "The Desert Song" over station W-G-N and the Mutual network last night probably only a handful of the listeners knew that the composer, Sigmund Romberg, was educated to be an engineer.

Born in the town of Szegedin, Hungary, he attended both the Vienna Polytechnic Hofschule and the University of Bucharest with the intention of some day becoming a builder of bridges. Yet even in those days the urge to create music was asserting itself in him, for while in Vienna he found time to study composition at its famous conservatory.

Like many of his youthful contemporaries, he emigrated to the United States in 1909 when he was 22 years old. The next few years saw the ascendancy of his desire to compose, and in 1913 his first show, "The Midnight Girl," was produced. By that time he was ready to settle down here and become a citizen, which he promptly did.

Since then Romberg has written more than 70 operettas, musical plays, and revues for stage, screen, and radio. His ability to infuse American style songs with the proper amount of continental flavoring has made several of them outstanding musical hits of the last two decades. "Blossom Time," "The Student Prince," "The New Moon," "Maytime," "My Maryland," and "Nina Rosa," to name the best known, evoke memories of dozens of haunting love songs and rousing choruses.

As popular and famous as any of these creations is "The Desert Song," which first delighted an audience on Nov. 30, 1926, at the Casino theater in New York. Its instantaneous success was due in part to a plot, rich in incident, set against the exotic background of North Africa in the 1920s. There was romantic excitement in the tale of the famous bandit chief, Red Shadow, who abducted the beautiful Margot Bonvalet in time to prevent her marriage to old General Birabeau; and a satisfactorily happy ending was provided when the heroine fell in love with the bandit, none other than the general's son in disguise.

For this story Romberg supplied music so interwoven with it that it became an integral part of the play. The critics were quick to praise the score as a "veritable sandstorm of melody," as "imposing," "throbbing," and "Romberg at his best." One writer said there were "so many tuneful numbers it is hard to pick any one of them out for individual distinction." The test of time, however, has shown that the high points in the music were reached by the beautiful "One Alone" and the rousing "Riff Song."

In the original production Vivienne Segal and Robert Halliday had the leading rôles. Success of the operetta in the east led to the formation of a second company, which opened in Chicago's Great Northern theater shortly afterward. Margot and the Red Shadow in this case were played by Charlotte Lansing and Alexander Gray.

W-G-N's presentation of "The Desert Song" featured Miss Marion Claire, soprano, who stars regularly in the operetta series, and Richard Bonelli, famous operatic and concert baritone, who was the guest artist.

Mr. Bonelli is no newcomer to Chicago or radio audiences. From 1925 to 1931 he was a regular member of the Chicago Civic Opera company. He returned again in 1936 to appear with the resident company at the Civic Opera house, while at other times he has sung frequently on local concert stages.

The baritone was born in Port Byron, N. Y., but when he was 3 his family moved to Syracuse. There he worked his way thru school as a newsboy, circulation clerk of the Syracuse Journal, solicitor of magazine subscriptions, farmer's helper, bank messenger, gardener in a cemetery, auto mechanic, accident insurance investigator, and zinc miner. At Syracuse university, where he held a scholarship, he was advised to make singing his career.

Soon he made his way to Paris, where his list of teachers included the renowned Polish tenor, Jean De Reszke. In 1923 he made his debut at Modena, Italy, and subsequent engagements brought him appearances in Monte Carlo, Milan's great La Scala Opera house, numerous German towns, and Paris. While singing at the Théâtre de la Gaîté-Lyrique in the French capital he met Mary Garden, who engaged him for the Chicago Civic Opera.

His Chicago debut was as the elder Germont in "La Traviata" at the Auditorium theater on Nov. 8, 1925. In his six succeeding seasons with the resident company he sang in 16 different operas, ranging from "The Marriage of Figaro" to "Tristan and Isolde" and "Lucia di Lammermoor" to "Otello."

Mr. Bonelli joined the Metropolitan Opera company in 1932 and has remained with it since then. He has also appeared frequently with the San Francisco Opera company.

Ownership

IT'S FUN to raise and own a dog, even tho a playful, devoted pet brings into a home a wide variety of minor problems mostly involving general care and training. Following are some of the more common problems which come to our desk from dog owners everywhere:

I have a collie pup. How may I keep such a pup from developing a strong doggy odor? What kind of a brush should I use on him? Is it all right to have a dog sleep on cedar shavings?—R. H. S., Lincoln, Ill.

(Brown photo.)

Winning best of breed twice at the Westminster Kennel club shows, this Norwegian elkhound, Champion Martin of the Hollow, has an enviable show record. Martin is owned by Robert P. Koenig. The elkhound belongs to the northern family of dogs, which also includes the keeshond.

(Tribune photo.)

Doc, a young pointer owned by Joseph P. McNulty, is getting a lesson in pointing and steadiness. Note the live pheasant in the hand of James Hogan, the trainer.

If you will brush your puppy with a rather stiff brush that will penetrate to his skin, have him sleep on cedar shavings, and occasionally brush a little pine oil into his coat, we're sure you'll have no trouble in keeping the animal free of doggy odor. Brushing of long-haired dogs is important in keeping them clean and also in stimulating a healthy growth of hair. We have found that cedar shavings give a dog a fresh, fragrant odor at all times.

I have a bull terrier puppy. I have been told that because he chases his tail it is a sign of distemper and that I should have a veterinarian split the tip of his tail and let out some of the blood. Is this true? Many years ago I remember that my father put brimstone (sulphur) in the dog's drinking water. What was that for?—W. H. H., Fort Madison, Ia.

A dog that chases his tail is not going thru that routine because he is infected with distemper. Ignore advice like this, which is 100 per cent buncombe, and rely on your veterinarian, who will tell you that he doesn't split a dog's tail as a treatment for distemper. Some dog owners believe that sulphur in the dog's drinking water is an excellent tonic. The trouble is that sulphur is not soluble in water, so the animal does not assimilate any of it when he takes a drink. As a matter of fact, your collie will absorb about as much "tonic" from insoluble sulphur in its drinking water as it will get from a nice, smooth stone substituted for the sulphur.

I wonder if you can give me any information or booklets on the care and diet for a three-month-old cocker spaniel puppy. I have all your recent dog information as printed in your dog column, but I do not find anything about a cocker spaniel's complete diet and care.—MRS. R. B. L., Oak Park, Ill.

This department does not have any free booklets on a diet for a cocker spaniel puppy. However, a new handbook on dogs prepared by this department, which now is ready for distribution, will give you all the information you require. It will be on sale soon. This new book gives complete information on diets for more than 30 breeds, including the cocker spaniel, many terriers, working breeds, and others. It also will present many practical tips on caring for puppies of all breeds. The feeding information includes diets for puppies about to be weaned and what to feed them at eight weeks, three months, and six months. It also suggests a feeding routine for mature dogs of many breeds.

New Planes for War!

British Buy Best U. S. Types

By WAYNE THOMIS

Drawing of the Focke-Wulf 198—a new pusher fighter that soon will see service over England. It is said to have top speed of better than 400 miles an hour and to be extremely maneuverable. It has the new tricycle landing gear, here completely retracted.

(International Photo Reports.)

One of the new Focke-Wulf "Shark" destroyers, officially designated the FW-187. Here it is just rolling out of inverted flight. The ship is an advance on the Messerschmitt 110 destroyer and is intended for bomber convoy work.

A WHOLE series of new airplanes will be flying and fighting over England, France, and Germany this winter. The Luftwaffe (German air force) has two new types of fighters that have yet to make their appearance in battle, and the British soon are to begin getting delivery on the latest and best types of American aircraft. From an objective point of view the fighting this winter will test the relative merits of German and American aeronautical engineering.

Three American machines in particular should be giving accounts of themselves for the British in short order. These are the Bell Airacuda long-range fighter-bomber; the Bell Airacobra single-engined interceptor fighter, of which the English have ordered 1,800 to date; and the Lockheed twin-engined interceptor fighter, also ordered in large numbers by the British.

Performance figures on all three of these machines are deep military secrets in the United States, but the British know all about them and are printing some of these so-called secrets in their aeronautical publications. From British sources, then, this department has learned the following about these—our latest and best American air corps machines:

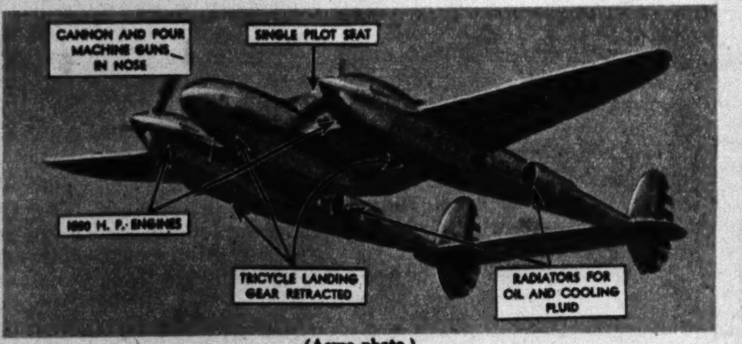
The Lockheed, known to our own air corps as the P-38, is not a 500-mile-an-hour machine, as some of our air corps generals and New Deal rearmament program executives have been hinting. Its maximum speed is 404 miles an hour at 16,000 feet, with the two Allison liquid-cooled motors turning out 1,090 horsepower each. Its cruising speed is 350 miles an hour at the same height.

With 230 gallons of fuel the range at cruising is 1.8 hours. With its permissible overload of fuel—360 gallons—the range is 1,070 miles. It climbs to 16,000 feet in 5.6 minutes. The absolute ceiling is 30,000 feet without turbo superchargers. It takes off and clears a 50-foot obstacle in 735 yards.

In its normal loaded condition weight is 13,500 pounds. In maximum overload it grosses 14,348 pounds. The wing loading is 43.9 pounds—a total never before approached in an air corps plane for regular service. The span is 43 feet 8½ inches.



(Acme photo.)

The Lockheed P-38 in flight. This twin-engined fighter does 404 miles an hour at 16,000 feet with both Allison engines delivering 1,090 horsepower each. England has ordered nearly 1,000 of the ships.

Armament is two .50-caliber and two .30-caliber machine guns and one 23-millimeter Madsen cannon with 50 rounds.

The Bell Airacobra has but one of the Allison 1710 engines, type E, buried deep in the fuselage. The propeller is driven thru a long shaft that extends beneath the cockpit. The British like this machine even better than the Lockheed, because it is faster and much more maneuverable.

They report that the Airacobra—officially the P-39 in our air corps—has a top speed at 16,000 feet of 410 miles an hour. It lands at 68 miles an hour and has perfect stall characteristics, in that stall first occurs at the root, so there is no dropping of a wing. The machine is simple to land with its tricycle gear and takes off with full load in six times its own length, according to pilots who have flown it.

The Airacobra is actually more heavily armed than the Lockheed. For British purposes the Airacobra will have four .50-caliber machine guns and a Colt 37-mm. cannon firing from the nose. The cannon fires thru the center of the propeller hub. There will be two .30-caliber Browning guns in each wing, giving a total armament of eight machine guns and a cannon.

With this armament the range is reduced to 1.7 hours on 200 gallons of fuel. The plane weighs just over 7,000 pounds and has a wing loading — and this is the key to maneuverability — of 28 pounds per square foot. The latest British and German machines are into the late 30s, and the Lockheed, remember, is 43.9 pounds. You cannot turn and maneuver a plane that has a high wing loading. It simply skids and mushes instead of turning.

The Airacuda, originally revealed as a heavily armed "destroyer," has now become a long-range bomber. This machine has a top speed of 318 miles an hour at 16,000 feet—again using the Allison 1710 E liquid-cooled engines, installed as pushers. Its range is 4,000 miles, or 14 hours at 280 miles an hour. With its two 37-mm. cannon firing forward and three .50-caliber guns covering its tail, it can be used as a bomber "destroyer" when required. The bomb load is 2,000 pounds. The latest types of Airacudas have come out with tricycle landing gears, as predicted in this department two years ago. A squadron of these ships will be in England early next spring.

Germany's new fighter types are both designs of the great Focke-Wulf Flugzeugbau of Bremen and Johannisthal, Germany. One is a single-seater pusher — the FW-198 — and the other—the FW-187—is a so-called twin-engined destroyer, similar in many details to the Messerschmitt 110. Both are powered with the latest Junkers 211E or the Daimler-Benz 603 engines, described in this department recently. They deliver either 1,500 or 1,600 horsepower each, depending on supercharging.

The 187 has a top speed of 400 miles an hour (the first types, with 1,150 horsepower, did 360 miles an hour), a maximum range at reduced cruising speed of 1,600 miles, and an initial rate of climb of 3,500 feet a minute. It climbs to 19,000 feet in 5.8 minutes and has an absolute ceiling of 38,000 feet, according to the latest German technical publications.

This machine is armed with either six .303 light machine guns or four .50-caliber machine guns, plus two 20-millimeter cannon that are standard equipment. All this armament is carried in the nose section, free from the propellers. The tail is protected by a single gun. This machine is fully aerobatic and can be snap and slow rolled, looped, dived to more than 550 miles an hour, and will withstand the utmost in rough treatment. It is an advance on the Messerschmitt's performance.

The FW-198 is the most radical of Germany's new designs, and it will recall some of the war of 1914-'18's pusher fighters —notably the Vickers Gun-Bus, a pusher biplane with a forward-firing machine gun. The lines of the FW-198 are best shown in the illustration at the top of the page. The engine is the 1,600-horsepower Junkers 211E. The landing gear is tricycle and completely retractile. The propeller is driven by a shaft 4½ feet long, somewhat like the Airacobra.

Dimensions of the 198 are: Span, 41 feet; length, 31½ feet. It weighs 7,188 pounds gross. Speed at 19,000 feet is 415 miles an hour with the large engine. With the smaller 1,150 Junkers engine the speed is 373 miles an hour at the same height. Range is 1.5 hours at maximum speed. The initial rate of climb is 3,000 feet a minute, and the ceiling is said to be 37,000 feet.

Armament is almost identical with that of the 187. The cannon on the 198 are installed in the wings in the line of the tail booms, as indicated.

Know Your Camera

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.

(Managing Editor, Popular Photography Magazine.)

The Secret of Indoor Lighting

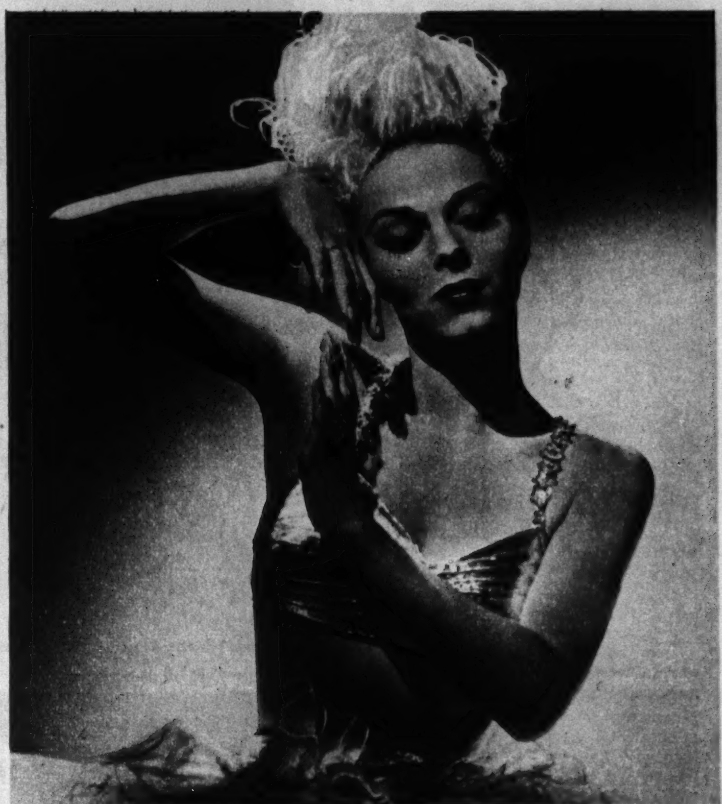
DON'T LAY your camera aside, now that the days are becoming short and the weather mostly unpleasant. Concentrate on indoor picture taking and find out for yourself how simple it is to get good results with the aid of artificial light.

In the first place, you can take indoor pictures in artificial light with any camera, even the most primitive box camera. You can speed up your exposures by using fast film and strong light sources. The light employed can come from ordinary electric bulbs, from photoflood bulbs, or from flash bulbs. Ordinary Mazda bulbs give a relatively weak light and will force you to make long exposures. Photofloods furnish an intense illumination at low cost.



Heavy shadows, cast by a strong light above and to the right of the model, give this picture a dramatic effect. An auxiliary light was cast on the background to outline the figure. Reflected light from the background brings out the texture of the skirt. (Posed by Zorina.)

(Posed by June Lang.)

Flat front lighting leaves the face without a single shadow in this portrait. To ligth the face and the figure from all sides, as was done here, several lights must be used and carefully balanced.

The efficiency of any lamp is increased several times by using it in a reflector. Metal reflectors with clamps can be purchased for 85 cents and up. Silver-coated paper reflectors are cheaper. An outfit consisting of two reflectors and two photoflood bulbs can be acquired for less than a dollar.

The main difference in lighting setups is the number of lights you use. For the majority of effects you will not need more than two lights. But first try illuminating your set with only a single light. Start out by placing this light next to your camera, slightly above the position of the lens. This will give your subject a flat, practically shadowless illumination. It is a safe, sure-fire setup which will get you a picture every time, provided your exposure was right—but the picture is apt to be "flat," lacking depth, modeling, contrast, "guts."

The moment you move your light from the above position it will begin to cast shadows. If properly placed they are the life of the picture, because they give it all the modeling. Study these shadows by raising and lowering your single lamp and by carrying it around your subject. Side lighting will cast the strongest shadows, which may be just the thing you want in certain pictures, while in the case of portraits they are usually objectionable. Lighting from a low angle often gives a stagey effect, while placing the bulb high and to one side can simulate sunlight. Try to light your subject from behind, surrounding it with a halo of light; then let all the light fall only in the background behind your subject, creating a dark silhouette against a light back drop.

A single light is not only sufficient for taking many different types of pictures; it is the ideal lighting for certain picture types. For others, however, it is definitely not suitable. Wherever you want to avoid harsh shadows, and wherever you want to show detail even in the shaded portions of your picture, you must use two or more lights. But even in such cases one of the lights should dominate the picture, while the other is used to fill in the shadows. You will get the most pleasing effects if your picture shows light coming from one definite direction. The spectator should not become aware of the fact that one or more auxiliary lights have been used.

Assuming that you work with two lights, you can easily create this effect by moving your main light closer to the subject or by using a stronger bulb for your main light source. Light falls off rapidly with increasing distance, so that it is simple to tone down your fill-in lights. This is necessary for two reasons; first, you want to avoid cross shadows in the picture, and, second, you would flatten out the picture by lighting the subject equally strongly from all sides.

Balancing your lights can become quite involved if you take pictures for special purposes. In a fashion shot, for instance, the photographer often uses several floods to bring out detail in dark clothing, and in addition to these he may use a couple of spotlights to put a highlight on the hair of his model, to separate her from the background, to make her jewelry sparkle, or to give the material of her dress the proper sheen.

But the amateur will rarely have to contend with such problems. Two lights in reflectors are sufficient to take an endless variety of pictures.

Gems of American Eloquence

● American eloquence has played an important part in the history of our country. From a long list of famous speeches The Tribune is selecting gems of American eloquence which are being presented in this, the Graphic Section, every Sunday. The content of these speeches is important both historically and politically. Persons learning to speak in public will find in them helpful lessons. Speakers and writers can learn a great deal from studying their style. This is the seventy-sixth of the series.

ELIPHALET NOTT, one of the most eloquent American clergymen of his time, was born in Ashford, Conn., June 25, 1773. Late in 1804 he was elected to the presidency of Union college, Schenectady, N. Y., a position which he held until his death on Jan. 29, 1866. It was while he was minister of the First Presbyterian church of Albany, N. Y., that he preached his memorable sermon on the death of Alexander Hamilton, which remains today one of the most brilliant specimens of American pulpit oratory. An excerpt from this sermon, entitled "How Are the Mighty Fallen," follows:

"'How are the mighty fallen!' Fallen before the desolating hand of death. Alas! the ruins of the tomb! The ruins of the tomb are an emblem of the ruins of the world; when not an individual, but a universe, already marred by sin and hastening to dissolution, shall agonize and die! Directing your thoughts from the one, fix them for a moment on the other. Anticipate the concluding scene, the final catastrophe of nature, when the sign of the Son of Man shall be seen in heaven; when the Son of Man Himself shall appear in the glory of His Father and send forth judgment unto victory. The fiery desolation envelops towns, palaces, and fortresses; the heavens pass away! the earth melts! and all those magnificent productions of art which ages heaped on ages have reared up are in one awful day reduced to ashes.

ELIPHALET NOTT

"Against the ruins of that day, as well as the ruins of the tomb which precede it, the gospel, in the cross of its great High Priest, offers you all a sanctuary; a sanctuary secure and abiding; a sanctuary which no lapse of time nor change of circumstances can destroy. No; neither life nor death. No; neither principalities nor powers.

"Everything else is fugitive; everything else is mutable; everything else will fail you. But this, the citadel of the Christian's hopes, will never fail you. Its base is adamant. It is cemented with the richest blood. The ransomed of the Lord crowd its portals. Embosomed in the dust which it incloses, the bodies of the redeemed 'rest in hope.' On its top dwells the church of the firstborn, who in delightful response with the angels of light chant redeeming love. Against this citadel the tempest beats, and around it the storm rages and spends its force in vain. Immortal in its nature and incapable of change, it stands, and stands firm, amidst the ruins of a moldering world, and endures forever.

"Thither fly, ye prisoners of hope!—that when earth, air, elements shall have passed away, secure of existence and felicity, you may join with saints in glory to perpetuate the song which lingered on the faltering tongue of Hamilton, 'Grace—rich grace.'

"God grant us this honor. Then shall the measure of our joy be full, and to His name shall be the glory in Christ."

Here are typical paragraphs from a powerful sermon, rich in the beauty of words and adroitly assembled so as to lend itself to eloquent delivery—a sermon intended to make men think deeply. Note how this famous churchman holds out the guarantee of hope everlasting, while at the same time he paints the dismal scene of the judgment day. As an orator Eliphalet Nott had a style and manner peculiarly his own.

A Cranberry Cake Also Described

By MARY MEADE

INEXPENSIVE, easy to make, and very good to eat are the two fruity treats in the pictures. Prune rolls are made from a scone dough—each pitted prune is rolled up in a strip of dough and baked. Cooked apricots may be used instead of prunes, for variety. You've no idea how good these rolls are.

The cake is made from a simple recipe and is baked with its own cranberry and nut topping.

LEMON CRANBERRY CAKE
(Eight-inch square pan)

- 1/4 cup shortening
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 3/4 cup milk
- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon lemon extract

Cream shortening and add sugar gradually. Beat until light and fluffy. Beat in the egg thoroly. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add in alternate portions with milk to the first mixture. Beat after each addition until the batter is smooth. Add flavoring. Pour batter into greased eight-inch square cake pan and spread topping over the cake.

CRANBERRY TOPPING—Mix 3 tablespoons sugar with 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind. Add 1/4 teaspoon each of cinnamon and nutmeg and 1/3 cup broken walnut meats. Stir in 2/3 cup canned jellied cranberry sauce, broken in small pieces. Spread on cake and bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes.

The recipe for the prune rolls has been mimeographed for readers who may wish copies. A good recipe for buttermilk or sour milk doughnuts is included with the prune rolls. Both recipes may be obtained by writing to this department and inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope to facilitate mailing.

This cake is baked with its own cranberry-nut frosting.

Hundreds of women baked pies and compared—

FLAKIER PASTRY WITH CRISCO! "THE PIE CRUST I MADE WITH CRISCO IN YOUR TEST WAS BY FAR THE FLAKIEST I EVER MADE. MY FAMILY SAID SO, TOO!" Mrs. W. Bardon, of Dorchester, Mass., who tested "Sure-Mix" Crisco against her usual shortening

SUCH TENDER CRUST! "I GOT SUCH LOVELY TENDER CRUST WITH CRISCO. I LIKE IT BETTER THAN ANY SHORTENING I EVER USED!" Mrs. Stanley I. Dale, of St. Joseph, Missouri, one of the women in 20 cities who made the Crisco test

BETTER-TASTING! "WHAT DE-LICIOUS PIE! HONEST, MOM, YOU NEVER MADE SUCH YUMMY CRUST BEFORE. SO NICE AND BROWN AND TENDER," said Marilyn Mayfield, of San Francisco, when her mother made the Crisco test

"Sure-Mix" CRISCO wins 4 to 1 for making FLAKIER PIES!

So easy to get tender, delicate-tasting pie crust, too . . . Try Crisco—it's different!

If your pie crust hasn't been as flaky as you'd like—take heart and try again. But this time use New "Sure-Mix" Crisco.

Just listen to other women's true experiences . . . Hundreds of housewives in 20 cities recently tested Crisco and reported how tender their pies were—and flakier!

Crisco pies win by 4 to 1

These housewives were using other well-known shortenings when independent investigators rang their doorbells and asked them to test Crisco in their own recipes.

Here's how their Crisco pies turned out—marvelously! Yes, in reporting their choice, housewives voted 4 to 1 for Crisco over all other shortenings combined. Women said 4 to 1: "Crisco pastry is flakier"—and their families said, "Crisco pie crust tastes better!"

By the same 4-to-1 vote Crisco was preferred for making lighter cakes and crisp, better-tasting fried foods.

"Sure-Mix" Crisco is different!

A patented discovery makes New Crisco different from any other home shortening we know of. And no shortening we know of comes to you purer, fresher, creamier than all-vegetable Crisco. Buy Crisco today—get simply grand "good eats"!

HONEY PUMPKIN PIE

- 1/4 cup granulated sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon ginger
- 1/4 teaspoon cloves
- 1 1/2 cups canned pumpkin
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 cup evaporated milk
- 1/3 cup water
- 1/4 cup strained honey

Blend sugar, salt, spices. Combine with pumpkin. Stir in eggs. Add milk, water and honey. Beat thoroughly. Line pie pan with Crisco pastry. Pour in mixture. Bake in moderately hot oven (375° F.) an hour or until filling sets. Remove from oven; dribble 1 tablespoon honey over top.

CRISCO PIE CRUST

- 1 1/2 cups flour
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup Crisco
- 2 to 3 tablespoons water

Sift flour with salt. Cut in Crisco till mixture resembles coarse cornmeal. Stir in water until all the dry mixture is collected into a ball. Roll out 1/8" thick. Lay pastry loosely in pie pan—then gently press to the sides to prevent air pockets forming.

All Measurements Level

CRISCO CAKES WIN 4 TO 1, TOO!

They're LIGHTER! "Sure-Mix" Crisco cakes are consistently up to 15% higher and lighter (depending on type of cake) than cakes made of any other home shortening we know of!

TRY CRISCO-FRIED FOODS. THEY'RE DIGESTIBLE!

Doctors Say: In answer to a question sent to doctors by a leading medical publication, 2 out of 3 doctors who replied called specific attention to Crisco's digestibility.

Flowers WILL Tell the World of Your Glamor

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate, Inc.)

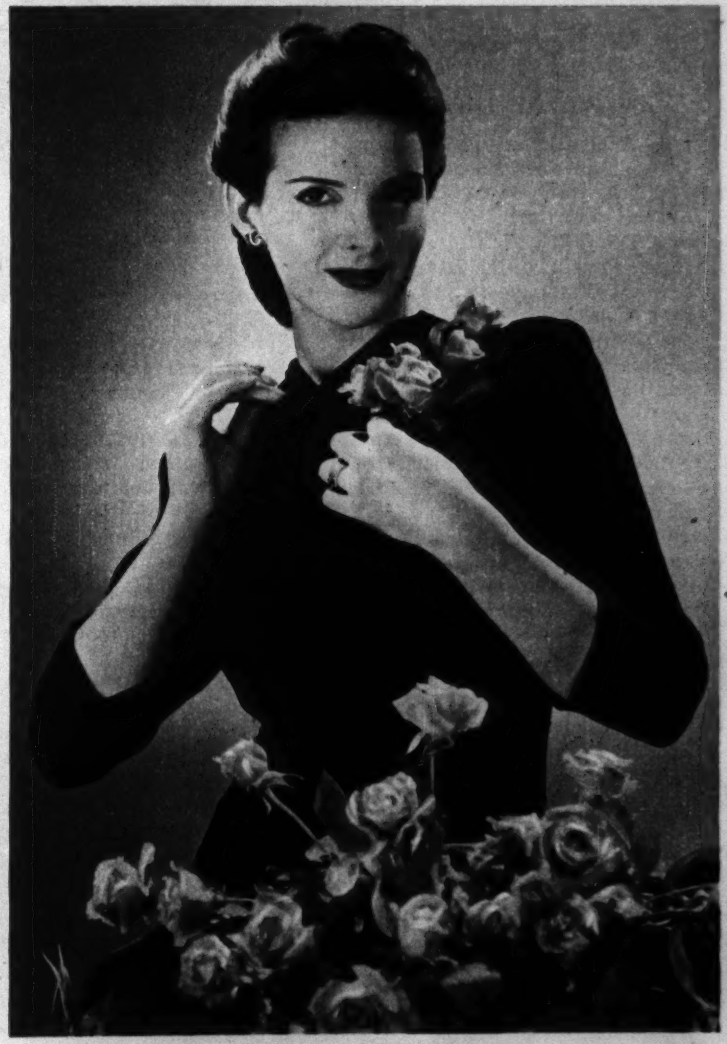
ATTENDING a perfectly charming party to which guests were encouraged to come wearing a bit of original floral decoration, we were reimpressed with the feminine appeal of the flower accessory touch. One woman in particular, never before alluded to as a special type of charmer, accomplished a considerable personality miracle with a new hair-do into which was tucked a clever flower arrangement. She was tall, dark, and formerly a slightly formidable person, with her reputation for brains and starkly sophisticated dressing. Presto! She was a woman with a woman's allure.

We don't say that all women react that effectively under the floral touch. We are just telling of one that did. Perhaps it was the sheer gayety of the flower-embossed hair-do that cast a glow over the woman's countenance and transported her into a lighter mood. In any event she was a success, and knew it, that evening.

Exotic red camellias worn with an evening hat of feathers form one of the flattering new 1940 headdresses.

It gave us an idea, anyway, and this season and the winter one are going to see an emphasis attached to flowers as an accessory for charming women.

Petite women can add dramatic inches to their height with a tiara arrangement of flowers. For the triangular face a halo of fragrant blossoms is a flattering frame. Orchids, rubum lilies, and gardenias are effective for this type of headdress. A full, round face can achieve a becoming effect of slimness if its fair owner fastens her flowers as high as possible behind the center of her pompadour. Florists are well versed nowadays in these feminine wiles and will make suggestions if you give them a chance. If you are original, concoct your own little floral numbers, and believe that flowers can be even more flattering than precious jewels and just as dramatic when arranged with an eye to color contrast and symmetry.



Don't arrange cut flowers haphazardly. Deep red roses, as a home decoration and a corsage, are a dramatic foil for the brunette type.

This season new styles in fresh flowers take their inspiration from precious jewelry and are made up in beguiling necklaces and bracelets for gala party occasions. The vogue for patriotic design has an echo in flower arrangements which combine motifs with red, white, and blue blossoms. Taking their cue from Regency belles, 1940-'41 glamor girls are pinning their fresh flowers on their muffs. Another 19th century recipe for coquetry that's popular is the combination of fresh flowers and feathers.

When you plan something special in your home and a special appearance for yourself therein, don't arrange cut flowers or plants haphazardly. Use their beauty as a flattering background that compliments your own particular style of good looks. Pink gladioli, for instance, provide a charming setting for the woman with white or gray hair. White and purple blooms are equally flattering to the older woman. Deep red roses are a dramatic foil for the brunette type, while golden chrysanthemums usually provide first aid glamor to the one whose hair has reddish tones, and pastel flowers may create the most beguiling background for a fragile blonde type.

THEY GO TO OUR CHURCH

By W. E. Hill

Pop stayed home this Sunday, promising to listen in on one of the radio services. He does, but switches to a news broadcast and ends up with a band concert.

See all, hear all. Mother and daughter who never miss a trick. They can tell you just who was at church, who wasn't and why, what was worn and whether it was worn last Sunday.

The kindly lady who insists that the strange young man share her hymnal. The young man can't carry a tune, but he will have to pretend to sing seven verses of "Rock of Ages."

Mrs. Moss and Mrs. Troop are pillars of the church. Mrs. Moss (center) is an "organizer," being very bossy. She is invaluable when there is a supper or a fair or a drive. Mrs. Troop is very critical of sermons, often complaining that there was nothing "you could really get hold of."

The children who are vitally interested in the occupants of the pew behind.

Showing what the minister, three-quarters through his sermon and just getting into his stride, has to face from the pulpit.

The people who leave before the end of the service, feeling they've done their duty by staying for the collection. There is a lot of rummaging under the pew for stray rubbers, handbags, gloves and fur pieces.

Organist and soloist on the outs. He was late starting for church and then he had to go back for his "Gems for the Organ," so there was no time to rehearse with her before service as he had promised to do. She's being very frosty about it.

The collection. Margie can't find her ten cents and is embarrassed to death. The plate passer just can't take a hint
